Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail, which arrived here about two days after time, are—from Bombay, June 14; Agra and Madras, June 12; Calcutta, June 11. The delay was partly owing to the mails from Brindisi having missed the train at Modane, on the French side of the Tunnel.

SIR PHILIP WODEHOUSE, the new Governor of Bombay, left the capital for Poonah on the 14th June, after having got through a fair amount of work in the way of inspecting all the chief lions of Bombay. He also appears to have given a gracious answer to a deputation headed by Mr. Dadhabai Nauroji, which brought up the Ratepayers' Memorial mentioned in our Summary for June 24. The principle of the Municipal Bill had been settled, he said, before his arrival, but he held out hopes of putting the Bill into a more satisfactory shape, and of giving the ratepayers a fair trial in the control of their own finances.

ON Tuesday, the 11th June, the van of the long expected monsoon burst over Bombay in heavy rain, accompanied with thunder and lightning, which brought a welcome if transient relief from the almost unbearable heat of the previous week. The main body of the monsoon was still to show itself, but its coming was hourly expected.

THE Viceregal Council did some business at Simlah on the 6th June. Mr. Hobhouse, the new Law Member, introduced and carried through a Bill exempting the Straits Settlements from the provisions of the Indian Emigration Act of 1871. Bills for legalising repayment of money placed in District Saving's Banks in the names of minors, and for levying duty on certain spirits made in British Burmah, were introduced by Sir R. Temple. Sir J. Strachey was added to the Select Committee on Bills to consolidate and amend various laws, especially those concerning the marriages of Christians, and the manufacture and sale of arms. A Bill amending the law of appeals to the Privy Council was referred to a Select Committee. Soon after the meeting of Council the Viceroy went off to indulge in fly-fishing at a place called Pillon, sixteen miles from Simlah. That summer capital has abandoned itself to its usual round of balls, picnics, and other gaieties.

THE appointment of Mr. Egerton, Financial Commissioner in the Punjab, to a seat in the Legislative Council, is generally read in the light of a practical endorsement to the popular belief that Lord Northbrook means to dispense with the services of any other finance minister than himself, taking Mr. Egerton for his chief adviser in that line. What in that case will he do with Sir R. Temple, who may object to being shunted before his time?

THE Indian Government has just taken another step towards cutting its close connection with the Presidency Banks. It has notified its intention of withdrawing from all share in the management of the Bengal and Madras Banks—a step some time since taken with regard to Bombay; and in due time it proposes to get rid of all its money shares in the three banks. The Treasury balances however will not be removed from the charge of their present keepers.

LADY MAYO has informed the Calcutta Committee on the Mayo Memorial of her preference for an equestrian statue of her late husband, since the choice has been left with herself.

FROM Madras we learn that the Rev. H. Bower has been presented by the Archdeacon with the degree of D.D., in honour of the service he had rendered the Church in Southern India by his recent translation of the Bible into Tamil. This great work, entrusted to him by the missionaries in Southern India, he completed last year after fourteen years of diligent labour. From a letter of the Bishop of Madras to Mr. Bower, it appears that the degree has been bestowed upon him with the full sanction of the Archbishop of Canterbury, in compliance with the Bishop's own request. In the Bishop's absence from Madras, his Archdeacon went through the needful ceremonies. Mr. Bower has also completed his revised translation of the Prayer-book.

THE Reports of Mr. Pogson, the Government Astronomer, and of Mr. Dalrymple, the Master Attendant at Madras, on the late cyclone are strangely at variance with each other. The latter, on leaving the beach at 6 P.M. of the 1st May, seems to have shared the opinion of his sailor friends on the spot that the weather was clearing up and the wind abating. At 10 P.M. however appearances changed for the worse, and at midnight the usual warning to prepare for a gale was signalled. At daylight the signal was made by flag to cut or slip cables. The reason why no ships were ordered to sea on the 1st, after the usual warning had been sent round, was that in 1865, out of thirty-four ships sent to sea by Mr. Dalrymple's orders, only eight came back uninjured, while two had foundered and six been abandoned. "To send the ships"—he adds—"which were riding safely and easily at their anchors, to sea, to drift into the vortex of the gale, would have been in my opinion a mistaken measure." Mr. Pogson, on the other hand, declares that the signs of coming danger had been growing more and more marked from the 29th April to the 1st May, and he "can scarcely comprehend the hardihood of any captain, with or without orders, who had any reliance on the seaworthiness of his ship and the slightest idea of a Madras cyclone, remaining in the roads under such fearful odds." He made sure that every ship would have left the roads before sunset, by doing which and running southward they might all have escaped the cyclone before it turned landwards. Until 3.30 A.M. of the 2nd it was "quite possible for any seaworthy well-prepared vessel to run off before the wind and be saved." According to the Master Attendant, to have done so would have been running into the very teeth of the hurricane coming up from the southward, whereas according to Mr. Pogson the centre of the cyclone was still out at sea at 8.30 A.M. of the 2nd, though fast nearing the land.

MR. BREEKS, whose death from abscess of the liver is reported this week, has been succeeded as Commissioner of the Nilgherries by Mr. Cockerell, at that time judge of Nellore. Mr. Harrison, B.A., has been made Principal of the new College at Allahabad, the chairs of English and Mathematics being filled respectively by Mr. W. Wright and Mr. J. Elliot. Colonel G. Johnson, R.A., is named as likely to succeed General Huyshe as Inspector-General of Artillery. Major-General Bouchier has applied to retire on the increased rate of pension.

ACCORDING to recent telegrams from Calcutta the question of a camp of exercise in the Punjab has been discussed by the Indian Government, but not as yet to any definite conclusion. It is also asserted that the Bank of Bengal will deliver its half-yearly statement on Thursday, July 11, when a dividend of 12 per cent., with a good balance carried forward, will in all likelihood be announced.

FROM another telegram of July 3 we learn that the Government is said to have received some new and unexpected information, which tends to exonerate Mr. Dickson to a great extent from the charge of acting without authority in the purchase of bills on London. The whole of this mysterious affair is undergoing inquiry on the part of Lord Northbrook, but nothing definite has hitherto been brought out.

THE telegraph announces stormy weather in the Bay of Bengal. A cyclone is supposed to have travelled across the bay from east to west. One ship at any rate, the Omaha from Liverpool, encountered a dreadful hurricane off the northern coast, and was totally wrecked at Saugor. Seven of the crew were drowned. Three other disabled ships were seen by the captain. On the 3rd July the storm was abating, and on the 4th a good many vessels were reported off Saugor.

ANOTHER telegram informs us that two gun-boats have been despatched from the Bombay side to Basrah, where some pirates have been making an attack on the steamer Cashmere.

THE telegraph lands us in a fresh puzzle regarding the opinions really expressed by the Patiala Rajah on Mr. Cowan's treatment of his Kuka prisoners. The other day we were flatly assured that his Highness had not committed himself to any formal expression of sympathy with Mr. Cowan. In fact he was supposed to have ranged himself on the side of the Indian Government in this matter. Now however we learn that the letter written by his Highness "immediately after and approving the Kuka executions" has been published. We are not surprised to hear that its authenticity has been publicly disputed; but it is a little surprising to find the letter declared authentic by the same Times correspondent who, a few weeks ago, reported the Maharajah's own disavowal of his alleged dissent from the opinion of the Indian Government. This authentic letter moreover "contains nothing not previously known." Putting this and that together, we may perhaps conclude that the Maharaja spoke in haste and unsaid his words at leisure, that having, at first, like some of his contemporaries, avowed his satisfaction at Mr. Cowan's proceedings, he afterwards on mature reflection came round to the opinion expressed by the Indian Government.

SCHEMES for promoting the retirement of unemployed field-officers appear to be almost as plentiful as flies at Delhi. Some of them are still, we believe, under consideration at the India Office. We referred to one in particular a few weeks ago. Another has just been put forward by the Times of India as "the supposed official scheme" which has found most favour with the Indian Council. Instead of Colonel's allowances or £1,125 a-year; a pension of £1,000 a-year is to be offered to all who have completed thirty-eight years' service. For shorter terms of service the same scale of pension, less £40 a-year for each year under the thirty-eight, is held out, so that a field-officer of thirty years' service would retire on a pension of £680 a-year. This scheme is hardly so fair, we think, to the officers concerned as that sketched in our Summary for June 17, which gave officers of thirty-eight years' service £1,125 and of thirty years' service about £900 a-year, less the difference in money value between life in India and life at home. Perhaps however the apparent difference between the two schemes does represent the difference, as reckoned by the India Office actuaries, between the relative values of life in either country. According to our contemporary the years of service in each case will include all the time between an officer's first commission, and the day of his retirement, no matter how much of it was spent on leave. Nothing on the other hand is said about bonus payments, although a round sum down of even a few hundreds would induce many an old officer to hasten his final departure from the scene of his present inaction.

THE evils of a separate gauge for the great military line from the mouth of the Indus to Peshawur are strongly and fairly pointed out by the same experienced critic. Under any circumstances the cost of separate rolling-stock for the new gauge would be very heavy; but in the case of a military line from the sea to the Punjab Frontier it will absorb any saving due to cheaper construction. The amount of stock needed for the use of large bodies of troops on that line would be "something enormous." It would take twice as long a train to move the same number of men with all their equipment on the narrow as on the broad gauge, and the stock maintained for prompt action on emergencies would have to be proportionally far greater on a single than a double line of rails. With a uniform gauge on the other hand the rolling-stock of every line would be equally available for any political or military purpose. In short, says Mr. Bidder, the narrow gauge "presents no advantages which should lead to its preference in any case over the broad gauge of India, whereas the wider gauge has most important advantages over the narrower." As for cheapness of construction, he quotes a case of an English railway twenty-two miles long on the standard gauge of this country, which with its light rails and engines has cost little more than £4,000 a mile.

MR. HAWKSHAW for his part ventures to predict that, if the new gauge comes to be applied to the lines in question, the Indian Government will some day be compelled to "expend more money to remedy the evil than they can ever save by introducing it." He too considers the mere break of gauge as a fatal objection to the Government schemes, especially from the military and strategic point of view. Taking the case of a proposed extension 200 miles long, he would reckon the first saving effected by a narrow gauge at only £112,000, all of which might be swallowed up in the cost of unloading and loading at the break of gauge, while the indirect commercial loss and inconvenience would be very great. With a light railway on the present gauge of five feet six inches he would reckon upon saving £1,250 a mile in first cost, as compared with the £1,810 a mile saved by the narrow gauge. Even with regard to the sharper curves claimed for the metre-gauge, Mr. Hawkshaw will hardly yield the palm to one gauge over another even in hilly countries, while elsewhere of course sharp curves would be wholly out of place. And whatever gauge may be adopted, "the slopes of cuttings and embankments, the side ditches, walls and fences, are a constant quantity." In low slopes and cuttings the highest saving would be only about 8 per cent., a proportion always decreasing as the works grow heavier. Bridges also must be made of a certain strength, whatever be the gauge. There would be no saving on stations and a decided loss on sidings. The carriages would be smaller but more numerous. The saving on land, which in India costs little, would be represented by a strip of two feet along the whole line, or about a quarter of an acre per mile.

MR. FOWLER gives a detailed estimate of the comparative cost of a light railway on the broad gauge from Kotree to Mooltan and from Lahore to Peshawar, and of a narrow gauge railway from Peshawar down to Kurrachee. What with altering the gauge for 319 miles of that distance and providing rolling-stock on the new line both for ordinary and special purposes, he brings the whole cost of the narrow-gauge line up to more than 5½ millions, or about £18,000 more than the whole cost of extending and completing the present line on the light principle up to Peshawar. This includes about £327,000 for the cost of laying a third rail on the Kotree and Mooltan sections, and £320,700 for the provision of adequate rolling-stock. The general accuracy of these estimates seems attested by the offer which another engineer, Mr. Lee Smith, actually laid before the India Office some months ago, to complete in four years a light railway of the standard gauge from Kurrachee to Peshawar, for "somewhat less than Government is preparing to expend on the narrow gauge." He also engaged to maintain the line in working order for three years more, and in a subsequent letter to the India Office he spoke of several "contractors of the highest position" who had pledged themselves to carry out his proposals to the letter, if they might make the attempt. We are sorry to find that these proposals, backed as they are by Mr. Turnbull, formerly chief engineer of the East Indian Railway, and strengthened by the clear opinions of the traffic-managers on three of the great English lines as to the futility of altering the gauge on the lines in question, have since fallen to the ground. Mr. Lee Smith's prayer for a committee to report upon his scheme was finally rejected on the 27th May, the India Office having positively declined to reconsider the question of gauge "except in communication with the Government of India," which has already committed itself to the views expressed by General Strachey, Colonel Dickens, and Mr. Rendle, in the teeth of a large body of opinion gathered from gentlemen of far wider practical converseance with the question at issue.

MR. W. P. ANDREW needs no excuse for the important pamphlet just issued by him from the press of Messrs. King and Co., on the evils of the threatened break of gauge on Indian Railways. A pertinent preface of several pages introduces the reports of four eminent engineers, Messrs. Fowler, Hawkshaw, Bidder, and Molesworth, followed by some correspondence between another engineer, Mr. Lee Smith, and the Secretary of State for India. The drift of all these documents is to justify the protest raised in Mr. Andrew's preface against the introduction of the new "metre-gauge" of three feet three inches and one-eighth on such lines as that from Kotree to Mooltan, or from Lahore to Peshawar. Mr. Andrew argues from the past experience of English railway companies to the folly of repeating a like error in the construction of Indian railways. In spite of the acknowledged evils of a break of gauge in this country, it has been decided to connect Kotree with Mooltan and Lahore with Peshawar by a metre-gauge line, and it is proposed to apply this gauge to the present lines from Kurrachee to Kotree and from Mooltan to Lahore. The only decent plea for this anachronism, saving of expense, appears to be demolished by the evidence of the engineers abovenamed, three of whom agree in looking upon it as more or less false in fact, or as good for nothing in comparison with the mischief caused by a break of gauge, while the fourth indirectly points the same moral by exposing the fallacies connected with the working of the Festiniog Line. Mr. Bidder, for one, views with dismay a proposal which "sets at naught the most positive results of all our vast railway experience," which is "only supported by fallacious and long exploded arguments," which "involves an immense and wanton sacrifice of money," and "might produce the most disastrous effects on the military interests of the country. He scouts the notion of disturbing the whole railway system, because for the 170 miles between Jhelum and Peshawar a narrow gauge is "distinctly indicated" by the country itself; and he shows that the million to be spent in altering the present lines between Kurrachee and Lahore would give £6,000 a mile for improving the section between Jhelum and Peshawar.

It is proposed to hold a qualifying examination of candidates for commissions in the Household Troops and of selected candidates for Queen's and Indian cadetships on the 8th October, 1872. The regulations under which the examinations of June and November 1871 were held will apply to the forthcoming examination. No decision has yet been arrived at with regard to the specific advantages which will in future attach to the appointment of Queen's Cadet.

THE examination for fifteen appointments to the Indian Medical Service will take place on the 12th August.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

HUNTER'S ORISSA.—I.

IN two picturesque and instructive volumes on Orissa Mr. Hunter has continued the task begun, and sustained the promise shown forth in his "Annals of Rural Bengal."* The distinctive merits of that volume, which stamped him as a historical writer of no common power, insight, and breadth of research, are at least as conspicuous in his present work, which embodies in a very readable, if not quite in the most coherent form, the fruits of his own and his predecessors' inquiries into the past and present state of a country hitherto known to English readers chiefly as the favourite haunt of pilgrims from all parts of India, and the scene of untold suffering in the famine of 1866. The holy land of modern Hinduism, the time-hallowed seat of the worship of Lord Jagannáth, with all its consequent wealth of shrines and priestly endowments, is still one of the youngest provinces in India with regard to the actual date of its physical birth. Not till about the sixth century B.C. did the greater part of it emerge from the waters of the Bay of Bengal and the slime deposited by the Máhanadi. Its earliest occupants were rude fishermen from the south and a few tribes from the neighbouring hills. For a long time the broad strip of land between the hills and the sea was a mere network of rank jungle and river creeks, like the Sundarbans, in which human life was impossible. By degrees however the earliest settlers made their way into the jungle, and managed somehow to live there. In time these aboriginal Kands and Savars were followed by Aryan immigrants from Bengal, a body of whom in the third century B.C. must have brought with them the rites and practices of the Buddhism which King Asoka had just taken under his special care in Upper Bengal. Who these Yavan invaders were, whose name suggests some kind of connection with the Javan of Scripture and the Ionians of history, is still an open question; but Mr. Hunter gives some excellent reasons for tracing the Buddhists of Orissa to the same source with the countrymen and followers of Alexander, who founded the Indo-Bactrian kingdom and threw out new settlements into the plains of the Ganges. Anyhow, there seems to be a curious synchronism between Greek progress southwards and the spread of Buddhism; and the influence of Greek art on the cave-temples, buildings, and sculptured works of Orissa strengthens the inference drawn from other considerations. Be that as it may however, it is certain that a Yavan dynasty, entering the country from the sea, held firm possession of it for about a century and a-half, from 327 A.D. to 473, when it was driven out by the Késari, or Lion-king, with whose rise the days of Buddhist supremacy were numbered. The struggle which was going on all over India between the followers of Brahma and Buddha ended, here as elsewhere, in the decline of the latter, and the re-establishment of old Hindu gods and dogmas in new forms. Buddhism, purest, kindest, and most catholic of Hindu creeds, lingered for a while in its old woodland haunts; but temples for the worship of Siva, the All-Destroyer, rose more and more thick and splendid in populous places; Bhuvanésvar, the capital of the Lion Line, could boast at one time its seven thousand shrines, all clustering round the great central tower of Siva; and Jajpúr, the priestly capital on the Baitarani, the city sacred to Siva's wife, Párvati, still attests, in its maze of ruinous temples, time-worn flights of river-stairs, prostrate statues and jungle-hidden columns, the glory of a once powerful priesthood and the munificence of their royal patrons. Under its walls was afterwards fought the great battle for supremacy between the Hindus and the Mohammedans.

One of the most beautiful monuments of the Késari dynasty was a pillar which, after defying the efforts of the Afghans to drag it to the ground, still rears its graceful proportions above the jungle that now surrounds Jájpúr. It is sad to hear that our own countrymen have helped to complete the ruin begun by Afghans and carried on by Moguls. Our public works officers are said to have torn down the last remnants of the ancient palace at Jajpúr, and built bridges with the stones.

One of the Lion princes founded Kattack in the tenth century, and another a century later built the massive bridge by which pilgrims still enter the holy city of Puri. In the early part of the twelfth century a new dynasty from Bengal, the Ganga-Vansa, or Gangetic, displacing the former, introduced or developed a rival form of Hinduism, the worship of Vishnu, into Orissa, with the city of Puri for its headquarters. In fifty years the new temple of Jagannáth proclaimed the ascendancy of a milder worship than that of Siva, and the architectural glories of the new line culminated in the lovely Temple of the Sun, now known as the Black Pagoda, at Kanárák, some of whose exquisite if voluptuous carvings still bear telling witness to the skill and fancy of Hindu artists in their best days. It was in Puri however that the worship of Vishnu fixed its main seat. Under the name of Jagannáth, Lord of the World, he became the central object of a devotion which has continued for six centuries, drawing vast crowds of pilgrims yearly to his shrine by the sea shore, and enriching his priests with an endless flow of gifts and offerings from all parts of India. This long reign, says Mr. Hunter,—

He owed to that plasticity which admits the whole Hindu pantheon within its walls, and which, during six hundred years, has ever instinctively accommodated itself to the changing spirit of the times. In the very act of superseding Sun-worship and Sivaism, his priests built temples to the wife of the All-Destroyer, and to the Sun, within his sacred Courts. A truly Aryan deity, he commanded the adoration of the upper classes. At the same time he enlisted the sympathies of the low castes by the equal sacrament of the Holy Food, and by a mythology which exalted a despised fowler into the revealer of the God. . . . Without losing his own identity, he assimilated the attributes of nine of the most popular gods, and his priests keep a tenth incarnation in their hands.

This wise catholicity accounts for the success his worship has obtained in Orissa, alike with the Jains, to whom he offered himself as an incarnation of Buddha; with the forest tribes, who learned to think of him as Krishna, the Divine Herdsman, a more cheerful substitute for the gloom-loving and awful Siva; and with the warrior castes, who were glad to identify him with their favourite hero, Rama. The great Car Festival itself represents in a modern form the old Buddhist procession of the Sacred Tooth to its rural shrine. As a matter of course, all this results in a curious jumble of high conceptions and superstitious rites; but the fact remains that worshippers of almost every sect and class still throng the sacred precincts of Jagannáth's temple and partake with equal devoutness of the food prepared for them by his attendants.

With regard to the stories of self-slaughter for which this festival has won so evil a reputé in the popular fancy, Mr. Hunter confirms the experience of all recent inquirers. The stories, in fact, are mere calumnies, born of ignorance, misrepresentation, and sheer credulity. Once upon a time it is possible that the worship of Siva imported some of its bloody rites into that of Jagannáth; but Akbar's minister, Abul-Fazl, had not a word to say about the alleged practices, and the idea of self-murder is flatly opposed to the whole spirit of Vishnu-worship, as well as to the special teachings of Jagannáth's apostle, the Vishnuvite reformer, Chaitanya. "So far from encouraging self-immolation, the gentle doctrines of Jagannáth tended to check the once universal custom of widow-burning." Among the vast throng of devotees who follow or help on the progress of the sacred car, deaths do occasionally happen from misadventure, and now and then some frenzied pilgrim may have been tempted to throw himself under the wheels. But instances of the latter kind, always rare, are now apparently unknown. "The few suicides that did occur were, for the most part, cases of diseased and miserable objects, who took this means to put themselves out of pain. The official returns now place this beyond doubt." Of the fearful loss of life, on the other hand, indirectly due to the yearly festival, Mr. Hunter gives a terribly truthful account. The 3,000 emissaries, or recruiters, who yearly beat up every part of India in search of recruits for the great pilgrimage, succeed in bringing back with them every year a vast army of devotees, of whom nine in every ten are women or children. Not a few of these die upon the way. Many more find uncertain graves among the sands of Puri, or feed the death-fires lighted every evening on the shore. But the heaviest slaughter takes place on the homeward journey. It would be strange indeed if, under all the circumstances, thousands of these luckless pilgrims did not perish every year either in Puri or on the way back. Their lodging-houses in the holy city are mostly foul lairs of disease, overcrowded cells with no windows and only one door. In the best pilgrim-hotel of the place eighty persons slept for weeks together in a low room thirteen feet long by ten feet five inches broad, and six and a-half feet high, whose only opening was the door. In another room with only one opening forty-five people were crammed into a space measuring twenty feet by twelve; and this in the dry season, when as many as possible slept out of doors. But the Car Festival comes in the rains, when at least 90,000 wretches are crammed into 5,000 lodging-houses, each containing two or three small stifling cells built around open cesspools, and alongside mere gullies choked with festering filth. The food they eat consists chiefly of rice and sweetmeats cooked by the priests and offered to Jagannáth. Eaten fresh, these messes are not unwholesome, but as the rice goes bad after twenty-four hours, and somebody must eat the whole remainder of it, the bulk of the pilgrims must add to the foul air they breathe at night the foul food they swallow during the day. Cholera of course "invariably breaks out" in Puri.

At last, when the pilgrims have spent nearly all their savings and performed all their rites, they have to encounter the weary journey home in the drenching rain and the steamy heats, with frames already weakened by bad food and foul air. Every stream is flooded, and even those pilgrims who can afford to pay the ferry have to sit on the bank for days in the soaking rain, before a boat can be safely taken across. They die by hundreds on the roadside, without shelter, often without money, from sheer fatigue, illness, and even hunger. The villages on the way can only house a few of them, and the rest have to pass the nights where they can, huddled under trees or packed together by the wayside. Hundreds "have to sit upon the wet grass, not daring to lie down, rocking themselves to a monotonous chant, something between a whimper and a moan, through the long dismal night." Many of them "rise no more." Even they who reach their journey's end have contracted diseases which cripple them for the rest of their days. At the lowest reckoning ten thousand pilgrims perish yearly at Puri or on the way. Most of these victims are from Bengal, few of the northern races caring to stay at Puri later than March. The British Government is doing its best to alleviate the sufferings it cannot, on principle, altogether avert, by setting up pilgrim hospitals along the great roads, patrolling the neighbourhood of Puri, and carrying out a rude kind of sanitary police within the town itself. Mr. Hunter points out other measures which might be applied or extended to the towns and villages along the road.

EASTERN ADVENTURERS.

The Madras Athenæum, commenting on a story told in Allen's Mail, observes that as the case stands a native of this country may go to England and there marry a wife, desert her, and then come back to this country and boast of what he has done to his fellow countrymen. The matter is a serious one, as there is a stream of young men going from this country to England, and among them there will be probably a number of very unprincipled fellows, who would only be too happy to do what Mirza Said Khan did. In fact, as we have said, several such cases have occurred, and others may soon be added to the number; and therefore if possible something should be done or tried to put a stop to it. But, it may be asked, why are Englishwomen taken in by these Indian vagabonds? How is it that they marry them in preference to honest Englishmen? The answer to this will be that a certain class of Englishwomen prefer anything that is "foreign." They do not take the trouble to find out whether the article is real or not, but if it is "foreign," they are quite content. With some it does not signify what it is they take up—whether it is a husband or a pair of gloves. So a native of India being a foreigner, and coming from a great distance, is considered to be something very good, and we hear of natives being paraded about the country, and visiting people and doing things that they never dreamt of doing when they were in this country, and are perfectly amazed no doubt at finding themselves doing. But they are petted and led about simply because they are foreigners. If the people who lead them about could only obtain living natives from the places which Dr. Livingstone had visited, the natives of India would soon be thrown off. The English are particular enough when their own people are concerned. They are very careful not to admit any one whom they think ineligible into their society. This is not the case with the upper ten alone, but it extends through every rank of society, and English girls of all ranks are quite capable of selecting husbands for themselves when those husbands are English. They pick out the man whom they think the best, and though mistakes are sometimes made, upon the whole, we fancy, they marry the right men. But when a foreigner, and especially a native of India is in the case, they lose their common sense altogether. Because a native of India is different from an Englishman, therefore he must be better than the Englishman. The native is taken at his own valuation, and we know very well that he is not inclined to place a small value upon himself, or to make out that he is of less importance than he really is. For instance, Ramasawmy, the son of a butler, who may have managed to learn a little English in a Government or Mission School, goes to England, and by the help of a few rupees' worth of cloth, with a little lace here and there, he gets introduced into some respectable English family. Of course he tells them that he is a prince, and that his lands are boundless, and that it is quite impossible to count his wealth. In consequence he is lionised, and is taken from place to place, and not a single word of inquiry is made about him. His word is taken as Gospel, and is believed implicitly. If he has a grievance, and wants money to work it with, he has only to ask and have. He is pitied, and the cruel Government that has robbed him is execrated, and looked upon as an abomination not fit to exist. If he thinks proper he may be able to marry an English girl who would turn up her nose at the bare idea of marrying anyone a step beneath her. After he has got all that he wants he returns to the land of his birth, and takes his proper rank in native society. That society may or may not think anything more of him because he has been to England. Perhaps those who have read English may value him more on this account, but the rest of the community will not. On the contrary, they will probably think that he has injured his caste by going.

BANK OF BENGAL.

The Pioneer will be much disappointed if the Chamber of Commerce, Calcutta, does not very soon memorialise his Excellency the Viceroy for an inquiry into the circumstances of the late financial scandal. Of the necessity for an inquiry there can be no doubt. Every day fresh rumours relating to the recent irregularities are made current, and, in one correspondent's letter or another, are now being read all over India. Some of them may be false, but some have, we fear, only too good a foundation; and in order to sift the wheat from the chaff, and to present the residuum in a digestible form to the public, an official inquiry is really necessary. Let the blame attaching to some persons be what it may, to others no blame can possibly attach; and, if only in justice to the innocent, we would, with all deference, urge the propriety of an investigation. That his Excellency the Viceroy has already taken prompt and judicious action in the matter we are aware; but this, we would submit, hardly meets the occasion. A wiggling in private durbar may be a very effective measure, but it does not, in our opinion, meet fully the requirements of the case. Public and official immorality demand public and official condemnation. But we would not be misunderstood to be asking for a thunderbolt—an Allahabad D.P.W., a Kooka, or a Bombay Commissariat Minute. We should be satisfied in full by an official announcement that "His Excellency the Viceroy, having instituted a Commission of Inquiry, and having studied the Report of the Commissioners, was pleased to concur with them," and by the silent displacement here and there of an official on whom blame may have fallen. For from the very nature of the late scandals many high officials are in the public mind implicated. The Financial Minister, the Secretaries to the Government of India in the Financial Department, the Directorate of the Bank, official and commercial, the Mint Master, the Department of Paper Currency, and the Accountant-General, Bengal, are among those to whom reference is made as being possibly connected with the commission or prevention of the late irregularities. But it is most cruel to the officers concerned that sufficient should not be known to allow of the incidence of the blame being equitable. As matters now stand neither the public nor the press can nicely apportion the blame, and until this is possible, justice will remain incomplete. We would, therefore, express a hope that his Excellency the Viceroy in Council may be pleased to institute an inquiry into the late financial irregularities.

The Bombay Gazette opines that the late Secretary and Treasurer of the Bank, Mr. Dickson, made rash speculations in Bengal Bank shares and Government paper, in the belief that exchange would continue to go down, that the Financial Department would go on doing its remittance business in Calcutta and Bombay instead of in London, and that as, therefore, it would be necessary to make large purchases of Government securities to be enfaced for payment at home, the Bank of Bengal, which was the chief holder of Government paper, must infallibly make a great profit out of Sir R. Temple's new plan of managing the remittance account with England. These calculations were upset when the Financial Department was ordered to stand by the declaration Sir R. Temple had made in his Budget that the Secretary of State would draw on India for thirteen millions in the year 1872-73. The rise in Government paper was checked, and the sanguine expectations of Mr. Dickson and his friends that the Bank's shares would soon touch Rs. 2,000, or 100 per cent. premium, seemed to stand no great chance of being realised. It is stated that the Bank itself is not involved in any way in Mr. Dickson's ventures, and will suffer no loss from the stock-jobbing mania to which its able and influential manager fell a victim; but it is vain to pretend that the character and credit of a Bank, which were till lately above suspicion, have not received a serious injury, when the price of the Bank shares fluctuates from day to day in such a manner as to frighten steady investors. The worst of it is that, when the reputation of the Bank of Bengal is attacked, that of the Government of India is also called in question. And it is in circumstances like these, when a frank explanation possibly is all that is needed to allay the fears of the public and restore confidence in the Bank, that the mischief which may be caused by the want of the means of free communication between the Government and the people in India becomes most conspicuous. If there were any public assembly in which a simple question could be put to the Viceroy or the Finance Minister as to the meaning of what is now beyond our comprehension, the answer might be so reassuring as to make us all ashamed of having given way to vain alarms. But in this country the policy of the Government can generally speaking only be guessed at by the public; and the consequence of this separation between the governors and the governed is that any rumour touching the credit of the State grows to proportions it could not assume if the truth were known. We hope that Lord Northbrook, to whom the causes of the recent financial crisis in Calcutta must be fully known, will depart from official rule so far as to publish some announcement which will let all India know what is the real state of the Bank of Bengal.

MR. ELLIOTT AND MANCHESTER.

The Bombay Gazette holds that a distinction must be drawn between the general influence used by Manchester to favour all works of public improvement and the intrigues of individual speculators to get some extremely profitable bargains for themselves completed on the plea that they would be good for trade. Our contemporary the Times of India made some time ago the remarkable statement that the sale of the Elphinstone Company's estate to Government would never have been effected if some capitalists in London had not been induced to buy up a number of the shares and to use their private interest at the India Office to get the job completed. What foundation there may be for this scandal we of course cannot say; but obviously the blame of anything of the kind cannot legitimately be ascribed to Manchester. But, says Mr. Elliott, it is Manchester which has induced the Indian Government to build railways which do not, and never will, pay, while the natives have been dying by the million for want of water. The first duty of a Government, he contends, is to secure safety of life, and this the Government of India has not done. But the first step for the Government to take towards securing this end was to strengthen itself by improving to the utmost the great lines of military communication throughout the country. All that has yet been done has been to press on to completion the system of trunk railways planned by Lord Dalhousie; and the influence of Manchester has been of service in helping forward this most necessary work, which cannot be said to be finished till Bombay has been connected by a direct line with Agra and Delhi. And, although military and political, rather than commercial considerations, should be taken into account in determining the value of the lines already constructed, have not the railways, we may ask, in all probability been as beneficial to the people as if the money spent on them had been used in making canals? Following in the wake of Sir Arthur Cotton, Mr. Elliott exclaims, "The true base of Indian civilisation lies first of all in water;" but is this statement true of many large districts of India? We should like to ask the people of Guzerat, for instance, whether they, having abundance of water already, would have preferred getting more of it to having a railway constructed which saves their country from the dismal fate of being shut out from communication with the rest of the world for about four months of the year, and which has raised the standard of comfort and enjoyment in every household. Take, again, the case of Central India, as illustrated in the recently published Administration Report of General Daly. In Holkar's dominions all the best land is now devoted to the cultivation of the poppy, "to the almost utter displacement of wheat and jowaree, the food supplies of the people." Now, how can water enable the ryots of Central India to exchange a portion of the produce of their fields for the food they need? General Daly tells us that "the Jubbulpore and Khundwah rail has diverted from Central India the wheat crops of Gondwarra, which for years past have been a granary resorted to by Brinjarries, and, until the rail by piercing Malwa shall put food for the people within reach, its supply under the increasing cultivation of opium, sugar-cane, and oil-seeds, produce which enables the ryot to meet his rent, will be a question of anxiety." Would Mr. Elliott overcome the difficulty by carrying a canal across the Vindhya? The truth is, instead of abruptly ceasing to construct railways, we ought to go on building more of them in connection with the existing system.

ESCAPED CONVICTS FROM PORT BLAIR.—A Rangoon paper announced, not long ago, that six convicts had escaped from Port Blair, and a contemporary made merry over the supposed confusion between this occurrence and another which happened a year ago. But there was, it appears, no confusion of occurrences, as six convicts did escape from Port Blair in February last. Soon after the assassination of Lord Mayo they managed to secure a grass-boat, and, having stocked her amply with food, sailed off. Twenty days after their departure they visited the Nicobars, where they stayed a week, after which they very pluckily set out for Calcutta. On the third day out they were spoken by a Rangoon-bound ship, and picked up. Their tale was, of course, that they had been passengers by a native ship which had been wrecked, but the captain, suspecting deception, handed them all over at Rangoon to the police. One man then turned Queen's evidence, and the identity of all was fully established on Wednesday, the 22nd May.—Athenaeum.

CIVIL ENGINEERING COLLEGE.—The Civil Engineering College held its annual meeting on the 30th of last month. The College, which may be called our local Cooper's Hill, has been in existence many years longer than its sister institution in England, and is upon the whole in a flourishing condition. It labours under one disadvantage however, for it has a College Department, while it has no situations to give the students when they leave the College except they enter the lower grades of the D. P. W., and this they are naturally unwilling to do. The consequence is that there has been a good deal of dissatisfaction among the students who have entered the higher department. Nearly every one who has passed out has taken employment in other Presidencies, and of course the expense of training them falls on this Presidency. Mr. A. J. Arbuthnot, who presided on the occasion, pointed out the evils that now exist in the Public Works Department, to which the students he was then addressing would soon be attached. He said that these evils lay in the system, which threw too much responsibility on one man. The superintending engineers had a great deal more than they could do, and the consequence was that the work was done badly. He said that a change would shortly be made which would considerably mend matters. Several changes have been made in the department at different times without any particular good results flowing from them, so that the public may be excused if it is somewhat sceptical about the forthcoming changes.—Madras Times, June 5.

THE AGRA PROFESSOR OF MATHEMATICS.—We are told that Mr. Boutflower, Professor of Mathematics, Agra College, is about to leave Agra to join the vacant Inspectorship of Schools in the Central Provinces.—Delhi Gazette.

A WRESTLER'S OVERTHROW REVENGED.—A great wrestling match took place at Mooltan recently between a Mooltanee and a Lahoree, the latter coming off victorious in the encounter, but was nearly beaten to death after by the natives of this place, for which cowardly act several of them have been arrested.

NEW PAPER.—We understand that the Rev. Lal Dehari Dey will shortly start a magazine, to be called the Bengal Magazine. It will be a monthly review of Indian politics, society and literature. The rev. gentleman has, it seems, secured some of the best native writers as contributors to the new magazine.—Indian Mirror.

BRAVE BUT NOT DISCREET.—A Central India paper says that while a regiment was on the march in that part of the country a tiger crossed their path. A few shots were fired at it, and it began to think that it had better get away as soon as possible, when to the amusement of the rest a rash young officer fresh from Kerry drew his sword and gave chase. He did not catch it, luckily for him.

RAIN AT ALLAHABAD.—Early yesterday morning a violent thunderstorm, accompanied by a high wind and resulting in a heavy fall of rain, announced the arrival at Allahabad of the chota bursat. Sanguine persons may pretend to think that "the rains" have begun, but the majority will wait a week before venturing on rash expressions of opinion.—Pioneer, June 11.

CHOLERA AT "UMBALLA."—Our Lahore contemporary mentions, in his issue of the 2nd instant, that there have been seven deaths by cholera at Umballa. We presume our contemporary means the Umballa district. Not a single case of the disease has occurred in the cantonment up to date, thanks to the precautionary measures adopted by the authorities.—Mofussilite, June 8.

THE E.I.R.'S PROPOSED GUARANTEE FUND.—The employes of the East Indian Railway unanimously refused to sign the document relating to the guarantee fund, which gave the company unlimited power over its servants and their private property. The Board of Agency, finding all hands determined, have withdrawn the document and will not insist on its being signed.—Mofussilite.

THE YOUNG RAJAH OF MATTORE, of whose appointment to the Foreign Office our readers were apprised by telegram on Saturday, is described to us by one who knows him as "a very promising young Bengali gentleman." Were a few more native gentlemen, Mahomedan and Indoo, attached to the various departments, our relations with the country would be much more pleasant and more cordial.—Pioneer.

MR. EGERTON.—We would note (says the Pioneer) that the appointment of Mr. Egerton to Council is very suggestive. Mr. Egerton is the Financial Commissioner of the Punjab. There is, therefore, some ground for supposing that Sir R. Temple will for the future have charge of the Water-colour Department of the State, Mr. Egerton assuming office as Financial Adviser to the Viceroy. Sir John Strachey continues, we believe, in charge of the Home Department for some time—a course quite in accordance with precedent; for in 1869, it will be remembered, Sir R. Temple went on leave for six months and the vacancy was not filled up. The Council has its full strength of members, but one has nothing to do while another does the work of two! The Hon. Mr. Egerton is ninety-fourth on the list of Bengal civilians.

THE OTHER SIDE OF THE QUESTION.—Syud Abdoolah, writing to Allen's Indian Mail, laments the decision of the Government on the Kooka affair, and then adds:—"The whole unvarnished fact is this, that for the last ten years a great sensation has been prevailing throughout the Punjab in consequence of the detection of a conspiracy on the part of the Kooka sect to raise an insurrection in that part of the country. Several Kookas were convicted of cold-blooded murder on the clearest evidence, and sentenced to be hanged. The truculent Kookas are, beyond a shadow of doubt, by nature, murderers, mutineers, and traitors; as such, they were taken in flagrante delicto, and for such offences the punishment of death is usually adjudged. The whole tribe directly or indirectly participated in the mutinous rising. If this be so, then the whole body might justly have been executed. Secondly, all troops had been despatched to join the Delhi Camp of Exercise. There was only the raw police force to guard the district. The crisis did not admit of any leniency being shown to the sanguinary rebels. Things were at such a stage that either the Kookas must be executed, or else the lives of British officials and their families sacrificed." We need scarcely say that the whole of this is founded upon a pure misapprehension of the facts, and we hope that Syud Abdoolah represents very few of his countrymen in India. The Government papers, however, are by this time in England, and we have no doubt that there is logic enough among our countrymen to seize the fact from among the heap of fiction with which it has been covered by interested politicians.—Friend of India.

MOOLTAN.—This district seems to be still in a very barbarous state, if one may judge by the number of murders that take place here, there having been no less than thirteen natives hanged for that crime during the last month.

TRADE OF INDIA.—We find from a recently published Trade Return that treating the Government Drafts as imports, and assuming that one-half of the Government paper re-transferred came to Calcutta, the excess of exports over imports during the first four months of 1872 was 2 crores, 20 lacs, and 25 thousand rupees. Imports exceeded exports with Great Britain, 3 crores, 59 lacs, and 82 thousand rupees; Australia 13 lacs, and 26 thousand rupees; Ceylon 5 lacs, and 58 thousand rupees. Exports exceeded imports with the Continent of Europe 1 crore, 14 lacs, and 58 thousand rupees; with North America 1 crore, 14 lacs, and 80 thousand rupees; with China 1 crore, 83 lacs, and 50 thousand rupees; with Pegu 1 crore, 41 lacs, and 37 thousand rupees; with Africa 5 thousand rupees; with all other places 44 lacs, and 61 thousand rupees. In this statement 7 lacs, 17 thousand rupees worth of railway materials, imported as capital, have been excluded; Bullion, Specie, Government Drafts, and Government Loan Securities, have only been dealt with.

MR. BREEKS.—We regret to report the death on Thursday, June 6, of Mr. Brecks, Commissioner of the Nilgherry Hills. The deceased gentleman had been ill for only a couple of days. Abscess of the liver was the cause of death.

BRITISH BURMAH.—The report on the Revenue Administration of British Burmah for 1870-71 has at last seen the light. We learn that the amount realised by imperial taxation amounted to nearly one hundred and twenty-three lakhs and a quarter, while that of last year was only one hundred and fifteen. Ten years ago the return under this head did not amount to one hundred lakhs.—Pioneer.

OVERLAND JOURNEY FROM MAULMAIN TO BANGKOK.—Mr. C. H. Carpenter has performed an overland journey from Maulmain to Bangkok. The route he adopted was by boat from Maulmain to Kyah Eng, by elephants from Kyah Eng to the Three Pagodas, and from thence to Wengka, and from Wengka by boat to Ifa-ka-noon Chiyoke, Kamburi, and Bangkok. The time occupied by the journey was about 190 hours, and the distance travelled 510 miles.

MADRAS POLICE.—A hard fate has befallen several acting Assistant Superintendents of the Madras police. The officers for whom they have been acting having returned to duty, no posts can be found for them, and they have the pleasant alternative of leaving the service, or by special favour being allowed to serve as inspectors for the time being. This is especially hard upon men who have left other occupations to enter the service.

GALLANTRY OF A CLERGYMAN DURING THE LATE CYCLONE.—A correspondent of the Madras Athenæum says:—"It is a fact in connection with the late cyclone, that whilst the services of the military, marine, and police have been acknowledged, the indefatigable exertions of a clergyman, who was one of the first on the beach, and amongst the most active in saving life, seem to have remained unobserved. At great personal risk the Rev. E. Dubois rescued two of the sailors of the Arcteg, and assisted in bringing the body of the captain on shore, and conveyed it to the Fort, where for a considerable time he used every effort to restore animation."

REWARDS OF GALLANTRY.—Yesterday afternoon at the Banqueting Hall his Excellency the Governor presented to the 2nd Battalion of H. M.'s 21st Fusiliers, and to No. 7 Battery, 5th Brigade Royal Artillery, the public testimonials which have been got up in commemoration of the gallant conduct of the men and officers of these two branches of the military service, stationed at the Fort, who rendered such valuable assistance on the occasion of the late storm in rescuing the shipwrecked sailors and others from a watery grave. The testimonials consisted of several handsome silver articles, &c., with suitable inscriptions engraved on each.—Madras Athenæum, June 12.

MONSOON WEATHER AT BANGALORE.—We think we may safely say the monsoon has put in an appearance at last. It broke at Galle on the 3rd inst., and allowing due time for its travelling up to these ports, we have had a very respectable instalment of what is to come. For the last few days incessant thunder and lightning of a description we shouldn't much care to meet with crossing Salisbury Plain, or going up-country by transit, has relieved the tedium of the passing hour, and pleasant speculations about another cyclone have also served the same purpose.—Bangalore Herald, June 8.

THE MADRAS MAHOMEDANS.—The Mahomedans of this Presidency, who, under several Governors, have experienced too much of the cold shoulder, while the Hindeos have been greatly exalted, will find a friend in Lord Hobart, who, by several years' residence in Constantinople, has acquired a respect for the character of the better class of "the Faithful." His Lordship is instituting enquiries as to the Mahomedans who have qualified for the public service, and we expect that he will take an early opportunity of repairing an error that Lord Napier made in summoning two Hindoo gentlemen, but only one Mahomedan, to the present Madras Legislative Council.—Madras Mail.

OUTBREAK IN BRITISH BURMAH.—The Rangoon Gazette has "received intimation of a serious outbreak which took place at Nga Thine Choung on the 21st May. The Assistant Commissioner, Mr. Man, was shot dead, and his body had been brought down to Bassein for interment. We are informed that it was not known whether the inhabitants had revolted, or it was the act of a gang of dacoits. The Deputy Commissioner of Bassein, it would seem, on getting the news, chartered the steamer Pioneer, and accompanied by the Superintendent of Police with a number of policemen, proceeded to Nga Thine Choung. We trust they got there in time to arrest the spread of the revolt, if it was actually a revolt."

THE FLOODS AT VELLORE.—The fund for the relief of the sufferers by the late floods at Vellore amounts to only about £600, a figure very inconsiderable in comparison with the many distressed and unfortunate people who require relief. At Vellore there can be no doubt the distress is much greater, and the necessity for assistance much more urgent than at Madras; yet at the latter place more than enough has been subscribed for the shipwrecked sailors, while at the former the fund languishes in very small proportions, and is nothing like sufficient to enable substantial relief to be afforded to the many hundreds of houseless and starving fellow-creatures who are sufferers by the disastrous storm and its consequences which lately visited that place.

ECLIPSE IN MADRAS.—The Madras Mail says that the annular eclipse of the sun on Thursday morning was seen under the most favourable conditions in Madras, the sky being almost clear of clouds, and especially so during the period of greatest obscuration. The small bite taken by the moon out of the sun's north-east rim at 5.50 A.M. gradually increased until at 6.56 the centres of the lesser and greater luminaries coincided, and the circumference only of the sun was seen, resembling, through a smoked glass, a brilliant wedding ring in the heavens. This phase lasted a little more than three and a half minutes, and then the moon gradually retired in a south-westerly direction, and the eclipse terminated shortly after eight o'clock. While the usual ceremony of bathing in consequence of the eclipse was going on in the sea, a native boy was struck by a wave and drowned.

A CRY FROM THE UNEMPLOYED.

Tell me not in mournful numbers
"Staff Corps is an empty dream!"
The India-Office never slumbers,
Their ways are not what they seem.

They are really quite in earnest,
Though you think they play the fool;
You may fret, may fume like a furnace,
They are always calm and cool.

My friends, we know to our sorrow
How we're cheated, while they say,
Wait, will you, till to-morrow;
Or will you have it all to-day?

Men are strong, but time is fleeting,
India's climate kills the brave;
Hearts with idle hopes are beating,
While the victims near the grave.

Under fire of sun and battle
Passeth many a noble life;
Counted but as driven cattle,
Scanty laurels crown their strife.

Trust no promise, howe'er pleasant;
There's no meaning in what is said;
No faith in orders at present!
No judge but the God o'erhead!

Won't the "Sultan's Ball" remind us
Petty thefts are not sublime?
Say, what sophistries can blind us
To these slurs upon our time?

One such trick should bar another,
Teach from dark ways to refrain;
But, my poor dear helpless brother,
You'll be taken in again.

Let us, then, be up and doing,
Striving for a better fate,
Each claim, each right pursuing,
Falter not, and do not wait.

Bombay, June 1.

Miscellaneous.

MHOW.—We are told that cholera has left Mhow. During the outbreak H.M.'s 49th Regiment lost about fifteen lives—men, women, and children.

EARTHQUAKE AT UMULSAR.—The Surat correspondent of the Jam-i-Jamshed states that on Saturday, about 9 P.M., a shock of earthquake was felt at Umulsar, in the Surat collectorate, which lasted about a minute.

HIGHWAY ROBBERY.—An Ahmedabad paper states that four carts laden with property, worth about Rs. 7,000, which were going from Ahmedabad to Beejapore, were plundered near a village belonging to the Gaekwar.

DEPARTURE OF THE HON. MR. TUCKER FOR POONA.—On Tuesday afternoon the Hon. Mr. Tucker left Bombay for Poona. The usual salute of guns for a member of Council was fired from the saluting battery.

COTTON FRAUDS.—A correspondent of the Gujarat Mitra, writing from Veerungam, states that in the course of last week a great many cotton frauds were discovered by Mr. Ratilal Bapalal, cotton sub-inspector at that station. The cases are under investigation.

A GOOD EXAMPLE.—We are glad to learn that Major Thoyta, our Cantonment Magistrate, has recently punished such of the butchers as exposed unwholesome meat for sale. Of late the meat in the markets, camp and town has not been fit to look upon, yet butchers had it hung up for sale, and that, too, at an enormous price. Major Thoyts will confer a blessing on the community by thus making severe examples of those butchers who knowingly slaughter diseased cattle, much to the abhorrence and discomfort of the camp residents. Mr. Shevendass will, no doubt, visit with severe displeasure the town butchers for the offences we have above mentioned.—Sind News, June 6.

RAIN AT POONA.—On Saturday and on Sunday evenings last Jupiter Pluvius proved propitious, and favoured us with a smart shower, and as we are writing there is every appearance of a third edition of the same. We have certainly to be exceedingly thankful for this, for it was not before it was sorely wanted. The earth was so parched, that in a few hours after the rain no vestige of it remained to give evidence that it had fallen. The weather is still oppressively hot and sultry, but the nights still remain cool. If it had not been for this, what we should have done is a question easier framed than answered. It appears now that we may look for the rain so long expected as a thing that is to be.—Poona Observer, June 11.

THE GAEKWAR OF BARODA.—A correspondent writes to us that oppressive doings are in no way diminished in Baroda, and he instances the following:—On last Friday week, when the late Bhow Scindiah's sister Balabai was about to proceed to Bombay by the mail train at nine o'clock in the morning, she was on the Baroda station accused of her intention to proceed to the British territory with the object of laying her grievances before the Government. She was thereupon forced to return to the city, and there the poor, unprotected, and aggrieved lady was detained under a close watch for seven days, and was released only on the 7th instant on promising "never to leave Baroda for Bombay."

BUMBOATMEN.—There is a class of traders in Bombay who rejoice in the sobriquet of "Bumboatmen," and carry on a lucrative business with all the ships in the harbour. These gentry are strangers to the law of free trade, and are totally ignorant of the doctrines of enlightenment as preached by the eloquent speakers of the East Indian Association. The other day one misguidad Parsee thought he might try and earn an honest penny, and started with his wares to one of the ships in the harbour, but the ancient burghers of the bumboat guild no sooner discovered his daring than they set upon him, and nearly thrashed his life out of him. The poor fellow came ashore a sadder if not a wiser man, and sought solace in a police-court summons. But even here he was doomed to disappointment, for his enemies with a forethought worthy of a better cause had preceded him, and taken out summonses of assault against their unfortunate victim.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

SERVANT'S ALLOWANCE—MEDICAL OFFICERS.

No. 334.—The following G.O. by the Government of India, dated April 17, No. 426, is republished:—

No. 426.—The following paragraphs of a military letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, No. 57, dated March 14, are published for general information:—

1. I have to inform you that on the recommendation of the Secretary of State for War I have decided that in future British medical staff officers proceeding to or from India shall receive servant's allowance at the rate of 1s. 6d. a day, for one servant only, in accordance with the War Office Circular of Dec. 23, 1857.

2. Officers drawing the allowance must furnish certificates in support of their claims, according to Form No. 1 attached to such circular.

Form of Certificate No. 1, referred to in para. 2 of the above.

I hereby certify upon honour that I have not had attending me, in the capacity of a servant or bātmān during any part of the period for which I now claim servant's allowance, a soldier labourer, or any other person employed and paid by the public, and that no ration has been drawn for the servant for whom the allowance is claimed.

LEAVE TO UNCOVENANTED OFFICERS.

The following financial despatch from the Secretary of State for India, No. 82, dated Feb. 29, is published in supersession of the notification of this department, No. 561, dated May 18, 1872:—

Financial, No. 82.

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Governor general of India in Council.

My Lord,—I have considered in Council your financial letter dated Jan. 12, No. 13, stating that you have seen reason to withdraw the request, contained in your financial letter, dated Feb. 22, 1871, No. 28, that uncovenanted officers on leave in this country might not be granted extensions of leave which would have the effect of prolonging their absence beyond two years, without the consent of the Government of India to which those officers were subordinate.

2. I shall consequently decide finally on all applications for such extensions when there may not be time to refer to the Governments in India, but shall require them to be supported by a certificate from the medical board at his office, as is the practice in the case of applications for gratuities or pensions on retirement.

Under the provisions of section 5 of the General Stamp Act XVIII. of 1869, the Governor general in Council is pleased to rule that all stamps denoted by the collector of Kurrachee may be denoted by means of embossed stamps impressed by a cold steel die.

This notification shall be in force for two months from this date.

COMPULSORY RETIREMENT OF OFFICERS OF THE PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.

The following rules for the compulsory retirement of the officers of the Public Works Department on attaining the age of fifty-five years have been published in the Gazette of India:—

Rule I.—No military or naval officer in the Public Works Department, who holds a gazetted appointment, shall be appointed to any new office after he attains the age of fifty-five years, or shall be permitted, after attaining that age, to retain an appointment which he may have held for five years.

Rule II.—Appointments to a new office (Rule I.) include promotions to a higher grade or class, whether substantively or temporarily.

Rule III.—Warrant officers, who are graded as assistant-engineers, in consequence of having received honorary commissions, are exempted from the operation of Rule I.

Rule IV.—The exemption of military or naval officers from the operation of Rule I. will require the sanction of the Secretary of State in Council, to whom a reference may, in special cases, be made at the option of the Government of India in the Public Works Department, in communication with the Military Department.

Rule V.—The application of these rules will not be enforced in the case of officers appointed to the department, prior to Jan. 1, 1871, for five years from that date; that is to say, the rules will, in the case of such officers, only become applicable from Jan. 1, 1876.

The rules as regards the compulsory retirement of uncovenanted officers in the Public Works Department are embodied in Chapter XI., Section 53, of the Civil Pension Code, which, for facility of reference, is quoted below. The exemption of such officers holding gazetted appointments, that is, appointments in the engineer establishments, or such as are analogous to them, will, however, rest with the Government of India in the Public Works Department. Rule II. above is applicable also to uncovenanted officers:—

"Chapter XI., Section 53, Civil Pension Code.—A superannuation pension or gratuity is granted to an officer compelled by rule to retire at a particular age.

"1. An officer in a superior grade who has attained the age of fifty-five years should be required to retire, unless the local Government considers him efficient, and permits him to remain in the service. As the premature retirement of an efficient officer imposes a needless charge on the State, this rule should be worked with discretion; and no officer can claim to retire on the ground that he is fifty-five years old.

"2. An annual return of officers permitted to remain in the service after the age of fifty-five years should be submitted to the Government of India in the Administrative Department concerned.

"3. In the Public Works Department the above rule will not, until the 1st January, 1876, apply to officers appointed to the Department before the 1st January, 1871, unless they have attained the age of sixty years, or have been in the same appointment, grade, or class, for five years."

DRESS—OFFICERS.

G.O. No. 49 of 1872 is cancelled, and the following substituted:—

With reference to G.O. H.M.'s British Force, dated Oct. 25, 1860, the C. in C. is pleased to direct the substitution of a plain white tunic for the braided one therein prescribed.

2. The tunic should be of sufficient length to just clear the saddle when the officer is mounted, and will be fastened by four small gilt buttons of regimental pattern, cuffs pointed, and a pocket outside the left breast, the collar rounded off in front, and twisted gold cord on each shoulder.

3. The sash will be worn on all occasions with the above tunic, whether on or off duty, except when used as the regimental mess dress during the hot weather.

4. Field officers will wear their distinctive badges on the collar.

5. The tunic, as above ordered, will be worn by all officers of British and native infantry regiments, and by staff sergeants.

The following Horse Guards' G.O., dated March 1, is republished for information:—

Horse Guards' G.O. 20, Officers' Dress.

The following regulations have been approved of for the dress of sub-lieutenants, viz.:—

Cavalry.

I. The tunic, stable jacket, pantaloons, and overalls to be of the pattern worn by other officers, but without lace or braid—except in hussars, the sub-lieutenants of which will wear the tunic braided as for staff sergeants. The stripes on the pantaloons and overalls to be of cloth.

II. Sub-lieutenants will not be required to provide themselves with blue frock coats, dress belts, pouches, sword knots, or sabretaches.

Infantry.

III. Tunics, patrol, and mess jackets are to be the same as worn by other officers, but without lace or braid.

IV. The dress trousers, belts, and sashes are not to be worn by sub-lieutenants.

V. In other respects the dress of sub-lieutenants, both of cavalry and infantry, is to be the same as for officers generally.

Official Papers.

From Brig. gen. G. Bouchier, C.B., Commanding Cachar Column, Loshai Expeditionary Force, to the Quartermaster general, Army Headquarters, Calcutta. No. 696L, dated Cachar, March 19.

38. On the 26th I detached a column under Lient. col. Roberts, v.c., consisting of fifty of the 22nd Punjab N.I., fifty of the 44th N.I., and two mountain guns, to Jaikoom, a village of Poiboy's, distant about seven miles. The enemy were posted behind a strong stockade, which was turned, but the village was attacked under cover of the fire of the artillery, whose practice is reported to have been admirable. The village was burnt. The column did not return to camp until 10½ P.M.

39. From Jan. 27 to Jan. 31 I was detained at Koongnoong, collecting commissariat stores, and sending out parties to bury and burn the dead.

40. On Feb. 1 we marched with ten days' provisions for Sellam, Poiboy's stronghold, which we reached on the following day. The group of villages, five in number, is situated on the Longtong range of mountains, at an average elevation of 5,800 feet. We occupied the largest, which I believe accidentally caught fire at night; the fire was with difficulty extinguished. Next day we moved camp to an open plain, and prepared for our last advance on Lalboorah.

41. Our baggage was reduced to a minimum; one suit off, one suit on, with bedding, was our allowance. All ponies were sent to the rear. The nights were freezing, so that an ample supply of bedding was a necessity.

42. Intimation was sent to Poiboy that if he did not come in his villages would on my return be burnt.

43. Here I received intimation that from sickness and mortality among the Mumpore Contingent, General Nuthall had retired from Cheebo. As it happened, having thoroughly secured our communications, and the whole country in our rear being at our mercy, this did not matter, otherwise this was exactly the time when the contingent might have assisted us by holding Poiboy's villages while I advanced on Lalboorah.

44. On Jan. 12, with a column composed of two mountain guns, 400 infantry, drawn from the 22nd Punjab N.I., 42nd N.I., and 44th N.I., I started from Sellam for Lalboorah's locality, the distance or whereabouts of which no one knew. We carried two days' food in haversacks, and ten on coolies; the guns also were carried on coolies. Three guns were fired by the enemy as a signal that we had left camp; the mountain on each flank of Lalboorah's valley, known as the "Gates of Lalboorah," loomed stupendously in the distance.

45. About four miles on the road we passed the deserted village of Romong, forty or fifty Loshais retiring before us. We sent to tell them if they did not come in we would fire upon them; several came, the rest disappeared in the forest. It was evening before we arrived at Julcheng, a distance of nine miles at least. We passed through one very strongly stockaded but deserted position, built in a re-entering gorge of a precipitous mountain. Not only was the stockade strong and provided with flanking defences, but the trees felled within fifty yards of it formed an almost impassable barrier—a natural abattis. From five hundred yards the guns would have rendered it untenable; without guns, taking it would have involved much loss of life, as the flanks rested on precipitous rocks.

46. On the 13th and 14th we marched; on the 15th halted in a curious valley, about half-a-mile across at the junction of two streams whose waters were running southwards either to the Koladyne or Irrawaddy.

47. On the 16th we crossed a range of mountains near the village of Moorth-lang, at an elevation of 6,650 feet, and passed through magnificent forests of oaks, firs, rhododendrons, and ash. The headman of the village, the oldest man I have seen in these mountains, crawled out to meet me, knelt at my feet, and, taking off his blanket, said we were gods, and that "their all" was at our disposal; women and children flocked round us; they told us Lalboorah, who owned their village, wanted them again to fight us, but that as they saw we did not come to take their wives and children they refused, and feared they would suffer for their refusal.

48. The village was stockaded all round, not to defend it from us, but from the Sookties, Kamhow's people, who were constantly at feud with them.

49. In the evening we debouched on a narrow plain or series of extended valleys, at the head of which we encamped, and on the following morning (Feb. 17) marched to Chumfai, Lalboorah's chief village, which we found deserted.

50. In the centre of the village was the tomb of Vonolel, an elevated platform, surrounded by a palisading, on every point of which was hung skulls of metnas, elephants, deer, tigers, &c., while in the centre, on a pole, was the fresh slain head of a Sookti, with his arm and foot. It was a ghastly sight.

51. We had here got to the length of our tether; as far as we could see our work was done; we had subdued the tribes of Vonpial, Poiboy, and Vonolel; had marched unmolested to the capital of the latter, and it now only remained to dictate such terms as would save the remainder of the villages from destruction, and this I determined to do at Chumpsin, the village of Vonolel's widow.

52. I drew up the column round Vonolel's tomb, addressed a few words to the troops, thanking them in the name of the Viceroy, the Government, and the Commander-in-Chief, for their devotion to the cause we had at heart, and the fine spirit of discipline evinced by all. Three cheers for her Majesty were given as the British colours were hoisted over a spot no British eye had ever before seen. The troops were withdrawn, and the village, consisting of 500 houses, was burnt.

53. On the 18th I marched to Chumpsin. The inhabitants, armed and unarmed, seemed well inclined to resist us, but dispersed before our steady advances. The troops were drawn up around the village, which I occupied by a detachment, for the protection of the survey department. Here I dictated the terms on which this and the other villages of Lalboorah alone would be spared, and warned the inhabitants that if not acceded to within twenty-four hours I would return and destroy Chumpsin to begin with.

54. The terms were—1st, that agents from the Government should have free access to Lalboorah's villages and transit through his country; secondly, that three hostages, responsible for our unmolested return, should accompany the column to Tipai Mookh; thirdly, that the arms taken at Monier Kal or Nundigram, or an equal number of their own, should be surrendered; and, fourthly, that a fine of two elephant's tusks, one set of wargon's, one necklace, four metnas, ten goats, ten pigs, fifty fowls, and twenty maunds of husked rice, should be delivered within twenty-four hours.

55. The arms were the difficulty—they came in by ones; but before morning everything, except a small portion of rice, was delivered.

56. Dharpong, on hearing the terms, as was his wont, grew furious, and said he would leave the camp. I told him he was quite free to do so, which brought him to his senses.

57. I halted on the 19th, as, although nominally halting, we were daily on the move somewhere.

58. On the 20th signal rockets were fired, hoping to attract General Brownlow's attention; we were then in lat. 23 deg. 26 min. 32 sec., lon. 93 deg. 21 min.

59. On the 21st, after considering thoroughly the possibility of forming a junction with General Brownlow, whom we had not heard of since Feb. 6, and then he had not given me the direction in which he was moving, I determined to withdraw the column, and on that day commenced my march, which was continued with only one halt at Sellam to Tipai Mookh. In the evening of the 21st we again fired signal rockets, and burned blue lights from the high ridge above the Moorth-lang village.

60. We arrived at Tipai Mookh on March 6, and left it on the 8th, after making all necessary arrangements to enable the remainder of the force to start the following day.

61. I arrived on March 10 at Cachar, the actual date on which the Government hoped I might be clear of the country.

62. We acknowledge with gratitude the Almighty power which has protected us through so many dangers, and brought us back in safety.

63. The story of our return is soon told. Not a shot was fired. The villagers, as we retired, flocked around us; and although Poiboy had not come in at Sellam, his not doing so was the abject fear of a boy. Three of his head muntries accompanied me as hostages to Tipai Mookh. To have burnt his villages, whence some thousands of inhabitants had been driven for weeks to find scanty shelter in the forest, would have been cruelty, especially as my lines of communications while en route to Lalboorah had never been harassed.

64. This was the only case in which I threatened and did not keep my word. Scores of the inhabitants came within the enclosed compound of my hut, and there implored forgiveness and tendered submission.

65. The above is a slight sketch of the proceedings of the Cachar Column, Loshai Expeditionary Force. On our return to Tipai Mookh the hostages were released, and other Loshais, who had hung about us pretty nearly from first to last, left us with apparent regret.

66. The Loshais (particularly those living in the heart of the country) are far from being the savages we supposed. They are to me a highly interesting intelligent race, given at present in war to savage habits, but I am convinced that they are capable of being brought gradually into a state of high civilisation.

67. It is a gratifying part of my duty to bring to notice the services of the officers to whom I am especially indebted.

68. To the civil officer of the column, Mr. Edgar, I return my best thanks for the energy with which he performed his difficult duties, and for his cordial co-operation. He accompanied me into action.

69. To the officers of the staff I am especially indebted. Lient. col. Roberts' untiring energy and sagacity are beyond all praise; working without guides, even without map and geography, thwarted by the Loshais, whose game was to delay our progress, he seemed never at a loss; but, not only in his own department was it that he exerted himself, whether piloting the advanced guard through the trackless forest, or solving a commissariat or transport difficulty, his powerful aid was willingly given.

70. The deputy inspector general of hospitals, Dr. Buckle, C.B., was indefatigable in his department. When at leisure he was constantly to be seen administering relief to all who required it; whether officers or coolies, it was all the same. He brings to notice especially the services of Dr. White, Assistant surgeons Harvey, Nicholson, and Monteath.

71. Captain Thompson, brigade major, ably sustained the very high opinion I had already formed of his merits and abilities.

72. Captain Butter, my aide de camp, deserves my best thanks for the alacrity with which, under difficult circumstances, my orders were conveyed to the detachments on the march and in action.

73. Lieut. colonel Davidson, and the officers of the Commissariat Department, carried out their duties to the best of their ability, with the means at their disposal. Captain Marriott was indefatigable in the performance of his work.

74. Captain Blackwood, and the officers of the R.A., nobly sustained the reputation of the corps; the word "difficulty" was unknown to them.

75. Captain Harvey and the Sappers were indefatigable in pioneering and driving roads through almost impenetrable forest, and along rocky mountain sides.

76. Of regimental officers, Colonel Stafford, 22nd Punjab N.I., Colonel Rattray, c.s.i., 42nd N.I., and Lieut. colonel Nuthall, 44th N.I., deserve special mention. They commanded the advanced wings of their regiments. Each wing had a share in the actual fighting of the column. The 44th N.I. had most opportunities, and have earned a brilliant reputation for themselves and Colonel Nuthall. Captain Lightfoot and Captain Robertson, who were with the advanced wing of the 44th, deserve special mention. The latter commanded the advance guard on the 25th January, and to his cool courage, under a heavy fire, much of our success is due.

77. Major Moore and the officers of the coolie corps, performing from first to last a most disagreeable duty, devoted themselves wholly to their work. Major Moore's example acted as a stimulus to all around him. Captain Hedayut Ali, whose services have been of the greatest importance, has already received my thanks, and the thanks of the Bengal Government.

78. The police under Mr. Daly did good service, patrolling the roads, escorting the post, and performing other duties as required. Mr. Daly was with me during the military operation at Kholel, and afforded me every assistance.

79. I beg to mention and thank with especial praise the services of Mr. Patch, the Sylhet district superintendent of police, who was placed at my disposal by the Bengal Government for the boat service between Mynadbur and Tipai Mookh. For three months and a-half he has been travelling up and down the Barak, performing with intelligence and cheerfulness as disagreeable a duty as I could well imagine.

80. Mr. Pitman and the officers of the telegraph department afforded me invaluable aid; they made no difficulties, but did their work ably and efficiently.

I must not omit to bring to notice the severe strain which has been borne by the civil authorities in the supply of boats, coolies, and supplies, especially on the Collector of Dacca and Sylhet, and the Deputy Commissioner of Cachar. But, while I feel thankful for their co-operation, I have some delicacy in saying much on a subject which more legitimately comes under the report of the Commissioner of Dacca.

81. In conclusion, to the whole of the officers, non-commissioned officers, and men of the column I return my very best thanks. Some were more conspicuously brought to the front than others, but all did well the duties assigned to them.

82. I beg to enclose a sketch map, showing the line of route taken from Mynadbur to Lalboorah's village, and also a list of the marches, with the latitude, longitude, and elevation of the several encampment grounds.

Field Force Order by Brig. gen. G. Bouchier, c.b., commanding Cachar Column, Loshai Expeditionary Force. No. 64, dated Cachar, March 19, 1872.

1. On the breaking up of the Cachar Column, Loshai Expeditionary Force, the Brig. gen. commanding feels deep pride in the reflection that he has received the congratulations of the late Viceroy, of the Governments of India and Bengal, and of H.E. the Commander-in-Chief on its services.

2. The Brigadier general does not presume to offer an opinion as to whether the success of the column has equalled the expectations of the Government, but he has unfeigned pleasure in recording his belief that its discipline, energy, and devotion to the service could not have been surpassed.

3. From the beginning of November, when the troops were first put in motion, to the present time, every man has been employed in hard work, cheerfully performed, often under the most trying circumstances of heat and frost, always bivouacking on the mountain side, in rude huts of grass or leaves, officers and men sharing the same accommodation, marching day by day over precipitous mountains, rising at one time to 6,600 feet, having made a road fit for elephants from Luckepore to Chipowee, a distance of 103 miles, the spirits of the troops never flagged, and when they met the enemy they drove them from their stockades and strongholds until they were glad to sue for mercy.

4. The history of the expedition from first to last has been sheer hard work.

5. On the advanced wings of the 22nd regiment N.I., under Colonel Stafford, the 42nd regiment N.I., under Colonel Rattray, c.s.i., and the 44th regiment N.I., under Lieut. colonel Nuthall, the hardest work has fallen; each has shared in the actual fighting, the 44th more than either of the other corps; but to the officers in the rear most important duties were assigned, in protecting a line of communication extending over 110 miles from Tipai Mookh to Vonole's stronghold of Chamfai, and watching through spies the attitude of the inhabitants of the neighbouring villages, conveying provisions and the post, and keeping the road constantly patrolled. The frontier police did equally good service with the troops in this way. Each field officer in the rear had assigned to him a certain number of posts, for which he was responsible, and to their vigilance may be attributed the fact that our communications have not for a day been interrupted.

6. Young officers may especially feel glad at having had such an opportunity of gaining experience in mountain warfare.

7. Before taking leave of the column, the Brigadier general would tender his heartfelt thanks to the officers, civil and military, non-commissioned officers and soldiers who for so many weeks have co-operated with him, and to whom he feels he is entirely indebted for any success which may have attended the operations. He will have much pleasure in bringing their conduct, and that of the officers of the several departments, civil and military, with the column to the notice of H.E. the C. in C. for submission to the Government of India.—By order, (Signed) H. THOMSON, Captain, Brigade Major.

THE SANSKRIT COLLEGE.

From C. Bernard, Esq., officiating secretary to the Government of Bengal, to the Director of Public Instruction, Calcutta, May 17, 1872.

General Department.—Education.

SIR,—In continuation of former correspondence on the subject of reorganising and reducing the staff of the Sanskrit College, I am directed to inform you that the Lieutenant governor having, as you are aware, at an early stage of the discussion, expressed his willingness to consider this matter with reference to the wishes of many members of the Hindoo community, has had interviews with Pundit Issur Chunder Vidyasagar and the Principal of the College, and has taken opportunity of otherwise discussing the matter. He finds the suggestions of the gentlemen whom he has named, and of other competent persons, to be so moderate and reasonable that he has much pleasure in being able substantially to comply with their wishes, pending further trial of the arrangements now to be made. I am accordingly desired to communicate the Lieut. governor's present views and instructions.

2. The term "abolition" has been erroneously used in regard to the Chair of Hindoo Law. The Lieut. governor only sanctioned in ordinary official course the proposal of the Director of Public Instruction to take the opportunity of the retirement of one of the Sanskrit Professors to redistribute the duties and reduce their numbers. It was and is intended that the teaching of Hindoo Law shall be fully maintained. There will still remain three Professors and one Assistant Professor for the instruction in the higher Sanskrit learning of students numbering no more than twenty-nine in the past year and twenty-three in the present year, and who devote only a portion of their time to Sanskrit, since they receive at the same time a high English education in several branches. The Lieut. governor does not understand that the gentlemen whom he has consulted seriously object to this arrangement. The Sonatun Dhrama Sobha, in a communication addressed to his Honour, seem fully to accept it. The only question is as regards an increase to the salary of Professor Mohesh Chandra. Looking to the distinguished character and position of that eminent Professor, the Lieut. governor is willing again to consider the question of his salary. His Honour learns from the Principal that the subject of Smriti, or Hindoo Law, is now taught in a most satisfactory manner by the Professor, in addition to his other duties. He accordingly sanctions a personal allowance of Rs. 50 per mensem as an addition to the Professor's salary, subject to any eventual re-arrangement of the staff when we have experience of the working of present changes. The arrangement in regard to the reduction in the number of Sanskrit Professorships and redistribution of the duties has been carried out, and his Honour is very glad to know that it is working in so satisfactory a manner.

3. The really strong feeling on the part of the native gentlemen interested in the Sanskrit College the Lieut. governor finds to be in favour of the retention of some English classes in that institution. On that subject, too, the learned Principal, and the other gentlemen whom his Honour has consulted, have shown the utmost willingness to make reasonable concessions, and his Honour is quite disposed to meet their views as far as he can. It is generally conceded that the retention in the Sanskrit College of the two higher classes of English literature cannot be justified, and that students desirous of going in for the B.A. degree in English may properly attend the English classes of the Presidency College, which are, in fact, under the same roof as those of the Sanskrit College; a special arrangement, however, will have to be made in regard to fees. But there is a strong desire to maintain the two first College classes teaching up to the First Arts standard. The Lieut. governor has had much doubt whether the number of students in these classes, only sixteen at present, is sufficient to justify this course. But, looking to the considerations urged by the Principal and others, to the fact that the Presidency College classes are already very full, and to the fact that, though the two Colleges are so near together, the fees at the Presidency College are much higher—looking, also, to the evidently strong feeling of the Hindoo community on the subject, the Lieut. gov. has been induced to sanction the arrangement experimentally, on the understanding that everything that is possible will be done to throw the doors of these classes as wide open as possible, and to obtain a larger number of students, no persons of Hindoo race and good moral character being rejected on any class or religious ground. The Lieut. governor has accordingly arranged with the Principal to recall to the College Baboo Syama Churn Gangoolie, and his place at Maldah should be otherwise filled. This will enable the Principal to carry on the two college classes to the First Arts standard, and the Lieut. governor sanctions for the present that arrangement.

4. His Honour hopes that the reorganisation of the Sanskrit College will be thus arranged in a manner which will content those who are interested in the well-being of the College, while some legitimate saving of an excessive expenditure is at the same time effected. He desires again especially to acknowledge the fair and moderate spirit in which he has been met by the gentlemen interested in the College whom he has consulted.

I have the honour to be, Sir, your most obedient servant C. BERNARD, Offic. Sec. to the Govt. of Bengal.

Home.

SCINDE, PUNJAB, AND DELHI RAILWAY COMPANY.

The annual general meeting of this company was held on June 28th, at the London Tavern; Mr. W. P. Andrew in the chair. The report, an abstract of which has appeared, was held as read.

The Chairman, in moving the adoption of the report, called attention to an item of £31,556 in the accounts charged to supense account; it had been expended in repairs of damage done by the unprecedented floods to the Company's bridges. They had not yet arranged as to whether those extensive repairs should be charged to revenue or capital. Of course, all ordinary repairs were charged to revenue as they occurred, but the damages that had been caused by the great floods last year were so extensive that they would involve considerable outlay. The Company's bridges were the most wonderful structures ever erected in that part of India. They crossed the most difficult rivers in the world, and there was no doubt that their officers had a great deal to contend with. Their agent Major-General Abbott, had expressed the highest appreciation of the company's officers, and of the great ability and activity of Mr. J. Harrison, the company's chief engineer, in repairing the damage done by the floods so as to restore the communication as soon as possible after it had been interrupted. He believed that no company could be more faithfully served. He had often complained of the slow progress made with the improvement works in the harbour of Kurrachee, but he believed that before many months had elapsed the harbour would be prepared to receive the largest vessels. Everything was now being done to make it the most desirable port in India for European vessels. He trusted that all former anticipations with respect to it would be fully and entirely accomplished. This harbour was a great matter for them, as their Scinde line ran from the harbour of Kurrachee to Kotree, in the Indus, 106 miles in length, and the tonnage carried over it was heavier than that of any other line in India. From Kotree the company's flotilla navigated the Indus up to Mooltan, and notwithstanding the dulness of trade and other impediments, they were unable to convey all the traffic that was brought to them. This fact proved the want of the "missing link"—he meant the proposed railway along the banks of the Indus from Kotree to the Punjab line at Mooltan. No other means would so effectually accommodate the very large traffic they would have between Kurrachee and the Punjab. They had often referred to the great capabilities of the Punjab for traffic and produce of various kinds. It was said that the Government intended to make the "missing link" on the metre gauge, but he hoped they would adopt better advice. The traffic receipts on the railway were augmenting considerably. The receipts for the current year on their lines had averaged above £1,000 per week more than for the corresponding period in 1871. The directors were fully impressed with the belief that great success would result from a proper and liberal development of the undertaking, but that could not be accomplished until the completion of railway communication between Kotree and Mooltan. The East Indian Railway Company had come to an arrangement with them for the supply of coal to their terminus near Delhi. This he trusted would enable them to work at less cost and to avoid accidents from wood fuel, as they carried wool and cotton, which were liable to injury from fire. The Government proposed to make extensions from existing railways having a gauge of 5½ feet by means of narrow gauge lines of 3 feet 3½ inches; he hoped they would not persist in that course, as they would not only have a break of gauge, but an inferior mode of communication, which they would have to alter at considerable inconvenience and cost. If the narrow gauge were persisted in, confusion and disorder would arise; nothing could be more injurious than introducing the narrow gauge in the central communication of a country. The Russian Government were acting more wisely. They made the break of gauge, or difference of gauge, on the frontier, and maintained the ordinary gauge throughout the interior of the Russian Empire. It was a singular fact that as England and America were just retracing their steps from the error of having two gauges, the Indian Government should be going back to the same error.

Sir D. F. M'Leod, deputy chairman, seconded the resolution for the adoption of the report. He remarked that the company had to bridge over very treacherous rivers. The Beas bridge had been a serious difficulty, as the course of the river was subjected to great changes. He had, however, the fullest confidence in the future of the railway; and believed that the traffic from the Punjab to Kurrachee would exceed all the expectations that had been entertained with respect to it. (Hear, hear.)

After some observations by Mr. Minton and other shareholders, resolutions were passed adopting the report.

THE COMMITTEE ON INDIAN FINANCE.

On Monday, June 28, Mr. Laing's examination was continued. In addition to the evidence reported the following was given:—When he (Mr. Laing) was in India he had known the Governor-General in Council sanction large expenditure out of revenue, irrespective altogether of the council sitting at the India Office. It did not matter to the former whether there was a council at home or not in some cases of financial requirements. The interference of the Secretary of State, in matters of military finance in particular, had been disregarded in certain extreme cases. Mr. Laing said he advised the exercise of a generally economical policy in the affairs of India, coupled with a better system of keeping accounts by the executive and clerical establishments. That would be a safe course to pursue, according to his own experience and knowledge of India's past and present financial systems. He would not advise the abandonment of the revenue derived from opium, as it was an important source of income. He thought favourably of the scheme of State railways, because, apart from their political objects, they would, when completed, further develop the traffic of the other railways. If the State railways would cost twelve millions, he did not consider that a bad investment. If they should be, meantime, unproductive, still the new lines were wanted; and he would rather see them made than depend altogether upon the old lines, or getting no new branches. Politically, the State railways would become pre-eminently important in protecting the frontier.

On Tuesday, 2nd inst., Mr. Laing's examination was continued, and he produced papers and gave explanations relative to his previous answers. The inquiry was short, comparatively, and did not disclose anything not already referred to above.

Major-General Strachey was next recalled and examined upon a variety of matters connected with public works and engineering expenditure in India, viz., on railways, canals, military buildings, &c. The witness at the outset declared his opinion to be that the best mode of carrying out public works was by loans. With regard to the Public Works executive, he (General Strachey) might mention that the Government of India had required the establishment at Calcutta to keep separate ledger accounts for ordinary and extraordinary works. But this requirement had not been attended to because, in fact, the Calcutta authorities had no power to enforce upon other authorities, such, for instance, as the Governments of Madras and Bombay, the production of their accounts; hence there was no complete mode of auditing the accounts of any other than the Bengal Presidency. Reverting to public works in progress the witness admitted that the Supreme Government of Calcutta had unwisely gone on with too many road works simultaneously, which had placed them in the position of having to meet large demands upon the treasury at times least expected, and when most inconvenient.

Taking up, again, the question of the railways generally, Mr. Smith adduced the costly engineering difficulties and limited traffic of the Scinde, Punjab, and Delhi Railway as one instance of the present non-paying character of the extant lines, or some of them.

The witness explained that the net returns of this line were certainly very small at present, but the gross receipts had been good; it was the heavy engineering expenses of the line that took away from the profits.

Mr. Smith asked how General Strachey proposed to make the new State railways answer?

The witness replied that he understood the State railway from Mooltan to Kotree was expected to cost about £40,000 a year until completed. Great expectations of traffic were anticipated from the agricultural districts.

The next subject taken up was the great engineering experiment of the opening up of the unnavigable part of the Godavery river. The witness said that Government was in possession of estimates of the cost of completing those works. The calculation had been made that the engineering required for completing the opening of the river to Nagpoor would cost about £500,000. This would not include the supply of steamers, &c., to navigate the river for commercial objects.

Possibly it might be worth the consideration of such a commercial body as the Manchester Chamber of Commerce, whether they should find the capital to complete the Godavery works and supply the steamers, &c., with a view to cotton crops.

The day's examination of General Strachey concluded with an inquiry into the exports and imports of India.

On Friday Mr. C. de Costa, of the firm of Ashburner and Co., merchants, Bombay, was called and examined on the subjects of the general taxation of India, viz., the income-tax and the local and other taxes, cesses, and duties, local courts and police, the opium trade, imports and exports, army stores and transport service, public works, railways and canals, military buildings, the Land Improvements Acts of the Punjab and Rangoon, and a variety of other topics. Mr. de Costa's opinions were generally favourable to limitation of taxation, financial retrenchment, especially in regard to the reduction of charges for the transport of troops, which he, with the mercantile community of Bombay, considered might be very considerably reduced. Reductions might be easily made upon military stores, and more economy practised, indeed, in nearly every department of the State, including the Public Works Establishment, and the works to be carried out. Mr. de Costa expressed himself dissatisfied with the personal expenses of the Governor-General and Council of India, in-current in their annual seven months visit to Simla. If the business men of the Presidency community could pursue their avocations in the cities of Calcutta or Bombay, it might be supposed that Indian legislation and statesmen could do the same. Mr. de Costa's evidence was valuable in regard to irrigation works and canals, and he mentioned that the canals had the effect of taking the water away from the wells in large districts, thus depriving the native cultivator of a source of irrigation and water supply, while he had perhaps to be taxed for the canal he did not use.

Colonel Sir Arthur Cotton, the first projector of the Godavery Works, gave important evidence of the value of those works for navigation and irrigation purposes combined, but blamed the Government for only partially completing the works. Sir Arthur insisted that the canal system of India was preferable for purposes of traffic to railways, while the canals were better paying speculations and quite as useful in their character as railways. Only about £400,000 was required to complete the Godavery Works, and render them of immense importance to the trade, commerce and agriculture of India. What was wanted was a through system of water communication from end to end of the country. He (General Cotton) had a scheme for cutting canals so as to provide for all the irrigation, navigation, and traffic wants of the people.

Miscellaneous.

J. H. ASTELL, Esq., has been unanimously elected chairman of the East India Company, in room of Colonel Sykes, M.P., deceased.

BILLS ON INDIA.—Tenders for £600,000 in bills on India were received on Wednesday, the 3rd inst., at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta, £374,700; to Bombay, £200,000; and to Madras, £25,300. The minimum price was fixed, as before, at 1s. 10½d. on all the Presidencies. Tenders on Calcutta and Madras, at 1s. 10½d. will receive about 16 per cent.; on Bombay, at that price, also about 16 per cent.; above, on Bombay, in full. The average rate on Calcutta and Madras was 1s. 10½d.; and on Bombay, 1s. 10½d.

THE BOMBAY DIOCESAN ASSOCIATION had its annual services on June 20. An earnest sermon was preached at Christ Church, St. Pancras, in the morning, by the Bishop of Hereford, who quoted a letter from the bishop to the secretary, saying—"I found at least so much absence of prejudice and positive interest in Christianity that the educated persons came readily to hear me. . . . I do not mean that any number of Brahmans are at present likely to become Christians, though I should never be surprised to hear of a movement on a large scale in the direction of Christianity. I mean only that Christianity is recognised as a subject on which they are willing to reason, and as a fact which must take its place in this part of the world as deserving thought and consideration."

EXPORT OF BULLION.—The following exports of bullion are given in Mr. De Quetteville's Indian Circular of the 4th July:—By the Steamers of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company. From Southampton, per Cathay, June 27: Gold—Aden, £575; Alexandria, £430; Bombay, £1,800; Silver—Alexandria, £410. Per Massilia, July 4: Gold—Ceylon, £803; Madras, £273. By the Steamers of the Messageries Impériales. From Marseilles, per Peluse, June 13: Gold—Alexandria, £3,552. Per Donnai, June 23: Gold—Pondicherry, £160; Madras, £1,320; Calcutta, £480. The price of silver is quoted as bar, 5s. 0½d. per oz. standard; Mexican Dollars, old die, 5s. 2½d. per oz.; new die, 4s. 11½d. per oz.; 5 francs, 4s. 11d. per oz.

THE BANDA AND KIRWEE CLAIMS.—Some further documents regarding the interminable Banda and Kirwee prize claims have just been published, from which it appears that the India-office suffers from a not uncommon dislike to part with property once fallen into its hands. For many years past it had held a quantity of jewels and old native coins in charge for the claimants of the Kirwee prize-money, without attempting to convert them into bullion or current rupees. Ten years ago the Viceroy of that day had expressed his wonder at this piece of negligence, and only last year Lord Mayo delivered himself to the same effect, although he added his opinion that no further claims on that score should be allowed by the Indian Government. The captors, however, have persisted in demanding interest on the value of the booty thus negligently placed on one side, and, in point of justice, their claim appears admissible enough. But the Duke of Argyll declines to yield it, on the poor plea that the sum in dispute was never realised by the Government. In other words, it would seem that the Government stands on its technical right to evade the just consequences of its own culpable neglect. This may be a most convenient principle for the stronger party to enforce against the weaker; but how far it would carry its adherents in a court of equity is quite another question. If the arbitration on the Alabama claims should go against the English Government, we hope that the Duke of Argyll will be candid enough to apply the lesson to this case also.—Home News.

THE PENINSULAR AND ORIENTAL FLEET.—The powerful fleet of steamships owned by the Peninsular and Oriental Company will in the course of a few months be reinforced by the addition of four new vessels, of 2,723 tons and 450-horse power nominal each, respectively named the Cathay, Hydaspes, Malwa, and Bokhara, the two first-named built and engined by Messrs. Denny Brothers, of Dumbarton, and the two latter by Messrs. Caird and Co., of Greenock. The Cathay left Southampton on June 27 with the heavy Indian mails, under command of Captain R. T. Dundas, and after landing the mails at Alexandria she will proceed through the Suez Canal to Bombay with a very large cargo, consisting chiefly of Manchester goods, and will then be sent to China. The Hydaspes will be ready in August, and the other two vessels early in next year. The following are the Cathay's leading dimensions:—Length between perpendiculars, 369ft. 8in.; breadth of beam, 39ft. 3in.; depth from top of floor to spar deck, 29ft. 4in.; registered tonnage, 1884.27; gross tonnage, 2982.7. She is fitted with Griffiths' solid four blade propeller. Accommodation is provided for 130 first and 50 second-class passengers, and 2,000 tons of cargo. The vessel's performances during a preliminary trial were most satisfactory. In addition to the four vessels above-named, Messrs. Denny Brothers have contracted with the Peninsular and Oriental Company to construct four steamers of 2,513 tons and 450 horse-power respectively, to be named the Venetia, Lombardy, Guelior, and Nizam. When these are completed the company's fleet will number fifty vessels, all screws, with the exception of the Nyanza, Delta, and Massilia. It is understood that the Nyanza is shortly to be converted into a screw, and the Delta and Massilia will be sent out for employment in the company's service on the Chinese rivers.

THE ALBERT ARBITRATION AWARD.—Lord Cairns has issued his first award in the Albert Life Assurance Company Arbitration. The period covered is from the passing of the Arbitration Act, May 25, 1871, to June 7, 1872. The greater part of the decisions now formally given have been anticipated by the judgments delivered by the arbitrator from time to time in open court on the cases which have been brought before him. Lord Cairns heard the cases of claimants, 124 in number, and the decisions arrived at are given in a book of minutes of proceedings. The more important points are that as to the valuation of annuities the arbitrator awards that an annuity in respect of which a claim is established against a company in liquidation is to be valued as at the date of the order to wind up the company, according to the table on which the annuity was granted if accessible, and where not obtainable, or where inapplicable, then, according to the Government Annuity Tables, the assumed interest being 4 per cent. An established claim on a policy is also to be valued as at the date of the winding-up, and these are to be determined on the one hand by the present value of the reversion of the sum assured, and on the other hand by the present value of the future annual premiums. The valuation tables are to be the Seventeen Offices' Experience Tables, and the assumed interest 4 per cent. The premium taken into account is to be the pure premium, which means the premium paid, and is calculated will provide for the risk only without addition for office expenses. The difference between the two values so ascertained is to be the value of the policy, and interest is to be paid as from the winding-up of the company until the day of payment. All loans on policies are to be paid, and there is no right to set off the amount of valuation against the sum lent. Suspended premiums and the interest thereon is not a personal debt recoverable from the policy-holders, but is to be deducted out of the dividends, and the like rule applies in the case of premiums and interest on half-credit policies. The claims have been accordingly valued, and the rights of all persons adjusted under the direction of the arbitrator. Liquidation of the eleven associated companies has been carried on under the arbitrators' direction, and the results thereof, as on the 7th of June, 1872, are given in detail in the award. The great hindrance to the progress of the arbitration seems to have been the difficulty experienced in realising the assets, and in the case of every company the nominal amount of the calls and the actual produce bears a very suggestive comparison. But this is not to be wondered at when it is remembered that most of the amalgamations took place many years ago, as is testified by the large proportion of contributories who are described in the award as "representatives of deceased shareholders." In many cases the estates of these people have been distributed. Messrs. Price and Young, the joint official liquidators, have had more than two thousand shareholders to deal with, and all of them naturally more or less reluctant to pay; but, with the arbitrator to urge them on, and his lordship or his assessor always accessible, the liquidators have been able to push on the liquidations with a speed that has fairly astonished the solicitors who have been used to the profitable tedious process of liquidations in Chancery.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, MONDAY, July 1.—THE SUEZ CANAL.—Replying to Mr. B. COCHRANE, Lord ENFIELD said her Majesty's Government had made a suggestion through Sir Henry Elliot, that the increase of dues on the Suez Canal should be temporarily postponed; but yesterday afternoon information reached the Foreign-office that the agent of the Canal Company stated that, the Council of Administration at Paris having decided that the new tariff should come into operation on the 1st of July, he was unable to postpone the date as recommended by her Majesty's Government.

PETITIONS PRESENTED.—The following petitions from Indian officers have been presented during the week:—By Mr. STARKIE, from Lieut. colonel W. Borthwick, of the Retired List of the Madras Army, praying that the House will recognise his claim to compensation for loss of bonus, and to be treated as the English officers who are compensated for the abolition of purchase.—By Mr. DYCE NICOL, from Capt. H. Thornburn, of the Retired List of the Madras Army, praying for redress as granted to certain officers of the late Indian Army by the Army Regulation Act, 1871.

Spirit of the Home Journals.

INDIA IN PARLIAMENT.

The Civil Service Gazette thinks that the best plan that could be adopted would be to promote the return of distinguished Anglo-Indians to the House of Commons. Such men as the late Colonel Sykes, Mr. Eastlake, Sir Charles Wingfield, Sir Henry Rawlinson, the late Mr. Wylie, and others whom it would be easy to designate are typical of the class we should like to see more represented in St. Stephen's, and they might be relied on to look after the interests and the affairs of India quite as well as if they were sent direct from Calcutta, Bombay, or Madras. Whenever an Indian question has been discussed during the last fifteen years, Colonel Sykes was sure to be present to give the subject the benefit of his shrewd sagacity and his sterling common sense. Poor Mr. Wylie was returned to Parliament, but held his seat only for a short time, and was cut off in the bloom of early manhood. Sir Henry Rawlinson often gave the House of Commons the benefit of his great ability and experience, until his appointment to the Indian Council necessitated his retirement from Parliamentary life. Why the Director-General of the Ordnance should sit in the House of Commons and a member of the Indian Council be excluded we are unable to comprehend. Mr. Disraeli once said that if a question regarding Central Asia came before the House of Commons, every member would instinctively look to Sir Henry Rawlinson for instruction and advice. We regard it, therefore, as a great calamity that the Secretary of State for India cannot have the benefit of his advice without Parliament being deprived of his very valuable presence. We think also that it would be highly desirable that certain members of the Indian Civil Service who, at their retirement are sometimes in the prime of life, should be solicited to become members of the House of Commons, and that the political managers should promote their return by constituencies over whom they possess influence. Great benefit would most certainly be derived from this practice. Further, we think that English members should demonstrate their interest in India by attending the debates affecting the Empire. When the Indian Budget is introduced the Minister usually addresses the chair really as well as theoretically, for he is faced by an array of almost empty benches. A few Anglo-Indians, who happen to be in Parliament, and fewer still of such conscientious English members as Mr. Alderman Lusk, feel sufficient interest in the affairs of India to listen to the financial schemes which are proposed from year to year. There is room for great improvement in this respect, for, if we profess to legislate for India, our legislators should not shrink from the performance of the necessary duties.

THE RHEA GRASS MACHINE.—The Indian public care little for the failures or chagrins of competitors; what they want to know is, whether there is a likelihood of Lord Mayo's handsome prize yielding a profitable return. If, in response to the offer, India obtains a machine which at a moderate cost will effectively prepare for market one of its best fibres, now comparatively useless, then a great success will have been gained alike by the inventor and the country. We begin to think that this is the case. On Thursday week (May 23rd) H. E. Lord Northbrook thought fit to deviate from his route to Simla and pay a flying visit to Saharunpore and the Botanical Gardens of that ilk. There he found at work the fibre machine of Mr. John Greig left, as we understand, in undisputed possession of the field, and proving itself a perfect success. His Excellency and staff expressed themselves abundantly compensated for turning out of their way when they witnessed the performance of this remarkably complete and powerful machine. The time when the China grass flourishes in succulent green stalks has gone by, but Mr. Greig's machine takes no account of the toughness and dryness of the now brown withes. As fast as they can be fed into the machine—after the manner of our English threshing machine—the beautiful white fibre is turned out at the other end like a shower of silken skeins several feet in length. The difficulties to overcome in effecting the complete treatment, without intervention of manual labour, of this previously intractable grass, were very perplexing, and we cannot but think that the success of Mr. Greig's machine is a notable incident in the progress of mechanical adaptation. It is also highly satisfactory for us to remember here that this result has been aided by the foresight and persevering patronage of one of our Bombay native merchants, now deceased. The next object to be aimed at is the growth of sufficient China grass to keep this fine and powerful machine at work; and, as we have aforetime pointed out, as obstacles to attaining that end, there are the two great difficulties of Indian agriculture—irrigation and manure. We should not feel so much interest in this machine if we did not suppose that some inexpensive adaptation of it will be available for the service of one or other of the coarser fibres which now grow wild and to waste all over India. There is a "scutcher" attached to Mr. Greig's machine, which can be worked either with or without it. This was also shown at work during his Excellency's visit to Saharunpore; and we trust Lord Northbrook has not been so dazzled with the silken tresses of the fair Rhea, that he is likely to forget the claims of the Cinderella who dwells among the aloes and agaves, the hemps of several kinds, the moonj and other tough sedges which now rot away on every river side. Can all these matters be safely left to the Agricultural Department? We fear that would lead to disappointment. The public, native as well as European, must still help itself in these matters, if any durable progress is to be made.—Times of India.

THE HISTORY OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE IN INDIA.

FROM THE

APPOINTMENT OF LORD HARDINGE

COMPANY.

BY

LIONEL JAMES TROTTER,

Late of the 2nd Bengal Fusiliers.

The first volume of this History embraces the period from Lord Hardinge's appointment in 1844 to the retirement of the Marquis of Dalhousie in 1856.

The second volume commences with the arrival of Lord Canning in India in 1856, and closes with his lordship's death in 1862. This being the most eventful period in the annals of the East India Company, including the Mutiny, great pains have been taken in its narration.

"Captain Trotter has done good service in providing the public with a sequel to a standard work. . . . And in every way his performance is worthy to take rank with that of his predecessor. . . . The thoroughly satisfactory manner in which the task has been performed is greatly to the author's credit. . . . We take our leave of the work, congratulating its author upon having produced an addition to the 'History of India' at once permanent in purpose and popular in execution; acceptable in every way to the wants of the public, and especially adapted for the enlightenment of young members of the local service, to whom the modern annals of the country which they help to administer are of far more importance than the history of remote periods having little or no relation to the present day."—Standard.

"Both the plan and execution of the work are deserving of high praise. Full of interest and animation, and narrates with clearness and brevity all that took place during the period of which it treats. . . . The second volume of Mr. Trotter's history possesses the same merits by which the first was distinguished. It is written with great animation, and often with considerable graphic power. It tells its story with perspicuity and without needless or tiresome digressions. It avoids as far as possible that controversial vein into which Indian politicians and historians are alike prone to fall, and it is as impartial as any work is likely to be which deals with times so near our own. . . . The narrative of the spirit-stirring events of the mutiny will of course have the greatest attraction for most readers, and it is in truth the best, as it is the principal part of the present volume. . . . It appears to us that Mr. Trotter has been eminently successful in his treatment of a very exciting and interesting period of recent history."—London Review.

"The volume is full of interesting matter, comprising every event of importance during the exciting period of the rebellion, told in a concise, straightforward, and impartial manner, unincumbered by those copious extracts from documentary evidence which often serve no other purpose than increasing the bulk without adding to the usefulness of a work of this description."—Observer.

"Captain Trotter's reflections are few. . . . He has his own views, though he does not force them upon us in detail. . . . All this proves him to be far above the narrowness of the average Anglo-Indian. He speaks out boldly, too, in defence of Lord Gough. . . . A word as to our author's descriptive powers: they are such as his lighter writings would lead us to expect. . . . Whatever he has to tell Captain Trotter tells it in an animated and picturesque style. The night on the field at Ferozeshahur is admirably painted; so is the grand success of Goojrat. The disarming of the veterans of the Khalsa . . . is a striking scene. Captain Trotter's book opens up many other interesting questions; it is full of notices of social changes; it points out the specially unfortunate way in which the annexation of Oudh was managed."—Fortnightly Review.

"Here we have before us the first volume of an eminently readable history. . . . The arrangement of the matter, the style, and, above all, the spirit which pervades his pages, are worthy of great commendation. Mr. Trotter is singularly free from the faults of a partisan writer. . . . The volume concludes with a masterly criticism on Lord Dalhousie's character and services."—Calcutta Englishman.

"We cannot say that he has dealt unjustly by Lord Canning's memory. . . . A well-considered volume, in which the heartiest acknowledgments are paid to Lord Canning for his temperate wisdom at a time when there was no man more abused than he. . . . He writes thoughtfully, yet with a soldier's sense of the stir of a brisk military narrative. His history of this great struggle is full and impartial. . . . We need not follow him through his vigorous rehearsal of the well-known incidents. It forms a very lucid history, the several parts being well planned and well grouped, and no important point being omitted or misrepresented."—Examiner.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.

BILIOUSNESS, DISEASE OF THE LIVER.—Through imperfect drainage, or uncleanly habits, the hot summer's sun will cause the atmosphere to be surcharged with deleterious exhalations, which will produce fevers and irritations of the bowels. To check the undue action of the liver, usually the first indication of febrile complaints, the Pills invented by Professor Holloway stand unrivalled. These Pills are so cheaply and so easily purchased, that none need suffer either from nausea, indigestion, disordered liver, dizziness, or torpid bowels, or, in a word, from any functional irregularity. These Pills produce a happier effect on the digestive organs than any other medicinal compound, whether mineral or vegetable. By their means any person can easily secure robust health.

MICROSCOPICAL investigation has proved that the decaying substances which ac- cumulate between the teeth contain animal and vegetable parasites, and that the tooth powder, pastes, and washes in general use have no effect upon these.

Royal Dentifrice and Odontalgic Elixir (obtainable of every respectable Chemist and Perfumer) completely destroy and remove these animalcules, and also preserve and beautify the

At the SEVENTEENTH ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING of the Proprietors of the above Company, held at the LONDON TAVERN, Bishopsgate-street, in the City of London, on FRIDAY, the 28th June, 1872,

W. P. ANDREW, Esq., Chairman of the Company, presiding;

The following Resolutions were carried unanimously:
1. "That this Meeting receive and adopt the Report and Accounts of the Directors."

2. "That this Meeting cordially supports the action taken by the Directors in regard to the expenditure incurred in repairing the damage caused by the unprecedented floods of last year, which expenditure should, in the opinion of this Meeting, be charged exclusively to Capital; and that the Chairman and Directors be requested to represent the views of this Meeting on the subject to the Secretary of State."

3. "That this Meeting cordially approving the steps which the Directors have already taken for the protection of the Company's interests, would strongly urge upon them the necessity of continuing their exertions, with the view of preventing the introduction of the proposed narrow gauge in the centre of the Company's system."

4. "That Thomas Williams, Esq., be re-elected a Director of this Company."

5. "That Harry Borrodale, Esq., be re-elected a Director of this Company."

6. "That William Mackinnon, Esq., be re-elected Auditor of this Company."

7. Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail, are—from Bombay, June 21; Agra and Madras, June 19; Calcutta, June 18.

FROM the Bombay papers we get particulars of the piratical attack made from Basrah on the 12th June, on the English mail steamer Cashmere. A band of Arab ruffians from that neighbourhood made a sudden dash at the ill guarded vessel, as she lay off the port, broke open the treasure-chest, and carried off Rs. 42,000. In the fight that ensued one of the firemen was killed, the chief officer, the ship's clerk, and five others more or less badly wounded. Sir P. Wodehouse at once ordered Colonel Pelly, our Agent in the Gulf, to demand redress from the Turkish Government. The Pasha of Bagdad lost no time in suspending the Governor of Basrah, and ordering the despatch of troops in search of the robbers. The new Governor was to hold a court of enquiry into the affair, and use every effort to bring the pirates to justice. The agents of the British Indian Steam Company have already offered a reward of Rs. 5,000 for the capture of the offenders and the recovery of the plunder.

THE threatened strike of the money-lending class in the Santhal Country, to which we lately referred, appears from the Englishman to have been already carried out. The Mahájans over a large tract of country have positively refused to advance money to the Santhal husbandmen on the terms prescribed by the Indian Government; and the luckless Santhals already find starvation staring them in the face. It is also stated that the Government refuses to advance the money or the seed-grain requisite to avert so great a disaster, contenting itself with offers to employ on relief-works all such as are actually starving. If this be true, we may expect soon to hear of some murderous outbreak among these rude victims of blundering philanthropy. But we are loath to believe that it can be true.

LORD HOBART's kindly feeling towards the Mussulmans of Madras is already translating itself into action. In accordance with his request, a list of fifty Mohammedans qualified for public service has been drawn up, from which future vacancies up to a certain number will most likely be filled.

THE Marine Court of Inquiry into the late cyclone has at length delivered its verdict. Nearly all the shipmasters concerned are blamed for not taking due precautions at the right time. They tried, in spite of the signs around them, to believe that there would be no storm, and when it did come, they were not ready. Only three captains took down their topgallant masts. Nothing was done with the spare anchors. The masts were cut away too late. Four of the ships might have got out to sea, but three of the captains were on shore, and the mates were afraid to use their own judgment. The captains of four vessels, including the Hotspur, lose their certificates for ten months, and another for fifteen. The chief mate of the Sep-pings loses his for three months. This will be a lesson perhaps to skippers against leaving their vessels too long to themselves in a dangerous roadstead during doubtful weather.

WE observe that Mr. Rivett-Carnac is to act as Personal Assistant to the Financial Member of the Viceroy's Council. Mr. Dampier has accepted the place of Home Secretary to the Indian Government. Mr. Clive Bayley took his seat in the Supreme Council on the 13th June. Mr. Justice Holloway succeeds Mr. Arbuthnot as Vice-Chancellor of the Madras University. Mr. C. Mayhew, Acting Advocate-General, has been made Additional Member of the Viceroy's Legislative Council.

It is stated that Brigadier-General Brownlow will have the command at Rawal Pindi.

WE regret to hear that Mr. C. Saunders, Resident at Hyderabad, is laid up with fever.

LATEST telegrams from India report that one of the piers of the railway-bridge over the Sutlej has sunk three feet, so that all traffic is for the time suspended. This means another piece of misfortune for the Punjab and Delhi Company, we fear.

ACCORDING to Calcutta telegrams of July 10 and July 11 the Bank of Bengal has declared a dividend at the rate of 12 per cent. for the year, and reduced its rate of discount $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. From the same quarter we learn of fresh disasters caused by the stormy weather in the Indian seas. The Solway, bound for Bombay, and the Champion, for Bourbon, have both been wrecked, and the steamer Hankow has been totally lost, saving its crew, off Cape Guardafui.

By another telegram we learn that the supersession of the Turkish Pasha at Bagdad is regarded by the Indian Government as removing all cause for anxiety with respect to Turkish proceedings in the Persian Gulf.

THE Times correspondent telegraphs from Constantinople that, in spite of explanations offered by M. de Lesseps on behalf of his shareholders, the Porte has withheld its sanction from the new tariff which the company proposed to levy on the gross tonnage of all vessels passing through the Canal. The threatened innovation is denounced as contrary to the original firman of concession. This will doubtless be good news to many anxious shipowners and freighters who were loath to see the interests of the growing trade through the Canal imperilled by the suicidal policy of the French Company.

WE are glad to hear that one great oversight in the Horse Guards' Circular of March 19, which offered extra pensions to a certain number of artillery officers on the Indian lists, has at length been repaired by the India Office. The limit of service entitling to the extra pensions has now been wisely extended from forty to forty-five years; so that at the prescribed rate of £10 a-year more for each year of service an officer of forty-five years' service may retire on an extra pension of £400 a-year. Unluckily this amendment comes too late, we fear, to benefit officers in India who had been disqualified under the original rules, if it be true that the requisite number of retirements has already been filled up. Perhaps however this is not the case, or else a separate arrangement will be made for the benefit of the excluded officers.

THE loss which Indian interests have sustained by the death of Colonel Sykes appears likely to be in some respects made good by the election of Mr. J. F. Leith, as his successor in Parliament for Aberdeen. For some years a leading member of the Calcutta Bar, Mr. Leith must at any rate have formed some acquaintance with natives of various classes and with their distinctive ways and feelings. His knowledge of Indian law has since been steadily exercised before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, where his abilities brought him an enviable practice. A successful barrister means a more or less effective speaker, who is likely to make his way in the House of Commons. In this respect of ready speech the new member for Aberdeen will perhaps be regarded as an improvement on his predecessor.

LORD DALHOUSIE'S Minutes on the Wahábi movement in 1852 have lately been published as a Parliamentary paper. They are just what might have been expected from a shrewd self-reliant statesman of his high calibre. In one of them he informs the Commissioner of Patna that there seems no present ground for further proceedings against the Wahábi leaders of that city. At the same time he has "no doubt" that some of them have been corresponding with the fanatics beyond the border, and admits the need of some vigilance in the matter. The persons implicated are to be watched "in such manner as to give them no just cause of offence." He objects to the searching of houses without authority; but in the event of an armed gathering or a riot, the magistrate, after availing himself of the Commissioner's experience, will "take the proper measures for preserving the public peace," and so on. In a second Minute Lord Dalhousie refers to certain steps taken at Patna for the discovery of persons implicated in letters seized at Rawal Pindi. All that he has learnt however from various sources fails to create "any anxiety" in his mind. The Sitana plotters were no doubt doing their best, as they had done for years, to get up a holy war in India; but the terms in which they wrote convinced him that their efforts to obtain arms and recruits had not borne much fruit. Parties indeed from Patna had actually joined the Sitana camp, and he himself had seen "a sort of ballad" invoking all true Mussulmans to join the standard of the faith; but "the numbers of these Wahábis are known to be small, and there is no reason to suppose that there is any more movement or intrigue at present going on, than must at all times be expected among the Mussulmans of India." The magistrate of Patna was therefore directed to "keep his eye" on certain persons who were said to purpose leaving Patna with their followers for Swát or Sitána. These might be dealt with at any stage of their journey, seeing that the law was "amply sufficient" for the purpose. Suspected persons in the Punjab also were to be closely watched, and if evidence sufficient for their conviction could be obtained, "no leniency should be shown." In a third Minute he still looks on the affair as "insignificant," but directs that the Moonshiee of the cavalry regiment at Rawal Pindi and two other offenders should be tried by the Board, and the result laid before himself. Any native officials suspected of complicity should also be placed under examination. As for "the man at Hoshliarpore," he saw nothing to warrant his dismissal, since "the fact of his being a Wahábi was not considered a bar to his original appointment." The fifty minor culprits might be "dismissed with a warning," the men of substance among them being first required to give security. The idea of a police surveillance over them in their own villages he rejects as a likely source of "grievous oppression" for no adequate end. The men of the 64th might be tried before a magistrate, if there were sufficient grounds for a trial. With regard to the Sitána fanatics his Lordship was still for letting them alone "so long as they are quiet," for he had already "ironed enough in the fire on the North-Western frontier without heating another unnecessarily." These documents speak for themselves. It may be a question with some whether Lord Dalhousie gauged the full strength of the Wahábi movement; but there can be no doubt of his readiness to meet any danger in that direction with the weapons furnished him by the law, without fussiness or undue severity. It is certainly curious to compare his utterances in 1852 with the way in which the Bengal Government of 1857 proclaimed its firm belief in the innocence and loyalty of the Patna Wahábis, and punished one of its officers for presuming to act on a different opinion.

WE understand that the arrangements in connection with the forthcoming Autumn Manœuvres will not allow of officers of the Indian Army being attached to the Field Force; but passes will be given them, which will enable them to be present as spectators, on their making application to the Adjutant-General of the forces.

ON Friday night the House of Commons found time for a lively little debate on Mr. Eastwick's motion to place the Persian Mission under the direct control of the India Office, or else to relieve the latter of its undue share in the costs of that Mission. The motion in fact merely aimed at carrying out the recommendations of the Select Committee which sat upon the subject last year. In a long and masterly review of our past relations with Persia from the days of Shah Abbas to the present time, Mr. Eastwick fairly proved the far stronger claims of the Indian compared with the Foreign Office to deal with the foreign affairs of a country, whose frontier for 1,800 miles practically marches alongside that of India, and whose political and commercial interests have more in common with those of India than of any other country in the world. From 1602 to 1807, Persia had maintained a friendly intercourse with the East India Company. Then came the mission of Sir Harford Jones from England, and the beginning of a policy which tended to "cripple Persia in all her movements, and to drive her step by step into the arms of Russia." In 1823 Canning saw the wisdom of placing the Persian Mission once more under the Board of Control, but his policy was reversed in 1836 by Lord Ellenborough, who bore no love to the East India Company. Again in 1858 the Mission was retransferred to the charge of the India Office by Lord Malmesbury, who argued that England had practically no interest in Persia apart from her Indian possessions. No sooner however was Lord Russell in office, than everything was again reversed, and since that time, with the exception of Mr. Eastwick and Sir H. Rawlinson, no Indian officer has been directly employed in the Persian Mission, although fitter men for the purpose could not be found. Only the other day however, when Mr. Alison, the Foreign Office envoy, "never would or never could settle anything in Persia," it was found necessary to send two Indian officers, General Goldsmid and Colonel Pollock, to settle boundary disputes between Persia and her neighbours, Khelat and Afghanistan.

MR. EASTWICK exploded the stock arguments in favour of the present system. That India has nothing to do with Persia except in the Persian Gulf, involves an exception which embraces a trade of several millions, the Residency at Bushair, Muskat, and Bagdad, the Agency at Basra, the naval force in the Gulf, the lines of telegraph and steamers from Bushair to Kurrachee, for all which India pays, the treaties of the Indian Government with the Arab tribes on the Gulf, with the Imam of Muskat, the disputed sovereignty of Bahrein, and the slave trade which India pays to put down. How again could the Shah be "hurt and offended" at that being done which had already been done in the case of Sir H. Rawlinson? To keep Persia out of the Indian circle, in which all the other border States were steadily retained, meant that "Persia should be the focus of European intrigues, that when a war arises Persia would offer herself, first to one belligerent, and then to the other," that Indian refugees in Persia would be continually plotting against us in the name of Russia or some other European power. As for bringing Persia within the pale of European, that is, Russian influences, Mr. Eastwick strongly protested against a policy which would hasten the approach of Russia to the Indian frontier, and secure the inevitable collision between two great border Powers. He was rather for maintaining Persia as one of India's outposts. At the very moment when General Goldsmid was at Teheran, a Different races and classes of men dwell on the margin of this shallow water. The eastern strip is dotted with hamlets of fishers and salt-makers, and with the abodes of peasants, who "gamble at getting a rice crop from the temporarily dried-up shallows." In the south are boatmen, who carry to the Ganjam shore the surplus crops of Orissa. Westward are the wild hill races, who pick up a livelihood as they best can from hunting, wood-cutting, and fitful tillage. On the northern shores "skilled agricultural communities live behind dykes and embankments, reaping rich crops, but every fifth or sixth year ^{cattle and} their homesteads by the floods and fortunate if they can float on a rice-stack or a thatched roof till the waters subside." The island district of Párikud, on the eastern side, is ruled by a Raja, whose domains extend over seventy square miles, distributed into a number of village communities ordered after the old Aryan type. Brahman husbandmen pay a few pence an acre for land which costs the warrior class 1s. 3d., and the common peasants 6s. an acre. The soil is a fine sandy loam, liable to heavy floods. In 1866, out of 7,560 acres of tilled land, 6,900 were wasted by the floods. Below the peasant class come the wine sellers, washermen, fowlers, and so on. The Raja pays no rent to the Government, but holds his land by a military tenure, being bound to supply his quota of swordsmen at need. The Brahman landholder may only hold a certain quantity of land at the lowest rate. If he wants more he must pay more for it. The lower and most heavily taxed class of peasantry rank between the privileged classes and the semi-aboriginal low castes. There are no leases, and the crops at harvest-time are divided by appraisement between the landlord and his tenants. Salt is made in Párikud either by solar or artificial evaporation. In orthodox Orissa no respectable person will eat any but the sun-dried salt, which costs 8d. a hundredweight, or 13s. 4d. a ton. This however is raised by the Government duty to £9. 6s. 8d. a ton, a difference on the face of it clearly preposterous, whatever Mr. Hunter may say in defence of the existing salt-duties. The artificial salt, though somewhat dearer, is preferred by the lower classes for its greater strength. In 1866 all the salt-makers of Párikud were swept away by the famine.

On the northern shore of the Chilká, where the Dáya and Bhárgavi enter the lake, a great struggle is always going on between the husbandmen and the rivers. In spite of the 316 miles of dykes maintained by the Government in this, the Puri district, the tracts nearest the Chilká are always liable to floods. Hardly a year passes without a flood that ruins hundreds of homesteads. On the one side are the rivers, with their beds equal to the discharge of only half the water that is poured into them from above." On the other is the Chilká, where the prolonged southern monsoon piles up the water on the northern shores eight feet above the level of the other end of the lake. Between these opposing forces the wretched husbandmen fare as badly as might be expected. The floods vary in extent from year to year, but the damage they cause is very seldom trifling, and often tremendous. In 1866 for instance, 275 square miles of Puri district were drowned from five to forty-five days, with a depth of water ranging from three to ten feet. "More than 412,000 people were suddenly driven out of house and home, and found themselves in the middle of a boiling ocean. . . . Thousands of miserable families floated about on canoes, on bamboo rafts, on trunks of trees, or on rice-stacks, which threatened every moment to dissolve into fragments beneath them." Starving colonies might be seen perched on the high thatched roofs of their houses, while every banyan tree swarmed with shivering wretches. Sheep and goats were carried away by herds in the torrent. The plough cattle up to their necks in water gradually fell exhausted into the slime. If few lives of human beings were lost at first, numbers finally perished in the pitiless waters. Nearly two million hundred-weight of rice was destroyed in this one flood, representing a money value of £643,683.

How to avert these oft-recurring disasters is a question which some of the ablest heads in India have tried to answer, each in his own way. Among the schemes hitherto proposed to that end, the grandest, and seemingly the most effective, was that elaborated fourteen or fifteen years ago by Captain Harris, who proposed to lead off the surplus waters of the Mahánadi at a point some miles above the gorge through which it issues upon the plains. By means of a cutting through the Dáltalá Hill he would have given the great river of Orissa a new outlet into the Chilká Lake through the Munáguní, a tributary of the Dáya river. But the costliness and the preliminary hazards of such a scheme have hitherto delayed its adoption, for the Dáltala cutting "means the construction of an enormous artificial river, which should dash down a volume of water equal to two-thirds of the Ganges in the time of flood at an almost uncontrollable pace upon the plains."

In another chapter Mr. Hunter shows the full amount of damage wrought throughout Orissa by the great flood of 1866. More than 1,300,000 souls "suddenly found their homesteads submerged, and crops to the value of £3,109,472 were destroyed." This happened too just after the cruel famine of 1865-6, in which three-quarters of a million souls had died of hunger or disease. In 1866 moreover the land settlement expired, but a humane Government sacrificed many thousands a-year of future revenue by renewing the old leases for thirty years more. What indeed with remissions of land-revenue for floods and droughts, with the maintenance of embankments, with the outlay on relief works, and the sacrifice of all claims to enhanced revenue from the land, the Government loses £100,000 a-year, or two-thirds of the entire rental for the province.

Under the Native Dynasties Orissa appears to have yielded, chiefly from the land, a yearly income of four or five hundred thousand pounds, or about the same figure at which it stands in the books of its present rulers. But that sum of old represented about seven times its present value. The £168,286 now raised as land-revenue amounts only to a tenth of the yearly produce of the soil—so at least reckons Mr. Hunter—as compared with the three-fifths taken by former rulers, and still in fact enjoyed by the Hindu Rajah of Párikud. Of course we could not safely, even if we would, squeeze our native subjects as they were wont to be squeezed by native financiers. But Mr. Hunter agrees with those who think that we might fairly get much more than we do from the land of India, if the land-tax were calculated not in silver, but by a grain valuation, taken yearly, or revised at intervals of five years. As things are, we have to eke out a stationary land-revenue with all kinds of minor and less desirable imposts. "The secret of making India pay is the due conservation of the Land Tax; and in order to conserve the Land Tax, it must be estimated, not as in Orissa, upon the so-called rent of the landholder, but upon the actual produce of the soil." Until something of the kind is done, the growing needs of a government like ours can only be supplied by means of fresh taxes in a country where the value of silver has for the last twenty years been steadily declining. And fresh taxation is only another word in India for fresh incentives to popular discontent.

RUSSIAN ENTERPRISE.—II.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

"In the Macedonian period the productions of India and Bactria were carried down the Oxus to the Caspian sea; then over this sea to the mouths of the Araxes and Cyrus; after that by land to the Phasia, where they were again conveyed by water to the different Greek cities on the coasts of the Euxine sea."—Heeren's Researches, Vol. 2, p. 298.

SIR,—I have attempted to point out that the whole civilised world is interested in preventing Russia from obtaining possession of India. A new empire (of which Balkh might be the capital, restored to healthiness by regulation of the water supply) would not only destroy the Turkish Empire, but would dictate to the whole of Europe.

If we can look upon Russia with purely commercial eyes, we shall be delighted to see how much her Government is doing for the advancement of trade. Two railways will soon be completed, I understand, to Baku, on the Caspian, just opposite to the ancient mouth of the Oxus. The railway from Poti, on the Black Sea, through Tiflis and Elizabetopol, will reopen the ancient Greek route; but how much pleasanter will be the iron horse and its train than the ancient modes of conveyance! The second railway, from Rostov, near the mouth of the Don, through Daghestan to Baku, will enable the Russian Government to have perfect command of the navigation of the Caspian at all seasons of the year, and to send reinforcements of artillery and rockets even in the depth of winter, if necessary, to protect the banks of the Oxus after it has been again led into its ancient channel.

How puny, in comparison, are the efforts of the Turkish Government in Asia. The Ottoman Empire is said, in yesterday's Times, to have actually succeeded in constructing a railroad from Scutari to Ismid! Doubtless with English capital, and by the aid of English engineers. In how many years will this line be completed as far as Angora? Russia will have a railway to Balkh long before the Sublime Porte can succeed in constructing one from Constantinople to Bussorah. Tourists and excursionists will prefer the Russian to the Turkish line, and will appreciate excursion tickets to see the antiquities of Samarkand, Shuhr-i-subz, and Hissar, to hear the nightingales of Balkh, and to eat the fruits of Cabul. The ruby and other mines of Badakshan will attract the speculating world.

Meanwhile our Indian Government is disputing with the directors of the Scinde and Punjab Railway regarding the gauge on the lines from Hyderabad to Mooltan, and from Lahore to Attock, as though it could not foresee that double and even treble lines will be required to carry enormous quantities of merchandise and war material.

It is miserable economy which stints a few lakhs and loses an empire. The Indian Government doubtless fancies that it is performing the duty of good ballast in steadying rash enterprises, but its weight is so ill distributed that it causes numerous and ominous leaks. Let all the members of the Indian Government be bound down to complete the Hyderabad-Mooltan Railway before the beginning of 1875, or resign their appointments.—
Your obedient servant, T.

THE FUTURE OF THE NATIVE BAR IN INDIA.

The Pioneer observes that in France the lawyers have thrown themselves eagerly and hotly into public life; they have attacked successive Governments in a very damaging way; they come to the top in times of revolution, and their enemies accuse them of always furnishing a set of pushing democrats, or self-seeking shallow politicians who are clever enough to pull down, but are utterly without genius of construction. Now the main reason why lawyers in France are restless and worrying politicians is this, that in France, as in India, the bar is no avenue leading to high judicial appointments. In France as in India the bar and the bench are two separate departments of the profession of law, and judges are not necessarily selected from among the most eminent barristers. The consequence is that there exists a feeling rather of antagonism than of sympathy between the judge and the pleaders; and the two departments are distracted by a sort of jealousy into different adverse camps. It may be worth while to consider whether the Indian Bar may not be gradually impelled by similar causes and motives into the same sort of antagonism with the judges and into the same chronic state of war against Government. What we have to fear is that a system which follows the French plan of excluding pleaders from judicial appointments, and of making the magistracy a separate official caste, may in the long run alienate and discontent this important community, so as to tempt them to disaffection and to the habit of political intrigue. If, as we have hinted, European examples prove that an Indian Bar, not professionally allied to the judicature, is likely to affect political agitation and adverse criticism of the Government, then it may be feared that the native avocat will prove even a more shallow and less scrupulous politician than his learned brother in France. In France they are called declaimers, men who succeed by their practised facility of utterance, who can do great execution by their tongues, but who have no real faculty of insight or of action. Such persons might easily spring up among the quick-witted voluble natives of this country, who would move the masses by their rhetoric, and might even bring occasional hornet-swarms round the ears of an unready Government. It would be a great misfortune to bring such a class into existence in India, and a still greater misfortune to be forced to quarrel with them.

WASTE OF ENERGY IN INDIA.

The Madras Times holds that if in India we could only "take things in a quiet sort of way," we should greatly benefit the land, the people, and ourselves. That which is wanted is not the multitudinous and ever accumulating new measures which are daily introduced, but a gradually maturing and ripening of the measures that have already been inaugurated. The Anglo-Indian mind has latterly evinced a tendency to go-a-head in the matter of educational acts, spasmodic sanitation, brilliant corruscations of engineering, improvements which improve former improvements off the face of the globe, and the rest. Can't we do nothing for a little? Surely no one will affirm positively that some unlooked-for and untoward opportunity cannot possibly arise, and arise pretty soon too, for fairly exerting our powers of action. Yet we so live in the present day in India, as if our energies are never likely to be called into urgent request by stirring eventualities of real importance. This conduct, generally speaking, is in many matters something like that of a boy who is presented with his first watch. He winds it up half a dozen times a day. The hands do not move perceptibly faster, although perhaps the machinery gets injured, but it is his nature to be restlessly active in a matter relating to such a new and pleasing toy. The well-worn motto "the more haste the less speed" should be tattooed on the foreheads of most officials! In nothing does our waste of energy become so apparent as in our Bills, measures, Acts, et hoc genus omne. We do not say that many of the measures lately originated are utterly obnoxious or useless. But they are—almost all—hurried measures, measures for which either the country is unprepared, or upon which the minds of men are not made up. Local Funds Education in our own Presidency was a Bill for which the minds of half the body of Anglo-Indians and almost all natives were in part or totally unprepared. In another matter, too, we conspicuously show our exuberance of energy. We refer to prosecutions in this Presidency. What a bright example of this might be adduced from a recapitulation of Major Bowen's impetuosity upon many occasions! Also take up cases on the Mofussil. With what indecent speed are cases got up and gone through against individuals. They also consider the erection of public buildings. Do our readers remember the instance of the energetic measures taken to erect with the greatest speed a lighthouse at a southern port? And do they remember of hearing of the said structures subsidence? And then the instances of roads, barracks, and bridges erected in hot haste by engineers remarkable for wasting their energies to no purpose? Need we recall any one example out of the numerous instances of these? Need we make any especial reference to that peculiarly disgraceful specimen of a bridge in the south of this presidency, which in one day, as it were, was elaborately erected—

When down roll'd the river in flood next day
And swept the gingerbread structure away!

And thus in the matter of public buildings, there has not only been a waste of energy as to time but, as to costly elaborations.

A CAUSE OF THE RISE IN PRICES.

The Englishman points out that among the causes that have been assigned for the marked and indisputable rise of prices in this country during the last century, are prominently the influx of the precious metals caused by closer commercial and political relations with Europe; increased exportation of food grains in exchange, to a great extent, for the precious metals; diminution in the area of land devoted to the cultivation of such grains, and deterioration of the productive power of the soil itself. That the first two of these alleged causes have had a real and potent influence in producing the result in question is beyond doubt; the third we do not believe to be real, and, though in the unintermitted cultivation rendered possible by the profound peace and perfect security that have characterised the latter period of our rule, a probable argument might be found for the reality of the last, there is an utter want of conclusive evidence on the subject. There is, however, another cause, which, though so far as we are aware, it has received very little attention, may not improbably have exerted fully as powerful an influence as any of the others. The Malthusian theory is an unpopular one, but that it is pregnant with truth as regards a great part of Europe is demonstrable. Where it depends upon the choice of those concerned, whether and how soon they shall marry, and where prudence to any extent, however, limited, influences that choice, there can be no doubt that abundance or scarcity of the necessities of life must have more or less effect on population. The effect will be especially marked among a people who shrink from living below the standard to which they have been accustomed, and still more marked among a people generally bent upon improving that standard. In any case, given only the above conditions, and continued high prices must always tend to bring about their own remedy by checking increase of population. Sufficient attention has not, we think, been given to the fact that in India, owing to the peculiar social habits of the people, this guarantee for the continued adjustment of population to food production either does not exist, or exists in so limited a degree as to be practically inoperative. Marriage here does not depend upon the choice of those concerned, but is a necessity imposed by religion, and that at the earliest possible age. It is possible that, owing to the expensive character of the ceremonies required, a marriage, or its consummation, may, in a year of absolute famine or exceptional scarcity, be postponed; but this is a rare occurrence, and the postponement is probably only to the next season. Prudence on grounds of mere economy, after marriage, has probably very little influence on the result in any country, and less in India than elsewhere. The population are therefore practically powerless to accommodate their rate of increase to their means of sustenance. There would be no sensible diminution, in the number of marriages contracted, and probably none in that of the children born, if the average cost of the necessities of life were to be suddenly doubled. It is quite possible that scarcity of food may, by its physical effects on individuals, have a direct influence on fertility, but it would only begin to have such an effect when that point was reached at which it led to positive physical distress. It may be said that if, owing to such a cause as this, a population is incapacitated from being checked by a rise of prices, yet, on the other hand, it cannot be stimulated to an extraordinary rate of increase by abundance. No doubt this is to a great extent true. But it must be remembered that there are other causes which interfere with increase of population besides scarcity of food. If, for instance, the manhood of a country were engaged in perpetual warfare, which not only decimates them but keeps them occupied at a distance from their homes, it is obvious that the increase of population would be kept greatly below its average rate; and devastating diseases and famines have a similar effect. Looking back at the history of the period preceding British rule it will, we think, be easy to see that the first at least of these checks to population was operating to a very large extent, whereas now the extent of its influence is imperceptible. It is very probable, too, that diseases and famines were more fatal in former times than now; and we think there were other causes tending to keep down population, which have been, or are being removed. The conclusion we arrive at is, that before the introduction of British rule, although the social customs of the people were, as they are now, of a kind to encourage the maximum rate of increase, there were accidental causes at work to prevent that increase taking place, and that these causes having gradually ceased, the maximum rate has in the natural course of things been, or will ultimately be, gradually attained.

THE INQUIRY AT SHILLONG.—The Court of Inquiry being held at Shillong, of which Colonel Swinhoe, R.A., is President, and Colonels Dodgson and Smyth members, held its first meeting on May 31st. The original date fixed for the session of the Court had to be postponed, owing to Colonel Smyth being attacked by the dengue fever. The object of the inquiry is to investigate certain charges of insubordination which have been brought against an officer commanding one of the native regiments engaged in the Lushai Expedition.

A STORM AT ALLAHABAD.—The following graphic sketch, in which we fancy we can detect the "fine Roman hand" of the author of Nugæ Indicae, is from Thursday's Pioneer:—"The elements had a field day on Monday last. For many weeks there had been nothing doing—a piping time of heat, when the sun and the moon divided the twenty-four hours between them. But all that has been changed, and we had on Monday a parade of all arms. First the wind sweeping up from the south, clearing the way for the rain that was close behind, and then the rain on the swept earth gasping for breath descended in great round drops. But the wind and the rain soon combined, and, brigaded with the artillery of heaven, held a camp of exercise. And among flashes of blank-cartridge lightning and feu-de-joie of thunder, small arms, grape, and heavy ordnance being all represented, the chota bursat began. And how suddenly did all nature become aware of the change! The grateful earth sent up in quick response its thanks in a scent as fragrant to us in India as is the glorious bouquet of the hay-fields at home. The doddal birds in many coloured song hymned the bursting of the monsoon, and the dusty trees broke out into laughing green. The swallow, a feathered trifle, is hawking among the trees, for it knows that a strange insect world is abroad, the sudden rain having startled into uncouth daylight the night-loving moth and the feeble swarm that peoples the crepuscule. The young parrots, insolent though tailless, revel among the neem trees' harsh berries, while from the softened earth, in spite of the falling rain, the mynas are busy pulling out the too curious worms. Even the wretched babblers who had hoped to raise a second brood of young, and whose nest has in an hour become a dripping pulp, hop, not unmirthfully, about. The peacocks, as Valmiki has recorded in his poem, come out and dance; even the crow is festive. But the rain that has washed the aloes clean has also soaked out from their lair among them the ringed snakes, so the mongoose holds high carnival. Already a frog! yes, a shrivelled batrachian who for weeks has been hiding in a water-pipe, dusty and disconsolate as one of the twenty-two Kings of Jewry shut up in the mountains of Scythia, feels suddenly a rush of warm rainwater, and his shrunken shell is carried out into the aqueduct. He stems the tide and is soon safely on the bank. Can it be true? and he plunges into the living water again, his shrunken body plumping out as it greedily absorbs the grateful liquid, and soon the lean and wretched frog, whom a week ago a hungry crow would have scorned to eat (though a stomach-denying crow is as rare as a Parsee beggar), becomes the same bloated monster in yellow and green that last year harassed us with his importunate demonstrations of pleasure. "And for ala moche as he has thus cheaply attained to respectability, he is inflated with pride." Mandeville thanked God with humility for the keeping of the good company of many lords, but the frog unasked thrusts himself and his amours upon our notice, holding with the Saracens that man is only the younger brother of swine. We also welcomed the rain, but could have done well without the frogs.

ARMS IN NATIVE STATES.

In Major Impey's interesting report on Marwar, just published in the volume of Records of the Political Administration of the Rajpootana States in 1870-71, we find a passage which shows how futile have been the restrictions hitherto placed by the Government of India on the importation of "arms of precision" into native States:—

"In connection with the subject of robbery, I received your instructions to call upon the Maharajah 'to adopt stringent measures against European fowling-pieces, rifles, English powder and percussion-caps, being imported to or sold in his territory excepting to British officers, and then only under signatures.' It was suggested that all such articles found in the possession of traders, and all not registered within a certain time, should be confiscated, this measure being requisite from such arms of precision being commonly found in the possession of brigands and outlaws.

"The Maharajah was, therefore, addressed to carry out these measures, and suggestions were given as to the means of doing so. I have had no reply from his Highness, and I am convinced that, though such a measure would be beneficial to his authority, he has not the power to enforce it, and that it will, therefore, remain a dead letter. There is hardly a Rajpoot who does not possess a percussion gun or pistol of European manufacture, and most of them are well supplied.

"By your instructions I also wrote to the Political Superintendent of Pahlunpoor, to ask him to prevent the passage of such weapons and ammunition through his jurisdiction towards Marwar."

This explicit statement shows Lord Napier of Magdala had good warrant for the hint he gave the Secretary of State that, if disturbances arose in India, it would be found the turbulent class of the population were armed with weapons nearly as good as those of our own soldiers. A timid race, long accustomed to slavery and unused to arms, like the cultivators of Guzerat, are content to bear their yoke in silence, without showing any signs of restiveness. But proud, warlike Rajpoots, who are determined to have arms, can easily elude the precautions taken to deprive them of the only means of asserting their own rights against a sovereign who, like the Maharajah of Jodhpore "considers the sole object of his Government to be his Highness's personal benefit." Major Impey tells us, that, irritated by the confiscation of their lands for the benefit of the Maharajah's favourites, "the Thakoors have become a powerful league, which, instead of regarding their suzerain as their leader, regard him as their antagonist." This state of organised disorder, which is the fruit of the non-interference policy of the English Government, must, remarks the Bombay Gazette, bring on serious troubles now that the Thakoors can command the support of bands of well-armed retainers. Our readers have only to study, further, the able and plain-spoken report of General Daly on the way in which Holkar has created a very slave state in Central India, to see how unsatisfactory is the present state of the relations between the paramount Power and native princes. The English Government has nothing to fear from princes like Holkar and Jodhpore. A prince of Scindia's character is likely to prove a much more formidable competitor for power; but Scindia at all events governs his subjects honestly and well; he is not a mere sensual and avaricious tyrant.

Miscellaneous.

CALCUTTA MUNICIPALITY.—We learn that Mr. A. T. Devon, late of the Municipality, has been appointed engineer of the Presidency Jail in place of Mr. P. Donaldson, who has left for another appointment.—Englishman.

COURT-MARTIAL ON LIEUT. GIBSON.—A general Court-martial will shortly be held in Allahabad for the trial of Lieut. Gibson, Bengal Staff Corps, on charges arising out of alleged irregularities connected with the boundary settlement of the Rewah territory. The case, says the Pioneer, promises to be one of some interest.

DEATH OF A NATIVE NOBLEMAN.—We regret to announce the death of Dewam Nihal Chand at Lahore, on Sunday, the 9th inst. The cause of his death is said to have been cholera. He was one of the chief dewans of the Cashmere State. The Punjab Government have telegraphed to the local authorities to express their great regret at his death.—Punjab Times, June 14.

LUCKNOW.—The weather for the past week in Lucknow, says the local Witness, has been of the regulation stamp, fully up to scale. Clear, dry, hot oxygen, stimulating and strengthening—to those that can stand it. With the thermometer at 105 deg. in the shade at 10 A.M., and 156 deg. in the sun, it cannot complain of an unusual abnormal season. There is little small-pox and cholera in the city, and the heat is trying to those suffering from fever. During the last fortnight in May, 291 deaths were reported, twelve of which were from cholera and thirty from small-pox.—Delhi Gazette, June 11.

DARJEELING.—Cholera still continues to hang about in some of the tea plantations around Darjeeling, and is not expected to disappear until rain falls. The fall of rain has been very small at Darjeeling this season up to the present time.

EPIDEMICS AT DACCA.—Cholera and dengue have made their appearance here in real earnest. On the 10th one of the inmates of the jail was attacked with dengue. We expect it will spread rapidly amongst the prisoners. It is fortunate for the jail authorities that it is almost an impossibility for the six hundred to be simultaneously attacked.—Bengal Times.

SCIENCE AMONG NATIVES.—We have much pleasure in noting that Rai Kunhya Lall, Executive Engineer, Lahore, has been elected an Associate of the Institution of Civil Engineers. He was proposed by Mr. Purdon and seconded by Messrs. Harrison, Grant, Crawford, Campbell, Anderson and Mallet. Rai Kunhya Lall is the first native of India who has been admitted into the Institution of Civil Engineers.—Punjab Times.

PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.—The Indian Mirror says:—"We learn that some serious disclosures have lately been made in the Bengal Public Works Department office with regard to the conduct of a European assistant, who was in the habit of receiving illegal gratification from many young men who came to him for appointments in that Department. Mere chance brought his conduct to the notice of the Bengal Government, and the result was that a strict enquiry was ordered. We are glad to learn that the officer has been dismissed."

MANLY EXERCISES.—Mr. Campbell's order, requiring natives in Government employ to learn to ride, does not seem to have come any too soon in the opinion of the Oude Akhbar. This paper says that the horse-trade of India is annually declining, owing to the unmanly habits of the present race, who prefer comfortable conveyances to riding. It further adds that whilst the English Government keep studs, the natives have adopted no plan for improving the breed of horses.

KOOKAS SENT TO PRISON.—On May 31 the chief members of the Kooka sect at Lahore were arraigned before the magistrate of the district for having knowingly disobeyed a legally promulgated order forbidding the gathering together of more than five of the sect at a Dhurmasalla, having so offended on two occasions lately. The three principal men—Dewa Singh Soobah, Sowaya Singh, his A.D.C., and Mukkun Singh Dhurumsallee—were sentenced each to two months' rigorous imprisonment, the others, four in number, being fined Rs. 20 each.

MR. EDGAR.—The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal has given thanks to Mr. Edgar, Deputy Commissioner of Cachar, for his very able and explanative report regarding the Loshai Campaign, and says that his services in the expedition have been acknowledged by the Government of India, and are fully recognised by the Government. His Honour has also expressed his appreciation for the services rendered by Mr. McWilliam, the Officiating Deputy Commissioner of Cachar, Baboo Ram Ruttod Eudo, Collectorate Nazir, Mr. Harlow, the manager of the Eastern Bengal Company, and Baboo Hurry Churn Surma, the Tehsildar of Hylakandy.

HINDEE DICTIONARY.—Students of Hindee will be glad to hear that the dictionary of that language, promised by the Rev. J. D. Bate a year ago, is now in an advanced state of preparation, and that one portion is indeed now ready for the press. In the prospectus which has been forwarded to us we read—"When it is said that the Bhagawat Puran alone yielded the present writer upwards of 2,000 words not given in either Forbes' or Thompson's dictionaries, and that of these several hundred were culled from the Premsagar (the 10th chapter of that Puran), it will be obvious that to facilitate the study of Hindee literature a new dictionary is needed." From another source we learn that altogether Mr. Bate's work will contain some 12,000 words which Forbes does not contain.—Pioneer.

BOAT BRIDGES AND TRAFFIC.—The bridge of boats at Attock was taken down on the 7th inst. The serious interruption to traffic caused by the taking down of the boat bridges during the rains should cause the Government engineers to consider whether a subway should not be designed on all the railway bridges. If this is not now possible, how would it answer to have special ferry carriages made for the country traffic over the rivers? The railway is to correspond with the Grand Trunk-road, so that a very small diversion of the regular road would during the rains enable the road traffic to go on intermittingly if large broad ferry carriages were made for the bridge traffic. A small toll would repay all cost. Indeed all that was gained would be almost pure profit.—Indian Public Opinion, June 14.

CIVIL.—In consequence of the temporary appointment of Mr. Dampier to be Secretary to the Government of India in the Home Department, the following changes have taken place in the Bengal Office:—Mr. A. Mackenzie becomes temporarily Judicial Secretary to the Government, and Mr. J. W. Edgar takes Mr. Mackenzie's place in the Secretariat. Mr. Dampier leaves, we hear, for Simla immediately.—Mr. Browne Wood, Deputy Commissioner of the Santhal Pargunnahs, has been appointed the officer by whom the settlement of the Hendwa Pargunnah is to be made under the new regulations, and Mr. W. M. Smith deputy settlement officer. Appeals from these officers' decisions are to be heard by the Commissioner of the Santhal Pargunnahs, the ultimate power of revision of the settlement being reserved for the Lieutenant-Governor.

RESULT OF THE LOSHAI EXPEDITION.—The immediate effect of the Loshai expedition appears to have been the general dissolution of the tribes and communities with whom our troops came in contact. The Syloos have been pouring into British territory in a state of great distress, begging to be allowed to settle within our frontier line. They have been, of course, kindly received, and advances made, which they are to repay with labour next November. The Howlongs have lost their prestige, and have been apparently coming to grief also. Vandoola has been attacked by Shindoos, who killed thirty of his slaves. He will not rest till he has avenged their loss. Benkuia marched up the hill with all his men, and then marched down again, that is, he went out to annihilate the Poiteys, but thought better of it. Lalboora, whose village of Chumpai was General Bourchier's culminating point, has been completely annihilated by Kambow and the Soktes, his wife dishonoured, and his family taken captive.—Indian Observer, June 15.

GENERAL BOURCHIER'S SUCCESSOR.—Rumour is busy among military men as to the successor of General Bourchier, in command of the eastern frontier—the highest and most pleasant appointment of the kind in the gift of the Commander-in-Chief. It is said that Brigadier Wilson will probably make a fight for it, thereby vacating Peshawur. In this event it would be open to Lord Napier to do an act of grace and justice by nominating Colonel Rothney to the latter brigade. No one more fully recognises the merits of Colonel Rothney than the Commander-in-Chief; but then we understand his Excellency argues that it is the bounden duty of Government to reward the services of officers serving under its orders. The Punjab Frontier Force, of which Colonel Rothney is an old and meritorious officer, is not under Lord Napier, and it is therefore held that that corps has no right to look to share in the patronage of the regular army. Should Lord Napier continue inexorable, the next seniors are Colonel Morgan, 32nd N.I., and Colonel Wright, Deputy-Adjutant-General.

TORTURE IN BENGAL.—A native inspector of the Bengal police, named Peary Loll Chatterjee, is in trouble in Calcutta, with reference to a prisoner named Madaree, whom he had arrested here on a warrant which he had been deputed to execute. It appears that he had arrested the prisoner, together with several others, in Rajah's Bagan in the Shampookur section of the Calcutta police, and there, in an open spot of ground, had tortured the man Madaree, by twisting his arms behind his back by means of a piece of cloth and a cane, in doing which he was assisted by one of his subordinates, constable Nobin Ghose. The prisoner was subsequently placed in the Calcutta lock-up, where he complained of the above treatment to the native doctor in charge, who referred him to the Commissioner of Police. Dr. Woodford examined the man, and a charge of grievous hurt was entered against the inspector and constable before the Northern Division Magistrate last week, who, however, discharged the latter. Against the former evidence was gone into, and he was committed for trial at the sessions.—Englishman, June 11.

THE MAYO COLONY.—We are gratified to find ourselves so well backed in our proposal to relieve from infamy the name of the Andamans; the formation of a sanitarium upon one of the group of islands is, as will be seen, forcibly proposed and the propriety of naming it Mount Mayo and making it a monument to the memory of the late earl is suggested. Our own proposal is somewhat bolder, it is to utilise the islands for the purposes of an Anglo-Indian colony, thus ridding India of its surplus Anglo-Indian population who from pressure of circumstances are rapidly growing worse than a mere reproach to Britain, for they are becoming a very pestilence in the land, not a mere eye-sore but a burden, and a most oppressive one, to the better favoured subjects; cursed with idleness they engender vices with the rapidity usual to such a condition and contaminate the native element which surrounds them by the influence of bad example. We have proposed that encouragement be held out to this class to induce them to colonise upon the Andamans, and that the colony be named after Earl Mayo, whose almost last words tend so forcibly to commend the question of establishing a colony upon the islands to the thoughtful consideration of the Government of India.—Indian Abuses.

THE TELEGRAPH DEPARTMENT.—Colonel Robinson in his report on the Telegraph Department is emphatic in his praises of the new system by which this branch of the service has been reinforced. In the days of the competition-mania telegraph officers were selected after open examination, and the result was that a sufficient number of competent candidates could not be got. The cause that contributed to this failure was that the prospects held out were too uninviting to induce men to devote themselves entirely to technical subjects with a chance of being rejected at last when all that they had learnt would be utterly useless to them in any other field. In lieu of this system, Colonel Robinson suggested that the appointments should be given by nomination, and a preference always shown to the sons of those who in their day had done India good service. These nominated candidates were then required to pass a preliminary qualifying examination in the ordinary subjects of general education. The scheme has worked admirably, so we are told, and the Telegraph Department can boast now as fine a set of young officers as are to be found in any service, and the English Postal Telegraph Service thinks of adopting similar measures, and thus recruiting its ranks with an abler staff of men than they now entertain.—Pioneer.

THE ARTILLERY RETIREMENTS.—The approaching retirements of officers of the Indian Artillery will place at the disposal of the authorities several regimental appointments.—The Gun Carriage Agency, the Powder Manufactory, four batteries of Horse Artillery, and also the Deputy-Adjutant-General of the Royal Artillery in India. The command of C Brigade, under orders from home, will also be vacant by the retirement of Colonels Cox and Smyth. General Huyshe will vacate his appointment in October next. Such a windfall of patronage does happen more than once in a lifetime. Colonels Bruce and Bunney are spoken of as probable successors of Colonels Lewis and Voyle. Colonel Johnson, as mentioned by us before, will, it is said, succeed General Huyshe, and Colonel Atlay or Colonel Gray may be appointed as Deputy-Adjutant-General. Captains Traill, Dobbin, Manderson, and Macfarlane are spoken of as the next for appointments to batteries of Horse Artillery. The Staff allowances of the manufacturing departments at Futtehgurh and Ishapore may be decreased, and those at Cawnpore and Dum-Dum raised to Rs. 700 or Rs. 750 a month each. It is not impossible that the brigade system will be abolished or greatly modified. The undue proportion of field officers in brigades is under the consideration of the authorities at the War-office. The plethora of field officers at Woolwich is pronounced intolerable, and their importunate and incessant solicitation for employment at the Horse Guards is considered a "bore" of a monstrous calibre, which Mr. Cardwell is determined to reduce.—Delhi Gazette, June 18.

DEAD IN A RAILWAY CARRIAGE.—The dead body found in the down mail train at Howrah on the night of the 10th inst. proves to have been that of Mr. John J. Hollway, an indigo planter, well known in Tirhut. The unfortunate gentleman was on his way to Calcutta, en route to England, on account of ill health, regarding which it appears that he telegraphed from Newadi Railway station to Dr. K. P. Stuart, M.D., of Kyd-street, whom he desired to meet him on arrival at his Calcutta residence on the night in question. He was last seen alive at Bardwan, where he was leaning out of the carriage window asking for coffee, which was not ready. Soon after leaving that station he evidently must have been feeling worse, and told his servant that he was "going to die," which statement caused the servant, on arrival at Pundooah, to communicate his master's words to the stationmaster, a Baboo, who, without taking any trouble to ascertain the necessities of the case, replied that the train would be at Howrah in a couple of hours, and that he could not do anything as there was no European at the station. The gentleman, who had been lying down on the seat of the carriage, fell asleep, and not many minutes afterwards he breathed his last. A post mortem examination was held at the Howrah General Hospital by Dr. Elliot, M.D., the Civil Surgeon of Howrah, assisted by Dr. Swan, the house surgeon there, when it was discovered that the cause of death was "aneurism" of the heart. His body was claimed by a friend, and his remains were brought over to Calcutta and interred on the morning of the 12th in the Circular-road Cemetery.—Englishman, June 18.

MONEY MARKET, IMPORTS AND EXPORTS.—CALCUTTA, June 18.—The Exchange market has again moved rather more in favour of buyers. Government paper is again cheaper. The Share market has scarcely been so active. Freight has been steadier. In Exports business is still restricted by dearth and light supplies. Cotton, Jute, Seeds, Saltpetre, and Rice are all dearer again. The Import trade looks firm and healthy, and promises a full business at an early date. The Twist market has advanced. The late rise in the Metal trade holds, pending supplies. There has been no variation in the charges for money.

A JAW-BREAKER.—Until the occurrence of the recent cyclone in Madras there was a vessel in existence which bore the name of Stroomothoo Comarasawmy. The fact may induce some people to think less unkindly of the cyclone in future.

A RURAL STYLE OF HANGING.—A woman in the Ramree district separated from her husband, and last month was asked by him to return and live with him again. She refused. He then killed her with a dha, and ran off to the jungle and hung himself with a piece of creeper.—Rangoon Mail, June 5.

NATIVES AS ENGINEERS.—All sorts of anonymous correspondents are writing down our countrymen as regards their capacity to make good engineers. It is quite refreshing to pass from such claptrap to the sober testimony of a high and experienced chief like the Hon. Mr. Arbuthnot, the late Vice-Chancellor of the Madras University, in his recent speech at the Civil Engineering College.—Native Opinion.

DENGUE FEVER AT RANGOON.—Dengue fever appears to be marching steadily through the province, sparing neither young nor old. We learn that in the Tharawadi district many deaths are stated to have taken place in consequence of an attack of this epidemic, which seems to puzzle and set at defiance all the boasted skill of the Burman surgeons, who as usual have a great deal of nonsense to impart with reference to the disease, and the course to be adopted for its successful treatment.—Rangoon Mail, June 1.

A MAGISTRATE SHOT.—News from Rangoon states that Mr. A. C. Man, Assistant Commissioner of Ngathangkyoung, has been shot in the performance of his duty in attempting to apprehend certain dacoits in his jurisdiction. The remains of the young officer were taken to Bassein and interred on the 24th May, in the presence of most of the European residents. The Deputy Commissioner of Bassein, Captain Pemberton, left for the spot where the deceased met his fate to make inquiries.

HOT WEATHER HAVOC AT KAMPTEE.—The Kamptee correspondent of the Madras Times says—"Cooler weather is particularly to be wished for just now, owing to the terrible manner in which the heat is telling on the 44th regiment. During the last month there have been seven sudden deaths among the soldiers, chiefly from heat apoplexy! one—the billiard marker—being found dead in his bed, and I am sorry to hear that another man was buried last evening, and that there are several in the hospital not likely to recover. They have also lately lost four women and upwards of twenty children."

THE RAILWAY BETWEEN POOTHANOR AND METTAPOLLIAN.—We are glad to hear that the railway from Poothanor to Mettapollian is rapidly approaching completion, and that if the girders needed for spanning the streams en route are received betimes from England it is probable that the branch will be opened to traffic before the end of the year. It will spare the hills-going public the fatiguing inconvenience of twenty-seven miles journeying in bandies of sorts, with bullocks or horses of sizes. The Governor will be able to leave Ootacamund at 2 P.M. of one day, and be back in Madras by special train at 8 o'clock the following morning.—Madras Mail, June 17.

HINDOO WIDOWS.—Mr. Rewashunker Munchabhai, an influential and wealthy citizen of Baroda, has startled the Hindoo community there by remarrying a widow.

MEMORIAL OF THE LATE MR. BREEKS.—We are glad to observe that a movement is on foot to perpetuate the memory of the late commissioner. Notices have been issued calling a public meeting of those residing in the several stations on the Neigherries, on Saturday next, at Mr. Misquith's rooms. The Hon. A. J. Arbuthnot has kindly consented to preside at the meeting.—South of India Observer, June 13.

THE NATIVE MARRIAGE BILL.—The Native Marriage Bill, which only a short time ago became law, is creating a good deal of dissatisfaction amongst the wealthier and better educated Hindoos. A requisition, numerously signed, to the Sheriff of Madras, was forwarded to that official some days ago, asking him to convene a public meeting of the native inhabitants of Madras, to discuss the best measures to be adopted for getting the Bill either amended or withdrawn. Accordingly the Sheriff convened a meeting for Monday last at Patcheappah's Hall. At this meeting a large number of native high caste people were present, and it was resolved to petition Government, in reference to the objectionable parts of the Bill, with the view of its being either amended or withdrawn.—Athenæum, June 19.

CIVIL.—At the time of Mr. Loch's appointment of private secretary to his Excellency the Governor, and his consequent retirement from the acting presidency of the Municipal Commission, it was generally thought that Mr. Gover, the sanitary inspector, should have succeeded him, and it now appears that Government intended that he should do so. The Revenue Board, however, interposed, on the ground that it could not spare Mr. Gover's services in the census department, which from the first had been under Mr. Gover's superintendence and control. Under these circumstances, and bearing in mind that Colonel Denison, the President of the Commission, is expected to return to Madras in the course of the next three months, Government yielded to the Revenue Board's representations, and allowed Mr. Gover to remain in statu quo, appointing Colonel Ritherdon to the acting presidency for the short unexpired remaining portion of Colonel Denison's leave.—Madras Athenæum.

A GENERAL WANT IN INDIA.—A BUILDING SOCIETY.—We often hear complaints about the high rents of houses in Madras, and of the bad treatment that tenants often receive at the hands of landlords. We do not see why the latter should be badly treated, for they pay rent enough in all conscience. If a tenant in Madras lives in a house for eight or ten years, he pays the full value of the house, while in England he would have to live in it thirty years. This is a difference with a vengeance! House property must be the best paying in this place, and must beat trade or Government paper altogether. But is there no remedy? Must we always submit to pay this high rent? In England a remedy would soon be found, and that would be a building society. New houses would be built and the rents would soon be brought down. Why is not something of the kind tried in Madras? We think a society of this kind would pay. The fact is that while the European and East Indian populations of Madras has increased, the houses have not increased in the same proportion, and consequently the supply has not kept pace with the demand and the tenants have been the sufferers. It is quite time that some change should be made.—Madras Times.

REMARKABLE LIGHTS AROUND NANDIDROOG.—A correspondent writes to the Madras Mail:—From 8 to 11 o'clock on Saturday last the plain to the east, north, and north-east of Nandidroog was covered with remarkable lights, which have been observed occasionally in former years, and given rise to a variety of conjectures as to their origin. To the north-east they presented the appearance of a large city brilliantly illuminated. Through a good telescope the individual lights seemed smaller than they did to the naked eye, but were more distinct and intense, each one being a pure steady flame, with well-defined edges. In one direction the scene, through a binocular glass, looked like a view of part of the starry heavens, each flame being like a star. It is no exaggeration to say that many thousands of them were visible, and as many of them were from ten to fifteen miles distant, each flame must, I imagine, have been five or six feet in length, in order to be seen by the naked eye in such brilliance. Some of the natives who were questioned regarding the lights called them fire-spirits, or ghosts, or demons. Others said they were the torch-lights used by the villagers, who went out at night, after rain, to collect the winged white ants. But it was abundantly evident that no torches such as natives use would have been visible to us at that distance, and through a telescope would have looked altogether different. Then the number of lights was so great that the entire population of the surrounding district could not have produced them; besides which these lights were not moving about, but were quite stationary, or only agitated a little by the wind. To set this question at rest, however, it has been determined to have a number of villagers with torches sent out at night from Chota Balapur, that their appearance may be seen from the Droog, which is only five or six miles distant. Meantime it appears to me that these very remarkable lights must have been a species of ignis fatui, caused by the ignition of some inflammable gas escaping in jets from the surface of the earth.

ROBBERY OF HER MAJESTY'S MAIL IN THE PERSIAN GULF.

We have just received intelligence of a most audacious attack by pirates upon Messrs. Nicol and Company's s.s. Cashmere, which carries her Majesty's Mails to Kurrachee and the ports in the Persian Gulf. Nothing but brief telegrams have as yet come to hand, but these indicate the affair to be one of considerable seriousness. One telegram arrived in Bombay from Bussorah on Thursday afternoon shortly after two o'clock, stating that the Cashmere had been attacked in the river by pirates on the night of the 12th; that one of the crew had been killed and several wounded; that the treasure chest had been broken into, and Rs. 42,000 abstracted. Another telegram was received later in the afternoon confirming the previous telegram. A representative of Messrs. Nicol and Company proceeded to Government House on Thursday evening, and laid the circumstances of the case before his Excellency Sir Philip Wodehouse, and our Consul in Bushire has been instructed to bring the affair beneath the notice of the Turkish Government. The information that has yet reached Bombay is so scanty that it would not be safe to say much about the matter; but, on the face of it, an insult to her Majesty's flag and a serious crime seem to have been committed.

On Monday we received the following telegram from our special correspondent at Simla:—"Raoof, the Turkish Pasha of Bagdad, has expressed deep concern at the robbery of the mail steamer, and has temporarily suspended the Governor of Bussorah. He has told the Commodore, whom he has appointed Officiating Governor, to hold a Court of Enquiry, and to adopt every possible means of apprehending the robbers and of recovering the plunder. He has also despatched four companies of troops to assist in the pursuit and capture of the robbers, and has telegraphed to the neighbouring Deputy Governors to co-operate." Raoof Pacha is the successor of Midhat Pacha, lately recalled for mismanagement.

The following telegram from the Political Resident in the Persian Gulf, dated 15th June, has been received here by the Political Secretary to Government:—

"The following intelligence has been received in regard to the attack on the Cashmere:—Seventy robbers attacked the steamer. One kulasee was at the gangway at the time. Five or six men first came alongside, and, on stating they were intending passengers, were allowed to come on board, when they immediately captured the kulasee. At that moment two or more boats came alongside containing the remainder of the gang, who made at once for the place where the treasure was. Bradford, the clerk, is left behind severely wounded. The chief officer and engineer are also wounded. One of the crew, a fireman, had his head cut completely off as he made his appearance from the stoke hole. It is thought some of the robbers were old kulasees, formerly in the company's employ. One bag of Rs. 1,600 was left behind by the robbers."—Bombay Gazette, June 21.

Miscellaneous.

DECCAN COLLEGE.—We are informed that Mr. G. B. Reid, of the Bombay Civil Service, Assistant Collector at Khandeish, is to be appointed Acting Professor of Literature in the Deccan College, vice Professor Oxenham, who has proceeded to England.

PARSEES FOR ENGLAND.—Two young Parsee students, named Cursetjee Ardesir Dalal and Sorabshaw Hormusjee Dantra, proceeded to England by the last mail steamer, to compete for the Indian Medical service. Both were successful students of the Grant Medical College. —Times of India.

DENGUE FEVER.—Dengue fever has lately been prevalent at Ahmedabad, and the natives generally believe that the pain is caused by demons, whom they are anxious to propitiate by offerings through Brahmins. It is said that about Rs. 50,000 must have been spent to provide such offerings.

THE INUNDATION OF THE INDUS.—The river is rising rapidly at Sukkur, and we dare state that we shall have heavy inundations this year. The gauge at Bhoong Bharra, the surest one for showing the state of the Indus, has, apparently, exemplified sufficiently that the river's rise will be rapid and destructive. —Sindian, June 12.

ELPHINSTONE COLLEGE.—We understand that the Director of Public Instruction intends to call out from England a Professor of Sanskrit for the Elphinstone College in place of Dr. Buhler, who has been appointed permanently as Educational Inspector, Northern Division. Professor Ramkrishna Gopal has been in charge of the office for some months.

KATIWAR.—Lieutenant-Colonel S. C. Law has been appointed Judicial Assistant to the Political Agent in Katiawar, and Political Assistant in charge of the Nowanuggur and Dhrole talookas. Mr. J. Jardine, C.S., to act as Judicial Assistant and Political Assistant in charge of the above talookas, during the absence of Lieutenant-Colonel Law on furlough.

DEATH OF LIEUTENANT G. R. KENNEDY.—The coming court-martial at Ahmedabad, which has been freely talked about of late, and which was expected to result in most serious disclosures affecting the honour of a young officer stationed there, cannot take place now, owing to the sudden death of the officer himself. Lieutenant G. R. Kennedy, Adjutant of the 3rd N. I., who was to have been charged before the court with serious defalcations, died, we hear, from heat apoplexy on Sunday. —Times of India.

AMENDS FOR AN OUTRAGE.—A news report from Kurrachee of the 13th June says that it is reported that the Persian Commissioner has offered full-amends for the outrage committed by Hussein Khan and his men at Charbar in March last in firing on the telegraph boat, and has conceded reparation to British subjects who were lately plundered, giving a bill for payment. The Persian Commissioner has since left for Kirman, and Captain Miles has proceeded to Muscat. No further tidings have been received from the frontier of Upper Sind. —Bombay Gazette.

MR. GALE, C.E.—We regret to hear of the sudden death of Mr. Gale, C.E. Mr. Gale was contractor for the construction of the new Kattywar extension of the B.B. and C.I. Railway to the salt works of Patree, and having been out a good deal in the recent very hot weather he felt ill from the exposure, and came down to Ahmedabad for a day or two. Feeling somewhat better, he was on his way back to Veerumgaum by train on Saturday evening, when he died in the railway carriage. His remains were buried on Sunday evening. —Bombay Gazette, June 21.

A WAHABEE SYUD AT KURRACHEE.—The attention of the police is called to Wahabee Syud, who has lately made his appearance in Kurrachee, and who on Sunday last strolled into a garden attached to a Parsi pleasure-house; his presence there had the effect of making the inmates of the house beat a precipitate exit. From what we learn the man is a rather dangerous character, one true to the traditionary instincts of his race, who has been heard to express his intention of shedding "Kaffir" blood. It would be advisable to hunt the fellow up, and put it out of his power to do mischief. —Sindian, June 12.

KHANDALLA.—A fearful storm burst over Khandalla, writes a correspondent, on Tuesday night, or rather a succession of storms, for the lightning seemed to come from all the points of the compass in succession. No sooner had the storm, coming from one direction, passed over, than it came up from another direction, till at last it took its position in the west, and spent its fury on the whole face of the Western Ghats. A great deal of rain fell, likewise, on Wednesday evening, and as soon as the news comes of the full burst of the monsoon in Bombay the hill will be forsaken by all its visitors. The climate is delightful at present; when the rain ceases nothing could be more exhilarating than a brisk ride through the pure, fresh air; but it is damp and unpleasant while the rain falls, and somewhat unhealthy to those not accustomed to such damp regions. —Deccan Herald, June 14.

THE NATIVE PRESS OF BOMBAY.—The Bombay correspondent of the Gujarat Friend thus gives his views about the native press of Bombay:—"The writings of the native press are on the other side of India very severely condemned. Whatever may be its defects, I am certain it is not characterised by anything approaching to disloyalty to the British Crown. The native press of Bombay, far from showing any disloyalty to the Government, is wonderfully tame, and is simply a second edition of the daily journals. In the Anglo-vernacular journals there is no great talent displayed, though Bombay is richer than any other city in India in the excellence of its daily papers, under the editorship and proprietorship of Englishmen. Of course, the natives are inferior to Europeans in journalistic talent, for it is a very difficult task to become an able journalist, more difficult perhaps than to pass the Civil Service examination. The Calcutta Anglo-vernacular press is superior to that of Bombay, in consequence of the wider spread of education in Bengal."

THE NEW JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER IN SIND.—Mr. West, the Judicial Commissioner in Sind, attended Court last Monday, the day following his arrival, he being anxious to dispose of cases requiring immediate adjustment. A deputation of the pleaders waited on him, to express the gratification and pleasure they felt at having Mr. West presiding again on the Bench of the Sudder Court of the province. The return to Sind of Mr. Raymond West, and the resumption by him of the duties of Judicial Commissioner in the province, duties which he discharged so ably and so satisfactorily a few years ago, are incidents which have occurred within the last few days, and it affords us more than ordinary satisfaction and pleasure in chronicling them. Mr. West has earned golden opinions in Kurrachee, as he has throughout the province, as an able, a painstaking, and an accomplished judge; he has few his equals, certainly none his superiors, so far as the generality of Mcfussil judges go. The people of Sind may well congratulate themselves on again having Mr. West among them. —Sindian, June 12.

STARTLING MURDER AT NOWGONG.—A terrible tragedy at Nowgong is reported by an eye-witness:—"Under encouragement of the officers commanding, some men of the detachment 106th L.I. stationed here formed themselves into a 'Singing Club,' and gave their first performance to the detachment on June 1. This consisted of singing, instrumental music, reading, legerdmain, hornpipe dancing, and comic (Ethiopian) serenaders as the wind up. The house was crowded, the audience unmistakably pleased, the whole performance successful beyond all expectations, when suddenly towards the close of the programme, and while the 'serenaders' were doing their best, a musket shot was heard, its tongue of fire flashed across the stage—the curtain dropped—and the cry was raised, 'A man is shot dead!' The audience took the firing of the gun as a joke, a part of the performance; but when the truth dawned on their minds, a general feeling of horror arrested all mirth, and before they could recover themselves the commanding officer of the 106th L.I. collected his men and had them marched home, else there is little doubt the men would have been tempted to lynch the cowardly ruffian who committed the murder. The latter, I am grieved to say, is a soldier of the gallant 106th Regiment, and had been in the theatre in the early part of the evening, but under the influence of some uncontrollable impulse left it, went home, took his rifle, loaded it, put a spare cartridge in his pocket, retraced his steps to the theatre, and while everybody was watching the well-sustained efforts of the serenaders, crept stealthily up to the left side door of the stage, and fired, at the first opportunity, a Snider bullet among the players. Private Delanty, the man personating 'Bones,' received the ball through his left cheek and temple, and fell backwards off the stage, uttering not even a groan, lifeless! The murderer was immediately secured with the smoking rifle in his hands. He appeared dazed, but for a few minutes only, and ever since has evinced remarkable coolness. He denied next morning all knowledge of the foul deed, and has maintained total silence on the subject since. There does not appear any reason whatever for the committal of the dreadful crime. I forgot to say he was but slightly under the influence of liquor. The murdered man was well liked in the regiment, and his funeral was attended by everyone of the 106th, including officers and women. The members of the theatrical club acted as mourners, and carried his remains to their last resting place."

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

FAMILY REMITTANCES.

No. 481 of 1872.—The following General Order by the Government of India, dated June 10, 1872, No. 615, is published:—

It having been determined by the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India that the family remittances of the British Army in India shall be paid by the India Office on receipt of a general weekly roll (according to Form A), to be furnished by the Military Account Department of each Presidency, H.E. the Governor General in Council is pleased to direct that this arrangement be brought into operation from October 1, 1872, subject to the following rules:—

I.—The use of the separate remittance voucher (War Office Form No. 326, Bengal Form, No. 47) will be continued, but somewhat modified, and with extra columns (as per Form B), to show the amount of the remittance in the Indian and sterling money and the rate of exchange.

II. These remittance vouchers will, pending further orders, be forwarded by regimental paymasters and officers commanding brigades and batteries of royal artillery, to their regimental agents, for presentation at the India office for payment. Simultaneously with the transmission of the vouchers, a list (as per Form C) will be forwarded to the officers in charge of the duties of military accountant of Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay, for incorporation in the general weekly rolls of the respective presidencies.

III. The rolls of family remittances made through circle paymasters (Bengal Form No. 144) will likewise be forwarded by the latter to the officers in charge of the duties of military accountant at the respective presidencies for incorporation in the general weekly rolls.

IV. All remittance vouchers issued by circle or British paymasters, or by officers commanding brigades or batteries of royal artillery, will have a consecutive serial number, commencing and terminating with each official year.

V. The remittance vouchers will, on receipt in the military account offices at each Presidency, be daily posted up in the general weekly rolls, which will, two clear days preceding the departure of each out-going mail, be closed and forwarded to the Governments at the respective Presidencies for despatch by that mail, to the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India.

VI. The above arrangements will involve the cancelment of—1st. War Office Form No. 327. Bengal Form No. 48.

2nd. Bengal Form No. 49.

3rd. Bengal Form No. 143 (Schedule C of account current with London), and corresponding forms issued by the military account department of the Madras and Bombay Presidencies.

2. The practice of making deductions for claims against the War Office from the totals of the family remittance rolls of British troops will forthwith be discontinued.

CONSULAR.—Subject to the confirmation of H.M.'s Government, H.E. the Viceroy and Governor-General in Council is pleased to recognise the appointment of Mr. F. W. Abel as acting consul for Belgium at Akyab, and also as acting consular agent for Italy at Akyab.

THE TABLE OF ENGLISH FURLOUGH PAY.—Erratum.—In the first line of the table of English furlough pay, published in G.G.O. No. 538, dated May 14, for "general officers," under the heading "staff corps," read general officers and brevet colonels if in receipt of colonel's allowance.

ORPHANS OF SOLDIERS.—The Government of India has decided that the orphan of a soldier proceeding to England with its step-parent should be dealt with in all respects as if it were his own child; that the outfit allowance (for a girl Rs. 50, for a boy Rs. 40) may be allowed for it if its mother be dead, the regimental authorities being responsible that the money is properly expended for its benefit; and that if it be necessary to place the child in charge of another female person during the passage home, owing to its having no mother or step-mother, and the step-father having no wife to take care of it, the prescribed remuneration (for the care of a girl Rs. 40, of a boy Rs. 30) for those who take home orphan children may be granted to such person.

EXAMINATIONS IN THE NATIVE LANGUAGES.—The following officers, students of the Thomason College, Roorkee, are reported to have passed in military surveying and field engineering:—By the Higher Standard: Lieut. Official Papers.

THE LOSHAI EXPEDITION.

From Brig. gen. C. H. Brownlow, Commanding Chittagong Column, Loshai Expeditionary Force, to the Quartermaster general, Army Headquarters, Calcutta. Dated Calcutta, April 3.

I have the honour, agreeably to your instructions, to submit, for the information of the Right Hon. the Commander-in-Chief, the following abstract of the reports furnished by me from time to time of the operations of the column under my command in the Loshai country. The paragraphs are numbered respectively as they were in the reports from which they were extracted, and of which the dates are given.

Report dated Demagiree, Nov. 30, 1871.

2. On my arrival at Chittagong, on Oct. 26, I was met by Capt. East, assistant quartermaster general, who had preceded me in the early part of the month, and had just returned from Burkhul with full particulars regarding the road and river communications up to that place, and of the work done under the orders of Capt. Lewin, the deputy commissioner of the Hill Tracts, in clearing jungle for encampments, running up sheds for commissariat stores, and temporary shelter for troops, at Rangamatta, Kassalong, and Burkhul, on the banks of the Kurnafuolee River.

3. The commissariat arrangements under Major Mackenzie and Capt. Case were in a very advanced and satisfactory state; two months' supplies for the whole force having already been pushed on towards Kassalong.

4. The Kurnafuolee is navigable by river steamer as far as Rangamatta, a distance of sixty-one miles; thence to Kassalong, seventeen miles, boats not drawing more than eighteen inches can proceed; above this latter place to Lower Burkhul, which is about twelve miles, it is only possible to employ country boats drawing some few inches of water.

8. The 2nd Goorkhas, under command of Col. Macpherson, c.b., v.c., and the 3rd company sappers and miners, arrived at Chittagong on Nov. 5. They were encamped for one day at that place, and on the 7th I started with them, and arrived at Rangamatta on the following day, having left my brigade major, Capt. Bates, at the former place, to receive troops and coolies on arrival, and forward them up the river. On Nov. 9 brigade head-quarters and the 2nd Goorkhas moved to Kassalong.

9. At Kassalong, which offered great facilities of space, and in the opinion of Surg. major Allen, the senior medical officer, promised to be healthy, I determined to establish my first depot.

10. Owing to the heat of the weather the advanced wing of the 2nd Goorkhas proceeded from Kassalong to Lower Burkhul by small boats. Neither the Flame nor the large country boats can proceed to Lower Burkhul, owing to rocks and the strength of the current where the river narrows. This part of the journey occupies about seven hours.

11. A road of eight miles in length has been made from Kassalong to Lower Burkhul. It is a good and rather severe day's march for troops to the latter place, and then on for two and a-half miles more to Upper Burkhul.

12. On Nov. 12 I arrived at Upper Burkhul with head quarters and two companies of the 2nd Goorkhas. The rest of the regiment followed by detachments, part marching and part by boat from Kassalong, leaving a British officer and a sub-division at Kassalong, and the same number of men at Lower Burkhul, for the protection of these posts.

13. Upper Burkhul is just above the rapids, at a point where the river widens out to some 300 yards across. I found the ground had been to a certain extent cleared; two commissariat godowns had been completed, and a third was in progress; sheds to cover about 500 men had been finished, and a rough stockade to protect the place had been built. But the ground was very confined, and I found it undesirable to collect troops or coolies here in any number.

14. On the day after my arrival at Burkhul, the chief, Rutton Poosa presented himself in camp, having anticipated a summons from Captain Lewin, whose messenger he met on the road. He expressed his desire to be friendly and promised assistance, but appeared very much alarmed at the consequences to himself of an alliance with us against the other tribes. He was assured in general terms of future protection if he behaved well, and, after a stay in camp of three days, during which he was chiefly engaged in drinking rum, he commenced his good offices by setting out on the 16th November to conduct a detachment of the 2nd Goorkhas under Major Macintyre to Demagiree. Captain East, assistant quartermaster general, accompanied this party, and his report of the march, which, owing to the difficulties of the country and the delay in marking out a road, occupied five days, is annexed. This road, which succeeding companies of the Goorkhas and the company of sappers have since been working on, has now been rendered practicable for unladen elephants; but the hills are so steep, and the banks of the frequent watercourses so difficult, that the time and labour to render it of any use to laden animals could not be afforded without great delay to the expedition. I trust that, as the force advances and ascends, the slopes of the ranges may be found easier, and admit of the elephants being employed.

15. On the same day that Major Macintyre's detachment commenced its march by land, I started by the river route, accompanied by Capt. Lewin, with the head quarters and a company of the 2nd Goorkhas, arriving here on Nov. 18. The fleet consisted of ten Chittagong boats, which had with considerable difficulty been dragged up the Burkhul falls and rapids, and about eighty canoes—the former carrying the Goorkhas, and worked by their own crews, assisted by the soldiers; and the latter manned by hill coolies, three coolies to each canoe, and carrying on an average five maunds of supplies. The river, which runs in a clear and deep, but sluggish stream, except at the rapids, which are of frequent occurrence, is on an average about seventy yards wide, the hills on either side being beautifully wooded to the water's edge. The distance from Burkhul to Demagiree by this route is thirty-eight miles. About half way between these places are the rapids of Ootunchuttra, which none but canoes can now ascend, as the river is falling daily. Below these rapids I have established a temporary depot for stores, under a guard of fifty policemen, twenty of whom accompany the canoes on their journey up and down the upper half of the river. The larger boats work between Burkhul and Ootunchuttra. By this arrangement it is hoped that 400 maunds of supplies may reach Demagiree every third day; but the canoe service, which is of vital importance to the advance of the force, not only to this place, but some distance further up the river and into the enemy's country, is, I fear, in a very precarious condition. The canoes are worked entirely by hill coolies, no others understanding the management of them. These men were collected by Capt. Lewin, and have been most usefully employed in various ways for the last two months, but of late they have been overcome by an unreasonable fear of the Loshais, and there have been so many desertions among them that, unless Capt. Lewin's personal influence can keep them together, there is a possibility of the whole body, about 500, melting away altogether, and bringing matters to a dead lock. I have written to Mr. Hankey, the commissioner of Chittagong, to whose cordial co-operation I am already much indebted, begging him to order up the rajahs and chiefs of the tribes to which these men belong, with a view of inspiring confidence, and checking further desertion; but, in the interim, valuable time may be lost.

16. At Demagiree I found that Mr. C. P. Crouch, assistant superintendent of police, who had been sent on with 110 men from Upper Burkhul on Nov. 8, had done a great deal of work in clearing jungle, building a stockade, and preparing sheds for commissariat stores; the ground for these purposes he had selected with much judgment. Just below the falls the river opens out into a large basin about 300 yards in diameter, on the left bank of which ample space exists for the sheds of some 800 men. The falls are at the foot of one of the northern spurs of the Oheepoom range, on which, at about one mile from the river, I have stationed a company in a rough stockade.

17. I propose to explain now, for the information of H.E. the C. in C., the arrangements I have made for the employment of the police placed at my disposal. Finding that, according to custom, they had been withdrawn from the frontier posts for drill and instruction to headquarters at Rangamatta during the rainy months, when the swollen rivers and streams serve as a protection to the hill tracts against the Loshais, I requested Capt. Lewin, through the Commissioner, Mr. Hankey, to re-occupy these posts, which will be garrisoned as follows, and remain in charge of the officers of police under the Commissioner:—1, Kaında (not hitherto occupied), 40 men; 2, Bilasorrie, 50 men; 3, Phurwa, 40 men; 4, Paidoo, 50 men; 5, Thura, 30 men; 6, Chima, 60 men. The portion of the frontier thus guarded extends over sixty miles as the crow flies, to the south-east of Kassalong. It is liable to the incursions of the Howlongs and Shendos; and, considering the habits of these people, as well as the nature of the country, which is a forest-clad succession of hills and valleys, this line of posts, connected by a mere path, cannot be considered altogether sufficient. My line of communication above Kassalong is also exposed on the right; but I trust that the enemy will be too much taken up with the operations of the force to attempt any raids so far from home. The stockade of Khagoorea to the north of Kassalong is garrisoned by 60 men, and I have requested the Political Agent at Tipperah to employ the portion of the Rajah's Contingent placed at my disposal in guarding his own frontier up to that point. These arrangements have 130 police under an officer for employment with the force.

18. Of the political aspect of affairs, I have little to report. Notwithstanding Captain Lewin's untiring exertions, added to his experience and influence on this frontier, I have been unable to open communications even with the Sylhoos, the first of the tribes we have to deal with, and whose villages are in sight. Rutton Pooca says he is at enmity with these people, and cannot undertake any messages to them. He is equally unable, or unwilling, to give information or guides, and altogether his alliance is of the most passive description, as might have been expected from his previous history. At Burkhul he expressed his desire, which I could not accede to, to be allowed to lead a war party of his tribe against the Sylhoos. On arrival here I was met with a request for a guard to protect his village; fifteen policemen were given him, and he appeared perfectly satisfied. When pressed for assistance of any sort, he declares that he has no control over his tribe. Captain Lewin, who is more troubled by his inconsistencies than I am, is of opinion that as soon as we have struck our first blow, and it is apparent that our mission is of a different character to former ones, the alliance will be more profitable. I trust that such may be the case. At present Rutton Pooca is in camp, under medical treatment, to which he submits with a faith which is astonishing, considering his distrust of our dealings with him in every other respect.

22. I propose making my first move in advance of this to-morrow, Dec. 1. From the Demagiree and Oheepoom ranges, on either side of the gorge we occupy, a fine view is obtained of the country of the Sylhoos, and also of the Howlongs, the furthest of the tribes to be dealt with. The natural obstacles the force has to overcome are most formidable. The mountains, rising to 4,000 and 5,000 feet, are very difficult, and covered with forests to the summit, a mere tract connecting the different villages. There are five such ranges to be crossed. The intervening valleys are intersected by rivers and streams often unfordable. To the troops these obstacles are of no account, but they must of course cause much delay to the movements of coolies and commissariat. The water-supply, except in the valleys, also is limited. I refer to these difficulties not with any doubt of our power to surmount them, but to show his Excellency that to achieve satisfactorily the objects of the expedition, will take fully the time allotted for the purpose.

SANSKRIT IN GOVERNMENT SCHOOLS.

The following is the reply of Mr. Campbell to the Honorary Secretary to the British Indian Association on the subject of the study of Sanscrit in Government Schools:—

I am directed by the Lieut. governor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of May 2, 1872, and to remark as follows:—

His Honour is much obliged for the Association's expression of opinion on the subject of the study of the Sanscrit and vernacular languages in Government schools, and will give the subject his best consideration. Meantime, his Honour desires me to say that he would not discourage the study of Sanscrit; on the contrary, he would give every encouragement to students who are willing to cultivate it by scholarships and other means; and whenever a sufficient number of students is found at a Government school, he will provide for the teaching of Sanscrit in the upper classes of our schools as well as in our colleges; but the Lieut. governor thinks that the study of Sanscrit should not be compulsory, and should not be imposed on boys of tender years, who have not yet a sufficient knowledge of their own vernacular, and are, at the same time, learning the elements of English. Such compulsion is the less necessary, as the University, very wisely his Honour thinks, does not insist on Sanscrit at the entrance examination.

So far as normal schools are concerned the Lieutenant governor would adhere to his order that Sanscrit is not to be taught in primary schools; and these schools are required to train masters for primary schools; and though some normal school students may go to higher vernacular master-ships, still the preparation of good primary schoolmasters is and must be the main object of our normal schools. At primary schools Sanscrit is not taught, and therefore instruction therein cannot be wanted at normal schools.

INDIAN AFFAIRS.—On Tuesday night, in the hall of the Society of Arts, Mr. F. W. Chesson read a paper on the best means of educating English opinion on Indian affairs. He set out by saying that the great debates which preceded the abolition of the East India Company revealed the fact that our sense of responsibility towards India needed a crisis to stimulate it into activity; and he proceeded to cite a variety of other circumstances in support of the fact, among others that the Indian Budget was brought forward in the middle of the dog-days, when an air of languor had settled upon the half-empty benches of the House of Commons, and when weary legislators were content to leave Mr. Grant Duff to talk to the reporters' gallery. To say that, at such a time, the Legislative Chamber was dull, was to convey a very imperfect idea of the lethargy, the monotony, the total absence of life and animation by which an Indian budget debate was characterised. His idea was that Parliament might be aroused from its apathy by the formation of a party pledged to bring forward for prompt discussion any matter important to the political and social well-being of the unrepresented people of India. The rule of India formed part of our national life, and we dare not, even if we could, break its continuity. But it was our duty to administer that rule with a single eye to the good of the people, and to qualify them, by successive steps, for the enjoyment of all the rights of British subjects. A practical and intelligent discussion of the affairs of India could, in his opinion, be secured in the House of Commons by a dozen members combining together to secure that end. A number of the audience, which included his Highness the Nawab of Bengal, Sir David Wedderburn, M.P., Professor Sheldon Amos, Sir James Anderson, and several ladies, joined in the debate which followed the reading of the paper. In the absence of Professor Fawcett, M.P., who was prevented from fulfilling his engagement by ill-health, Mr. McCullagh Torrens, M.P., occupied the chair, and in the course of the proceedings he took occasion to state that although he might again and again fail in his attempts to secure justice being done to his Highness the Nawab at the hands of the English Parliament, such was his sense of English justice that he should persevere in his appeals to it.

THE COMMITTEE ON INDIAN FINANCE.

On Tuesday, July 9, the committee resumed, and General Sir Arthur Cotton's examination was continued, the inquiries being renewed with reference to the expenditure on the opening up of the unnavigable portions of the river Godavery, both for navigation and irrigation purposes. Canals, he said, might be cut almost anywhere in India at the average cost of about £2,500 a mile, which was one-eighth less than the railways had cost. The average charge for carriage had been calculated not to exceed one halfpenny per ton. Witness was well aware that General Strachey's views on this matter were opposed to his own. Asked what might be the political advantages of a new canal for India, General Cotton said he was not a statesman, but only a "drawer of water." If, however, he must offer any opinion on the political question, he would point out that in case of war a railway could be destroyed by an enemy more readily than a canal, which latter was in itself naturally defensible, while a railway could not be kept, or might be destroyed before its defence could be prepared for.

Mr. James Hutton, a gentleman connected with the press of India and also with a Society called the British Indian Association of Calcutta, was called and examined by the Chairman, and also by his locum tenens, Mr. Littleton, in the former's temporary absence. The inquiry was to ascertain how far a previous witness's (Mr. de Costa's) statements could be borne out as to public opinion in India being inimical to the policy and legislation of successive governments of India. Mr. de Costa had complained of excessive expenditure and oppressive taxation. The witness read largely from documents and memoranda to establish the truth of Mr. de Costa's remarks. He adduced the extraordinary expenses of the viceregal court and council in their annual and lengthened visits to Simla as an example of unnecessary expenditure. Mr. Hutton stated that the British Indian Association had addressed an appeal to the Secretary of State remonstrating against the summary mode in which the "British Subjects Bill" had been passed without open discussion by the Governor-General in Council at Simla, some hundreds of miles from the usual seat of Government—Calcutta.

Mr. Massey, late Finance Minister under Lord Canning's viceroyship, was called and examined on the financial system and taxation of India. This important witness proposed to abandon the income-tax in favour of a limited kind of local taxation. He said an income-tax should never be a permanent impost, but only imposed in great exigencies of the State, as the people of India look upon the whole machinery of taxation with extreme aversion, and have always done so. Mr. Massey stated another objection to the governmental systems in India. He said that while he was Finance Minister under Lord Canning he experienced the greatest difficulty in re-arranging the finances in consequence of the strong opposition of the minor Gubernatorial authorities to any interference with their personal arrangements, which they considered the Bengal Government had nothing whatever to do with. But legally and constitutionally both the Governorships of Madras and Bombay are subordinate to the supreme authority of the Governor-General in Council. Mr. Massey asserted that the financial system, which has been in practice in recent years, failed mainly in respect to its total disregard for economical principle. The witness also pointed out as a strange anomaly, viz., that the people of Burma, for instance, should be taxed—which they were—to pay for the roads, canals, and military buildings of presidencies they were not connected with. He recommended that a strict hand should in future be kept over the accounts of the Government, and that a gradual form of local taxation should be introduced throughout the country. He desired to see a special minister appointed to direct and control the financial department.

Mr. Massey advised that certain sources of revenue from excise dues should be surrendered to the local governments whenever a re-organisation of finance and taxation should come to pass.

The committee adjourned for one week, and the further sittings are expected not to occupy more than a day or two longer of the present session, after which the committee will prepare its report.

Miscellaneous.

LORD NAPIER.—We understand that Lord Napier, late Governor of Madras, who recently acted as Viceroy of India on the death of Lord Mayo, and has seen much diplomatic service, is to be called to the Upper House by the title of Baron Etrick of the United Kingdom. A part of Lord Napier's property is in the old Etrick Forest, and the river of that name runs through the property, on which there is also a farm so called. Lord Napier will, we believe, continue to be called after his Scotch barony, which dates from 1627, and this title must not be confounded with that of Lord Napier of Magdala.—The Guardian.

MILITARY.—The Indian Artillery retirements will be gazetted in a fortnight or so. Altogether the outgoing officers are expected to make room for the promotion of twenty captains to the rank of lieutenant-colonel. The retirement of thirty-six field officers and twenty-eight captains and second captains, taken from the three presidency lists, is contemplated in the following proportions:—Bengal, eighteen field officers, eight captains, and five second captains; Madras, ten field officers, six captains, and three second captains; Bombay, eight field officers, four captains, and two second captains.—Army and Navy Gazette.

INDIAN APPEALS BEFORE THE PRIVY COUNCIL.—Juttendromohun Tagore and another v. Ganendromohun Tagore.—Judgment.—These were cross appeals from the High Court in Bengal, and involved important questions under the Hindoo law relating to property of between £40,000 and £50,000 a-year. The testator, the hon. Prosonocomar Tagore, was a Hindoo inhabitant of Calcutta, and the corpus of his estates exceeded half a million sterling. He made a gift to his son, Ganendromohun Tagore, on his marriage, when he was of the same religion as his father, and when he died left him nothing, the son having in 1857 become a Christian and been baptized. The large property was left under various trusts in perpetuity, and it was submitted that, under the Hindoo law of inheritance, such trusts were invalid. There were besides legacies and annuities, which it was not sought to set aside, but the principal question in the contention was as to between £40,000 and £50,000 a-year. Ganendromohun Tagore, who is a barrister-at-law, claimed to be considered as heir-at-law of the vast estates for the reasons alleged in his appeal. Mr. Justice Willes attended to deliver the judgment of the committee, and was nearly an hour and a half in reading an elaborate review of the facts, and the Hindoo law applicable thereto. The effect of the judgment was that the first estate for life was held to be good, and the subsequent estates created by the will to be contrary to the power of a Hindoo to create; and therefore, on the termination of the life estate of Juttendromohun Tagore, the plaintiff, Ganendromohun Tagore (who had embraced Christianity in the lifetime of his father) would succeed as heir-at-law to the whole of the real estates of the testator, and to the surplus of the personalty, after payment thereof of the legacies and annuities bequeathed by the will. Their lordships directed accounts to be taken, and, on the ground of the important and novel questions involved, decreed the costs of the parties up to the present time to be paid out of the surplus of the personalty.

THE BURMESE EMBASSY IN LONDON.—The King of Burma's Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary, the Ministers acting as attachés to the Embassy, and the other gentlemen forming the suite, will have a wonderfully interesting story to tell when they go back to India. They have seen some of the best parts of Italy and France, and now they are rapidly exhausting the sights of London. Since their arrival in the metropolis the Chief Minister and his companions have visited the Exhibition, the Albert Hall, the Crystal Palace, and various other public and private resorts; the process of biscuit-making at Bermondsey has been explained to them; they "assisted" at the opening of the beautiful museum at Bethnal-green, and every day during the remainder of their stay in London has its fixture. For the first time the Envoy accepted a private invitation on July 9, when, accompanied by several of the Embassy and suite, he visited Sudbury-house, Hammersmith, the residence of Mr. Peacock, to inspect that gentleman's rare collection of agaves and cacti. The party comprised the following:—Mengyee Maha Sathoo, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary; Maha Meniha Kyoden Paden Woondouk, Minister of State, second grade; Meniha Zayathoo, secretary to the Embassy; several of the suite; and Mr. Edmund Jones, agent to the Embassy. As the visit had been kept strictly private, the Ambassador and his party were not, as is usually the case, made the subjects of a demonstration by the public; and the three or four policemen who were on duty had nothing whatever to do. His Excellency and suite were received by Mr. Peacock, and conducted first through the grounds, and then through the various conservatories, in which are stored a great many botanical treasures, including several hundred of the finest known specimens of succulent plants. The peculiar form and beauty of the agaves and cacti, which are a unique collection, were greatly admired by the distinguished visitors, who, after seeing the whole of the gardens, returned to the lawn. Here they were entertained by Mr. Peacock, whose daughters had the honour of presenting the Ambassador and some of his suite with handsome bouquets. A few presentations having been made to the Ambassador, his Excellency took his leave, after expressing the pleasure he had derived from his visit. The Embassy remain at the Grosvenor Hotel for about three weeks, at the expiration of which period they will visit the principal provincial cities and towns, including Birmingham and some other places in the midlands.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, FRIDAY, JULY 12.—THE PERSIAN MISSION.—Mr. EASTWICK called attention to the state of affairs in Persia, with the view of enforcing on the House and the Government the wisdom of transferring the control of our Persian missions from the Foreign Office to the Indian Department. In an interesting speech Mr.

Eastwick traced the history of our diplomatic relations with that country from the earliest times, and in moving a resolution in favour of the transfer, which was recommended by a select committee last year, he pointed out that all our interests in Persia were Indian, and that it was only on account of our Indian Empire that we needed a mission in Persia.—Sir C. WINGFIELD seconded the resolution, arguing that our diplomacy in Persia must depend entirely on our Indian policy. Mr. BOURKE also supported it, pointing out how many questions of Indian policy touched on Persian politics, and maintaining that men with an Indian training were much better fitted to deal with Persian affairs than European diplomacy.—Lord ENFIELD defended Lord Granville's refusal to accept the recommendation of the select committee, and quoted the opinion of great authorities—such as Lord CLARENDON, Lord HALIFAX, Sir H. BULWER, and Mr. HAMMOND,—in favour of keeping Persia within the European rather than the Indian circle. He examined the arguments offered on both sides, and drew the unhesitating conclusion that our Minister in Persia ought to be appointed by the Queen and not by the Viceroy of India. Mr. BOUVERIE, the Chairman, and Mr. STOPFORD-SACKVILLE and Mr. KINNAIRD, members of the Committee, supported the motion; and Mr. CARTWRIGHT opposed it.—Sir STAFFORD NORTHCOTE said that his experience at the India-office had convinced him that a more direct control over our diplomatic relations with Persia ought to be given to the Indian Government, while Mr. GLADSTONE, in opposing the motion, maintained that the Committee which recommended the change had exceeded its order of reference, and laid great stress on the fact that the weight of Parliamentary experience and of Foreign office experience was against it. On a division, the motion was negatived by 90 to 60.

ENGLISH INFLUENCE IN NATIVE STATES.

The Times admits that it would, of course, be possible to lay too much stress on a single example of wise government, like that of Punnah, the force of which may, after all, be reversed, if the present Maharajah should not fulfil the promise of his youth. Punnah, however, is by no means an isolated case, but only a very striking case, of successful and benevolent administration by a native ruler under British protection, yet, apparently, without pressure or instigation from British officials. What, then, does it prove? It proves, so far as it goes, that British rule in India may operate, and is operating, as a civilising agent, even where its influence is not visibly exerted. It is surely absurd to ask, though it has been asked in a very confident tone, whether the native princes might not have availed themselves of British capital and science though British soldiers had never set foot in India—whether railways might not have been constructed, and ports opened for commerce, and agriculture developed, and industrial arts encouraged, by independent Hindoo communities if the mutiny had ended in our expulsion from the country. The sufficient and decisive reply to such questions is that all this might, no doubt, have occurred, but that we have not the smallest reason for supposing it would have occurred, and every reason for supposing it would not. All history attests the stubbornness of Oriental society, except where it is brought under the spell of Western civilization. The real doubt is not whether the inhabitants of India would have entered of their own accord on the path of progress, but whether the powerful initiative of the British Government can ever induce them to adopt it heartily. Until the last few years this doubt weighed heavily on the minds of all who reflected seriously on the connection of Great Britain with India, and were not satisfied with the assurance that, having somehow got there, we had a "mission" to remain. The marvellous advance made by India since, though probably not in consequence of the final transfer of its sceptre from the Company to the Crown has gone far to dispel any such misgivings, and to show that no inherent incapacity for progress has kept the native races of Asia so far behind Europe in what Europeans term civilisation.

NOTICE.

MORSON'S EFFECTUAL REMEDIES

Are Sold by Chemists and Druggists throughout the World.

PEPSINE.—The popular and professional medicine for Indigestion is MORSON'S PEPASIN, the active principle of the gastric juice. In Powder, Lozenges, Globules, and as Wine.

CHLORODYNE has now obtained such universal celebrity it can scarcely be considered a speciality, its composition being known to most European practitioners. The combination of Chloroform quickly relieves the pain and spasms of Cholera, Diarrhoea, Dysentery, and in fact all acute and nervous pains, and chronic Coughs; frequently small doses will produce this beneficial result. Many of the Chlorodynes of commerce are not of uniform strength; this has induced MORSON and SON to compound their preparation. Sold in 1-oz., 1, and 2-oz. bottles.

GELATINE.—The purest preparation of this nutritious agent extant is MORSON'S.

PEPTIC FOOD for Invalids and Infants, digestible, nutritious, and palatable. Sold in 1-lb. and 4-lb. tins.

All the above are carefully packed and shipped to orders, which must be made payable in England.

Beg to inform late residents in India that their celebrated Chutney can be obtained of all Italian Warehousemen and Grocers throughout the Kingdom, and Wholesale only of their Agents,

CROSSE AND BLACKWELL, SOHO-SQUARE.

None genuine without the Label bearing their names; and that of CROSSE AND BLACKWELL.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.

Nervous Debility.—Not only is the nervous system affected by variations of temperature and atmospheric vicissitudes, but it also intensely sympathizes with disorder in any part of the body. These excellent Pills, being noted for their powers of promoting digestion and regulating secretions, have likewise proved themselves the most certain of neuro-tonics and the best preservers of vital energy. In summer Holloway's Pills are especially useful in guarding the system against malaria and sunstroke, from excessive heat, and in perfecting digestion to that degree which permits the various vegetables and fruits abounding at this season to be eaten with impunity, even often with advantage to health.

MICROSCOPICAL investigation has proved that the decaying substances which so cumulate between the teeth contain animal and vegetable parasites, and that the tooth powders, pastes, and washes in general use have no effect upon these.

Messrs. GABRIEL'S Coralite Tooth Paste, Royal Dentifrice and Odontalgique Elixir (obtainable of every respectable Chemist and Perfumer) completely destroy and remove these animalcules, and also preserve and beautify the Teeth.

Prepared only by MESSRS. GABRIEL, DENTISTS, LONDON—64, LUDGATE-HILL, CITY; AND 56, HARLEY-STREET, CAVENDISH-SQUARE.

AMARELLA restores the Human Hair to its pristine hue, no matter at what age. JOHN GOSNELL and Co. have at length, with the aid of one of the most eminent Chemists, succeeded in perfecting this wonderful liquid. It is now offered to the public in a more concentrated form, and at a lower price. Sold in bottles, 3s. each; also 6s., 7s. 6d., and 15s. each, including brushes. London Angel-passage 93 Upper Thames-street, E.C.

RUPTURES.—BY HER PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER

TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1861, is allowed by upwards of 500 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer.

Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d., postage, free. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, free. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, free.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS,

&c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, free.

East Cowes, Isle of Wight.—A Gentleman's very attractive Freehold Marine Residence, together with excellent Stabling and Outbuildings, a beautiful Terrace, having a long sea frontage and landing steps, available at all times of the tide, and off which there is anchorage for a yacht; indeed, it is in every way adapted for the occupation of a yachtman or for the formation of a Yacht Club. For Sale with possession. Also, the East Cowes Pontoon Pier, with a Dwelling-house, Wharves, Landing Stages, &c., part let on lease, the residue with possession; and the Medina Hotel, together with three Dwelling-houses, and an extensive range of Buildings, known as the Medina Stables.

MESSERS. DEBENHAM, TEWSON, and FARMER will SELL, at the MART, London, on TUESDAY, August 13, at Two, in Three Lots, the following valuable FREEHOLD PROPERTIES, viz.:—Lot 1. The truly charming Marine Residence, known as East Lee, beautifully situated on the east side of the entrance to Cowes from the Solent. It is of attractive elevation, in the Gothic style, has a portico entrance, and comprises nine excellent bed chambers, a dressing-room, a bath-room, housemaids' closets, store-rooms, &c., an elegant drawing-room, opening to a handsome conservatory, a dining-room, a library, a vestibule, a spacious hall, a noble billiard-room, with aviary and lavatory. The domestic offices are very convenient, and include every requisite for a gentleman's establishment. The stabling department is of a very complete character, and includes eight loose boxes, four stalls, coach-house for six carriages, coachman's house, extensive storage, &c. The beautiful terrace, extending along the entire sea frontage, is an unusually pleasing feature in addition to affording great facilities in connection with yachting. Good hunting can be enjoyed during the winter months. Possession of this lot may be had on completion of the purchase. Lot 2. The East Cowes Pontoon Pier, with a Residence, a Toll-house or Office, a yacht store, and extensive warehouses. Part let at the low rental of £150 per annum, the residue with possession. Lot 3. The old-established Medina Hotel, together with three Dwelling-houses, and the extensive range of buildings known as the Medina Stables, let at low rents, amounting to £120 per annum.

Particulars, with Plans, Views, and Conditions of Sale, may be obtained in due course of Messrs. SYMONS, SANDILANDS, and HUMPHREY, Solicitors, 33, Fenchurch-street, City, or of Mr. A. M. Maw, Esq., Solicitor, Newport and Shanklin, Isle of Wight; and of Messrs. DEBENHAM, TEWSON, and FARMER, Auctioneers and Land Agents, 80, Cheap-side, London, E.C.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail, are—from Bombay, June 28; Agra and Madras, June 26; Calcutta, June 25.

THE news of the week is meagre, as befits a time of general rest in the plains and of holiday-making in the Hills. Nearly all the grandees are at their several summer-quarters; Lord Northbrook and Mr. Davies at Simla, Sir W. Muir at Nainital, Sir P. Wodehouse at Poonah, Lord Hobart at Ootacamund. Calcutta alone still rejoices in the presence of Mr. G. Campbell.

CHOLERA is reported as prevailing in many parts of the Punjab. In Umballa district the cases averaged at one time thirty a-day, but the number has since fallen to fifteen and ten. The great fair at Thanésar came off without hindrance in spite of the disease, and owing to the precautions taken no case of cholera occurred among the assembled crowds. Everything however was done to discourage the gathering of pilgrims at the annual fair in the Gujranwála district, and so far successfully, that few pilgrims from a distance took part in it this year.

ON the 20th June Lord Northbrook met his Council for business, which seems to have been despatched in about ten minutes. Mr. Hobhouse brought up the final report of the Committee on the Bill regarding the marriages of Christians in India. Sir R. Temple's Bill touching the repayment of Savings Banks money lodged in the names of minors was referred to a select committee. The same process was enacted with his Bill for taxing certain spirits made in Burmah. After General Norman had got leave to bring in a Bill for admitting native military lunatics into asylums, the Council adjourned for a fortnight.

THE rainy season having fairly set in all over India, we begin already to hear of damage caused by the wet to railway works and roads. A part of the Great Indian Peninsular Line has been washed away near Bhosawal, and the train from Calcutta delayed five hours. On the Baroda and Central Indian Line several carriages ran down a high embankment and two natives were killed. The great rivers were steadily rising, and an overflow of the Indus was deemed imminent in Sindh. Some thirty inches of rain had already fallen at Bombay. In the North-West Provinces the rainfall has been comparatively light.

It is stated that the Punjab Camp of Exercise for the next cold season will come off at Hasan Abdal, a fine stretch of open highland between Rawal Pindi and Attok.

COLONEL LUMSDEN, the Quartermaster-General, is to act for Mr. Saunders at Hyderabad, during that gentleman's absence on three months' privilege leave. This arrangement has been made with special reference to certain important questions which Colonel Lumsden is deemed specially qualified to discuss. It is said that General Stewart, Governor of the Andaman Islands, succeeds Colonel Lumsden as Quartermaster-General, and that Brigadier Wilson will take the command of the North Eastern Frontier on the retirement of General Bouchier. In that case says the Pioneer Colonel Rothney is almost certain of the Peshawar Brigade.

ACCORDING to the Calcutta Englishman Sir John Strachey comes home in September for six months, at the end of which he will replace Sir W. Muir as Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West Provinces.

THE Cowan Testimonial Fund has risen to nearly Rs. 5,000. Mr. Cowan himself has gone to Simla to lay his case before the Viceroy.

MR. G. W. KELLNER and Mr. Fitzgerald are engaged in the enquiry ordered by Government into the recent money transactions between the Finance Department and the Bank of Bengal.

A Times telegram of July 16 from Calcutta informs us of a fact which would hardly be worth repeating, but for the light it throws on a question lately discussed by the author of "Orissa." Mr. Hunter has added some heavy stones to the pile which recent inquirers have been raising over the grave of a very popular error, regarding the suicides yearly perpetrated under the car of the God Jagannáth. According to the aforesaid telegram, one man was crushed to death under the car of Jagannáth at Serampore on the night of July 15, and another "is not expected to live." Lest anyone however should rashly look on these as new confirmations of an old exploded legend, our informant adds that the event was "purely accidental."

FROM the same telegram we learn that some more piers of the Sutlej Railway Bridge have sunk, and that people of all classes and colours are rejoicing over the rumoured selection of Sir William Grey, the late Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, as successor to Sir Richard Temple in the Finance Department. This, like so many other stories lately spread about with reference to the present Finance Minister, must be taken, we fancy, not for the outcome of a rumour well-grounded or widely believed, but rather as an index to the wide unpopularity of Sir R. Temple, to a feeling of almost hatred cherished by the Calcutta public against the whilom governor of the Central Provinces, who has since been making so wild a hash of Indian finance. Sir W. Grey might possibly prove a better or a better-liked Finance Minister than the author of the revived income-tax; but we are not aware that Sir R. Temple means to resign his post before his five years are up, for all the hints which have been roared out to him by his angry critics. There is better authority perhaps for the latter part of the telegram, which tells of the attention paid by the new Viceroy to the finances, with a view to reduction of expenditure; and it is likely enough that the result of his labours will "decide the question of an income-tax for next year."

WE are not surprised to hear that Baboo Rajendralal Mittra surprised his audience, at the last meeting of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, by his paper on the use of beef in ancient India. Imagine the horror of the more orthodox among them at being told by one of their most learned sages that, according to old Sanskrit writings, the Hindus were a beer-drinking and beef-eating race. And what he said he proceeded to prove from various ancient and mediæval authors. One of the rites mentioned by the former was called sulagava, "spitted cow," or roast beef. A second, the panchasaradiya, required the slaughter of seventeen five-year old dwarf bulls without humps, and as many three-year-old heifers. In a third instance, one hundred and eighty animals, horses, bulls, cows, sheep, goats, deer, and nilgaus, were slaughtered. One Hindu god had a preference for well-grown bulls, another for steers, a third for veal. After the sacrifice, the animals were cut up and distributed among the priests and bystanders. The livers were roasted and reserved for the priests as tid-bits, which they washed down with draughts of "soma beer." In one of the mediæval dramas occurs a scene in which two disciples of Vālmīki, the poet of the Rāmāyan, talk about the slaughter of some pet calves for the entertainment of an honoured guest. In another play, an angry sage is tempted to remain under his host's roof, because "the heifer was ready to be slaughtered, and the food was to be cooked in ghee." The Baboo held that Brahmans ate beef until the first century B.C., when they began to follow the example of their Buddhist rivals. No authority older than the seventh century after Christ can be quoted, it seems, against the use of beef. After all, then, Keshab Chandar Sen had not so much reason to be horrified at the large consumption of flesh in these colder regions of ours.

ON Friday night Lord Harrowby pleaded in the Upper House the policy of referring to some high judicial court the questions still in dispute between the India Office and the claimants of the Kirwee prize-money. In so doing he merely followed up the recommendations of the Royal Commissioners who reported to that effect in 1864. Lord Longford and the Duke of Cambridge supported a plea whose general soundness appears to us beyond question, whatever may be said against the justice of the claims still urged by the captors of Kirwee. On this point the Duke of Argyll argued fairly enough, that the value of Government notes confiscated some time before the advance on Kirwee ought not to be written down to the credit of the captors, especially as the notes, said Lord Lawrence, have never yet been found. With regard to the jewels and old coin taken at Kirwee, on which interest is claimed from the date of capture, his Grace denied the obligation of the Indian Government to "pay interest on any booty of which they were not themselves in profitable possession." The coin and jewels were not sold till about 1862, and only from that date could interest in his and Lord Lawrence's opinion be fairly paid. All this is very well, and it may be that the claims now in dispute are as "preposterous" as his Grace described them. There is abstract reason also in the complaint that so rich a booty should be shared among the few troops who had the luck to capture it, instead of being distributed among all the forces engaged at the same time in encountering a common foe. The victors of Lucknow and Delhi who had much harder fighting and more trying work in hand, may have gained but little in the shape of prize compared with Whitlock's soldiers. But if the custom of war has hitherto reserved the prize for its actual captors, there is no use in appealing to abstract right. His Grace might also have spared his reference to the exceeding poverty of Indian taxpayers, as a reason for declining to refer a doubtful claim to a properly constituted court of equity. It is not for the Government to be its own judge in matters concerning the interests of others besides itself, nor is it enough to say that one department of State has settled these claims in favour of another. The question is whether certain monies are rightly claimed or not by certain parties; and it is evident that such a question can be fairly decided only by an independent court. If the Indian Government felt so sure as it seems to feel of the justice of its resistance to a preposterous claim, what harm could there be in referring the matter to some tribunal whose verdict would be regarded as final by all concerned? It is utterly beside the mark to dwell on the alleged distinctions between prize taken at sea and prize taken by land. What is really wanted is a competent court to fix general rules for both and settle disputed questions in the shortest possible time. Consider the poverty of Indian taxpayers if you like, but let us consider also the cruelty of making brave men wait for years for the settlement of claims which might surely have been decided, one way or the other, in a few weeks. Lord Stanley of Alderley dreads encouraging lawless plunder by adopting for prize on land the same rules as for prize at sea. There is much more danger of encouraging plunder on land, if our soldiers are forced to wait year after year for the prize they may have fairly earned.

"ONE of General Whitlock's Force," in to-day's Times contradicts some of the statements in the Duke of Argyll's speech on the Kirwee prize claims. He declares that Kirwee was not surrendered to Mr. Mayne and a few policemen, but to General Whitlock himself, by whose side the writer rode into the place. Whitlock, after the well-fought battle of Banda, advanced on Kirwee, not with 2,000, but with 10,000 men, and the chiefs gave up their swords to him in the writer's presence. No claim has ever been made for loss sustained by the deterioration of the prize jewels. A doubtful expression in a letter from the prize-agents was at once disavowed by the President of the Prize Committee and afterwards by the agents themselves. The claim to interest on the booty locked up for four years was "virtually admitted" last year by the Duke himself in his letter of May 11. The same writer asserts that debts due to the enemy have been treated as fair prize in former cases. But had those debts in such cases been formally cancelled weeks beforehand? All this tends the more clearly to show the need of independent arbitration between the contending parties to prize claims.

WE are glad to see that a member of the Bengal Civil Service has just carried off one of the prizes for proficiency in Law at the Inner Temple. The Mr. W. Duthoit, mentioned in last Wednesday's papers as Exhibitor for this year of the Council of Legal Education in Civil Law, Jurisprudence, &c., is a Civil Servant of 1858, now holding the post of Deputy Superintendent to the Family Domains of the Rajah of Benares. Being at home on furlough, he entered himself as student at the Inner Temple, and these are the first fruits of his new studies.

THE letter of "F.P." in the Times of July 18, on the Purchase System in the Indian Army, seems to us a little beside the mark, unless it prove to be the first of a series on the same subject. The question of legality is not one which has to be argued now. The claims of Indian officers to bonus compensation were practically and even formally admitted by Lord Cranborne in 1866, when he said that Government was bound to indemnify its servants for losses caused by its own action. His India Office Despatch made a certain show of carrying out that principle and discharging that obligation. There is no need therefore to lay much stress on the absolute legality of the Bonus System in India, except so far as it may serve to heighten the contrast between Lord Cranborne's evasive concessions and the handsome measure of compensation meted out by last year's Act to the officers of an Army in which purchase was either wholly or partially illegal. What the friends of the Indian officers have to show is the gross unfairness of compensating the Indian army for the loss of bonuses absolutely legal, on terms which no one would have had the face to offer her Majesty's Army. Why are the latter receiving full over-regulation value for their steps, while Indian officers are put off with miserable fractions not of the money they had looked to receive from their juniors, but only of the money they had spent in buying out others? Why are too such different measures meted out to two different sets of officers in what is practically one army? On what grounds have so many officers in the new line regiments received full compensation for the sums they would else have got from their juniors, while scores of their old Indian comrades have got either nothing at all, or only a few pounds, in settlement of far more strictly legal claims? These are the questions which should be asked in Parliament early next year, and if simple justice alone dictated the answer, the cause of the Indian officers would soon be won. It would only remain with their friends to show, what there can be no difficulty in showing, the absurd injustice of the rules laid down by Lord Cranborne, and the actual results of their application at this moment. They can also point to the recorded opinions of the two minor Governments in India, and to the telling absence of Lord Napier's signature from the minute subscribed in an opposite sense by his colleagues in Bengal. With these facts and arguments in their favour they will have a better chance of influencing the House of Commons, than by going into the small points of legal history on which "F.P.'s" letter mainly dwells. There is no need in short to confuse a simple question with superfluous details. Whatever may have happened in the Madras Army, the purchase system in Bengal virtually received its death-blow in 1858.

If a contemporary is rightly informed, the long list of promotions of artillery officers contained in the War Office Circular of July 16 is likely to prove an empty boon to the Indian Artillery. It appears that the promotions of First Captains to Majors in that branch of the service is not to carry with it any increase of pay, as the like promotions will do in the old Royal Artillery. The Duke of Argyll, we are told, declines to grant the new majors the pay of the rank which ought long since to have been theirs. We cannot but hope that in this matter our contemporary has been misinformed. No earthly reason can fairly be assigned for an arrangement so manifestly unfair. If justice demanded that captains in command of batteries should hold the rank of major, it necessarily follows that they should receive major's pay. In the regular English service the increased pay will go as a thing of course with the higher rank. To deprive Indian officers on any plea of the more substantial half of the boon evidently intended to reach all alike, would be an act of such glaring injustice, that we cannot regard it as even contemplated by the head of the Indian Council.

WE are glad to hear that the long and useful services of Mr. T. L. Seccombe, C.B., Financial Secretary to the India Office, have been further rewarded by his transfer to the post of Assistant Under-Secretary of State for India, which has been left unfilled ever since the retirement of Mr. J. Melville, about two years ago. An old and trusty servant first of the Company and afterwards of the Crown, Mr. Seccombe won his way some years ago to the headship of the Financial Department in the India Office, in which his tried abilities as a financier were last year acknowledged by a Companionship of the Bath. In his new position his long experience will no doubt prove of the highest value to his chiefs, at a time when economy is the order of the day.

COURT MARTIAL.—At a district court martial assembled at Peshawur on May 8, Apothecary W. R. Gray was arraigned on the following charge:—Conduct, to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in having, at Peshawur, on March 20, refused to obey the order of Surgeon E. F. O'Leary, in medical charge of the regiment, and conveyed to him by Hospital Apprentice J. Kirby, by which order he was directed to attend at the orderly-room on that day. Finding: The Court finds that Apothecary W. R. Gray is guilty of the charge. Sentence: The Court sentence the prisoner to be reduced to the bottom of the list of first class apothecaries of the subordinate medical department.—P. C. Anderson, major, R.A., president. Disapproved: Dr. Morgan considered Mr. Apothecary Gray unfit for duty, and desired him to "remain quiet." He should not, therefore, have been ordered to the orderly room. Mr. Gray is reported to be of good character, and to have served during the mutiny at the sieges of Delhi and Lucknow, and also in the Province of Oudh. He will be released from arrest, and return to his duty, with a serious warning as to his future conduct.—NAPIER of Magdala, general, C. in C. in India.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

MONDAY, July 22, 1872.

RAJPUTANA IN 1870.

COLONEL BROOKE'S Report on the affairs of the Rajputana Agency for 1870-71 draws on the whole a pleasing picture of the numerous Native States under his control. Traces of the famine of 1868-9 might still be seen, and the western states suffered from drought during the year under review. Eastward however the crops were luxuriant, in spite of the damage done to the young grain in Alwar and Bhurtore by a kind of grasshopper. The Rubhee or spring harvest was everywhere good.

It was in October of this year that Lord Mayo held his great Durbar at Ajmere, from which the Jodhpore Rajah was excluded for refusing to sit below his brother-chief of Udaipore. At this Durbar the late Viceroy broached his scheme of a College for the sons of the Chiefs, Princes, and Thakoors or landed gentry of Rajputana. His appeal to the assembled Chiefs was in due time answered by a subscription of Rs. 6,31,000, a noble endowment for the purposes of the Mayo College. The Rana of Udaipore headed the list with Rs. 100,000 and the Rajah of Jaipore with Rs. 125,000. Many other subscriptions may be expected. The boys will be educated free of cost except for their personal attendants, food, and the keep of their horses. The buildings, it is hoped, will soon be commenced. Colonel Brooke contrasts the circumstances of Lord Mayo's visit with the state of things when Lord W. Bentinck visited Ajmere in 1831-2. "Then the Governor-General moved by slow and toilsome marches of ten or twelve miles a-day, with no carriages, but an innumerable number of elephants and palanquins and an army of troops and camp-followers. The baggage was piled on native hackeries, the bullocks breaking down, or with galled necks labouring at a snail-like pace through the deep Jaipore sands." The Maharana of Mewar "breaking through the pride and prejudices of his people," had gone to Ajmere to welcome the Governor-General. Man Singh of Marwar, a descendant, we imagine, of Akbar's great general, kept away from feelings of pride. The Maharao of Bundi was perhaps the only one who lived to see the next gathering of Rajput chiefs under Lord Mayo. In those days a public Durbar was impossible, because the chiefs would neither have met each other nor the Governor-General without the greatest ceremony. The visit therefore "passed away as a show, not leaving any permanent impression for the benefit of the country." On the present occasion Lord Mayo found Bhurtore covered with roads, over which he travelled swiftly in his carriage; and a single day took his party 112 miles from Bhurtore to Jaipore, over the beautiful road which the Government and the Native States are now making between Agra and Ahmadabad. At Jaipore Lord Mayo found broad footways of cut stone, well paved-streets, a handsome jail, a noble college with a princely endowment, besides a school for the sons of Thakoors, a female school, and the new school of arts, none of which existed in Lord Bentinck's time. Even the little State of Kishenghur has been covered with large and beautiful irrigation-tanks.

There has also been a marked change in the bearing of the people. Forty years ago they were jealous of all we did for their good, and suspected us of plotting against their rulers. No officer moved in safety among them without a Sepoy guard, nor was any Englishman secure from insult, if not worse, in any but the main streets of their larger towns. Our forbearing conduct during the Mutiny, and the display of our strength in crushing rebellion, first taught them a different lesson. Lord Canning's conciliatory treatment of native Chiefs and his concession of their right to adopt heirs completed the good work, and both rulers and people have come to regard us with goodwill, and even affection; so that officers can now travel by themselves all over the country without fear of insult, and with every likelihood of friendly aid. Many native schools are now scattered through the country, and our dispensaries give relief to thousands. Closer contact between natives and Europeans has taught each race to appreciate the other's good qualities, and indeed, according to Colonel Brooke, the people of Rajputana are less bigoted and intolerant than any other class of natives.

In Alwar the intrigues and open conflicts caused by the "gross misrule" of its Rajah, were at length allayed by the tact and firmness of Captain Cadell, the Political Agent, with whose help the new Council of State got into good working order. The Rajah however made some demur to the handsome allowance of Rs. 15,000 a-month for his own use, deeming himself entitled to enjoy at least half the revenues, no matter how ill the State might fare on the other half. Bhurtpore, on the other hand, shows the results of careful government by a succession of able officers during the minority of the present Maharajah. The country is fruitful and populous, the people contented and industrious; there are no turbulent nobles, and the Sirdars are paid by salaries in cash. In 1870 the young Maharajah was invested with full sovereign powers, which he agreed to exercise in fulfilment of promises made by him to Lord Mayo.

At Dholpore, Colonel Brooke prevailed upon the Rajah to forego transit duties on merchandise passing along the trunk road to Gwalior. The completion of this road had caused an immense increase in the traffic, which formerly crossed the Chambal at some distance from Dholpore. To the sacrifice of revenue caused by the abolition of the transit dues his Highness had cheerfully consented; but a party at Dholpore have been working for their own ends upon the Rajah's dread of hostile criticism levelled at him through the Press.

At Kerowlie, the death of Captain Blair left the affairs of that State in so unsettled a condition, that Colonel Brooke's predecessor, Colonel Keatinge, resolved to send thither some troops from Deolee, to prevent the chance of any disturbance during the interregnum that happened on the death of Lachman Pal. Everything however went on smoothly, and Jai Singh Pal, who was installed on the vacant guddee, gives every promise of being a good ruler. His people are described as happy, and particularly friendly to English officers. The jail and dispensary were found clean, and the latter well attended.

Between Kerowlie and Tonk lies a good deal of the Jaipore territory, whose capabilities are greatly neglected, owing to the Durbar's unwillingness to show "too flourishing a revenue." The villages are farmed much below their real value to courtiers, or those who bribe the courtiers. Nevertheless, the people are lightly assessed, and seem prosperous, although large tracts of land are lying fallow.

At Tonk, the young Nawab was installed with much ceremony, in order to show the people how firmly the Indian Government was bent on supporting the ruling chief, and how vainly the friends of the deposed Nawab would intrigue for his return to power.

In spite of his bad health, the young Nawab takes plenty of interest in the affairs of his State. His people seem poor in comparison with those of other Rajput capitals; but their condition bids fair to be much improved by the railway now making between Agra and Ajmere, and the road between Tonk and Jaipore, which is destined to meet the railway. In the neighbourhood of Tonk are many talaos, or tanks, one of them four or five miles long, which the grandfather of the present Nawab delighted in making, not for purposes of irrigation, but "for the sake of enjoying the sight of the beautiful pieces of water themselves." The whole of the country south of Tonk, within the bight of the Bunass, is very fertile, producing heavy crops of grain.

Another chief installed by Colonel Brooke was the petty Rajah of Shahpura, part of whose estate lies within the British district of Ajmere. The last Rajah, an illiterate debauchee, died young, and his estate, which had been much neglected, was further embarrassed by a disputed succession. At last the present Rajah was selected by the Thakoors, and his election confirmed by the Viceroy in Council. His maternal uncle manages the estate, and much good may be looked for from the attention bestowed on it by the political agent of Haraootee. The town though poor and mean to look at, is said to be flourishing, but very unhealthy, owing to a large marshy tank which feeds a broad wet ditch surrounding the town with stagnant water.

The middle of Rajputana is said to be far less productive than it might be. There is no settled method of managing the revenue. The landholders and farmers lack enterprise. The ryots are not properly encouraged, and the produce of the country is restricted to ordinary grains. Large tracts are capable of producing opium, sugar-cane, and tobacco. The late minister of the Jaipore Rajah took such interest in the development of his country's resources, that in three years he doubled the revenue of one district by persuading the cultivators to sow opium and tobacco. This, as Colonel Brooke rightly observes, is a subject on which the advice of our Political Officers might be given with benefit. At present none of these Rajput States exports anything but a little inferior cotton. What grain they grow is only enough for home consumption. If the people were encouraged to turn their husbandry to the best account, they would soon be enabled to exchange their surplus produce for the cloths, metal wares, and articles of luxury supplied by our own districts.

PUNJAB RAILWAYS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—In providing for the defence of India, our Government must consider whether the decisive battle is likely to be fought on the plains of Peshawur or of Dera Ghazee Khan; or whether our whole strength is to be distributed between Lahore and Mooltan, a distance of nearly 200 miles, with the object of defending the line of the Ravee.

One is inclined to believe that the latter arrangement must be floating in the minds of our rulers, for no prudent general would like to hazard the fate of India on the chance of preserving unbroken a single thin line of 3 ft. 3½ in. guage railway, for a length of 280 miles from Lahore to Peshawur, in the midst of a disaffected population, considering that a great portion of this narrow line is to wind among hills. The British army would probably find it necessary to fall back from Peshawur on Lahore, and try to hold the line of the Ravee, with the aid of the railroad from Lahore to Mooltan.

I need scarcely add that this attempt must fail, in the presence of the hordes of Tartars luxuriating in the rich plains between the Jhelum and Ravee, ready to march fifty miles a day, and swarming around the British army as the Parthians were wont to do around the Roman legions.

The Mongol Tartars will always be ready to assist the Russians in executing Prince Nassau Siegen's project, presented to the Empress Catherine in 1787, to re-establish the great Moghul on the throne of India.

The line of defence for India must be the Indus, and not the Ravee. To make this line defensible we must have a direct railway from Mooltan to Attock.

This line might be constructed within three years, for three millions sterling.

First section, from Mooltan to Leia, 69 miles.

The only difficulty would be the construction of a bridge over the Chenab, west of Mooltan. Sooner or later this must be built, in order to connect Dera Ghazee Khan with the rest of India. It is possible that the fate of India may hereafter be decided on a battle-field not very far from Dera Ghazee Khan.

The railroad might either be taken by Bhooke or by Moosuffurgurh and Muhmood Kot; I understand that a railway has already been completed from Mooltan to Sher Shah, opposite Moosuffurgurh.

Second section, from Leia to Durya Khan, opposite Dera Ismael Khan, 58 miles.

No difficulty will be experienced in constructing this line, it is believed, nor in constructing the third section from Durya Khan to Daood Kheyl, 75 miles.

Fourth section, from Daood Kheyl to Attock, 84 miles, via Trap Malowal and Jhund. English engineers will smile at the difficulties which may be suggested by the Indian Government, and first-rate contractors will be delighted to accept an offer of £15,000 a mile; and what is half a million extra in comparison with the necessity of securing the stability of our Indian Empire?—Your obedient servant, T.

▲ Sanskrit-English Dictionary, etymologically and philologically arranged, with special reference to Greek, Latin, Gothic, German, Anglo-Saxon, and other cognate Indo-European Languages. By Monier Williams, M.A., Boden Professor of Sanskrit in the University of Oxford. Oxford: At the Clarendon Press, 1872.

Though we would not go the length to say, as has lately been advanced, that Sanskrit ought henceforth to take its station in our Universities along with Greek and Latin as a third classical language, to enjoy the same privileges as the two others, we hold it to be most desirable that greater encouragement should be given to the study of it than has been the case heretofore. A fair acquaintance with that language and its classical literature, as an indispensable introduction to the study of the Indian vernaculars and of Indian modes of thought, is unfortunately still a postulate far from being fully recognised by those who regulate the training of our young Indian civilians. Nor are our classical philologists as yet so generally alive as they should be to the powerful aid which the Sanskrit language, from the perspicuity of its grammatical structure and the richness of its vocabulary, is able to bring to bear on a more correct understanding of the cognate classical languages of Europe. Excellent books have appeared of late years, in every way calculated to make the importance of a scientific analysis and intercomparison of languages appreciated in wider circles, and win votaries, especially to the study of Sanskrit as the safest basis of grammatical and etymological science. Grammars, too, are abundant, both of Sanskrit per se and of Sanskrit in its relation to the cognate languages; and texts, embracing the more valuable portion of Sanskrit literature in its whole extent, are easily procurable. Still, setting aside the obvious interest which the records of an ancient civilisation such as that of India, her largest dependency, should widely awaken in England, the various and grave inducements to foster Sanskrit studies have hitherto met with an almost ludicrously faint response, even in the Universities, not excepting University College, London, where the classes of the late Professor Goldstücker were always thinly attended, and that chiefly by natives of India. It is a well-known fact that on the Continent Sanskrit is more and more considered as a necessary complement to a sound philological training, the University of Leipzig taking the lead, while that of Berlin is, strange to say, the only one in which the Professors of classical philology appear to be, unhappily, of a different way of thinking.

We will not enter here into an examination of the various causes which have combined in producing such an indifference to the study of Sanskrit in a country where its importance is further pointed out by reasons of policy and philanthropy which do not apply to the Continent. But if one of those causes has been alleged to be the want of a comprehensive dictionary, it can no longer be pleaded as an excuse, since it has been removed by the appearance of Professor Monier Williams' Sanskrit-English Dictionary, which has just issued from the Clarendon Press. There can be no question that this is a very timely publication. The second edition of Wilson's dictionary has for many years been very scarce, and Yates's reproduction of the first edition, and a recent abridgment of the second, are not calculated to assist the advanced student, while Benfey's scholarly work, published by Longmans in 1866, contains only about one-third of the matter which Professor Williams has been able to condense in his compact volume. The sources on which the Professor has drawn in compiling his work are duly acknowledged in the preface, the principal of them being the "St. Petersburg Sanskrit Thesaurus," which is still in course of publication. The printing of his own was commenced upwards of nine years ago, since which time Sanskrit literature and philology have received many important accessions; it would therefore be unfair to apply to the earlier portion of it the same standard as to the later. The compiler himself, as he proceeded with his work, would gradually accustom himself to exercise a severer criticism in the use of his authorities than he had probably done in its earlier stages. He also expresses himself with great modesty as to the imperfections and shortcomings attaching to his performance. But these do not in the least detract from its great merit and usefulness. Indeed, as a monument of twenty years' indefatigable industry and conscientious research, Professor Williams's Sanskrit Dictionary will take its place worthily by the side of "Liddell and Scott" and "Andrews."

With regard to the arrangement of his work, the Professor has struck out a new path by combining "a partial root-arrangement with a convenient alphabetical order suited to ready reference." Accordingly, compound verbs are not to be looked for under the simple root, but are arranged in the alphabetical order of the prepositions; and each verb, simple or compound, is generally followed by the whole group of its own derivatives. Such derivatives, however, as do not readily submit to the alphabetical order must be sought for separately. Thus, e.g., Kaula, Kaulina, &c., are not given under Kula, but stand by themselves in their alphabetical place, after Kaurma. Again, only the leading words are in the Nagari type, while the derivatives which follow them are in Roman character, by which arrangement reference is facilitated, and much space saved. Compound words are always arranged under the first component part, facility of reference being considered paramount to the more logical method followed by Benfey in his Dictionary. Abundant comparisons from cognate languages are added under the respective leading words; and special attention has been paid to the articles on mythology and literature. Altogether, though the Dictionary extends over 1,186 pages, of three columns each, in small and compact type, even beginners will have no difficulty in using it, as in all cases of doubtful or not obvious etymology the alphabetical order has been strictly adhered to. As regards Vedic words, the compiler did not think himself justified in excluding them, on account of their importance for general philological purposes; but for this consideration, it might perhaps be doubted whether he was right in extending his plan to this class of words. For, pending the publication of Professor Aufrecht's Vedic Glossary, promised so many years, Vedic students will none the less continue to be compelled to have recourse to the St. Petersburg Thesaurus.

No class of boons is so open to attack as a dictionary or an encyclopædia, each article presenting an isolated front to the critic. Such vulnerable points will also be found in the dictionary before us. But let these be dealt with considerately and temperately. Occasional inaccuracies and inconsistencies (as at p. 919, b, under vividvas and vividivas) will crop up in most dictionaries; and completeness has neither been aimed at nor been attainable, as in the wide range of Sanskrit literature there is still ample room left for further exploration with a view to adding to and correcting the vocabulary. If Professor Williams's book should contribute to facilitate the efforts of Sanskrit students and call many fresh labourers into the field, and should thus pave the way for the eventual production of a more complete and more comprehensive dictionary, the compiler may reasonably look upon such a consummation as his best reward.

As to typographical execution, the volume is one of the best out-turns of the Clarendon Press. Closely-packed as the print is, so as to effect the utmost economy of space, it is beautifully clear throughout, and never hampers the facility of reference which has been chiefly studied in the arrangement of the work.

Spirit of the Indian Press.

USES OF CAVALRY.

The Bombay Gazette would invite the attention of Indian organisers, if there be any in this land whose energy has not oozed out at the tips of their fingers, to the better arming of our Native Cavalry. It has been explained, and very clearly put too, that the more complicated arms we give our native troops, the safer we are from them should they turn on us as they did fifteen years ago. So long as we have the ammunition well guarded, let them have the very latest thing in breech-loaders, and they will be only dangerous to our enemies. Let them also have boots they can walk in, and, good service as they have done, they will do better still, and be able on occasion to act independently of infantry, which, except in quite the commencement of a general action, they naturally outstrip. The experiment having been so successfully tried in the great American War, it seems strange that its advantage has not been appreciated by the English. Sir Henry Havelock has written at some length on the subject in his work, entitled "The Three Main Military Questions of the Day." Several of his recommendations for the formation of a reserve, &c., have been adopted in a modified form by Mr. Cardwell; but with reference to India Sir Henry proposes the withdrawal of between 15,000 and 20,000 men, and turning about 8,000 of the remainder into mounted riflemen, and he argues that this would not only "not weaken our hold in India, but make our grasp of our Indian Empire more firm, tenacious, and widely felt, and encouraged than it has been at any previous period of history." However, the highest military authority in the East Indies has recorded his veto against the withdrawal of a single British soldier from the country. If a reduction is forced on us, it may be worth considering whether by the extra mobilisation that is conferred by mounted riflemen we may not gain more than we lose if we form such a corps for every regiment that is withdrawn; as Sir Henry Havelock insists that one regiment of mounted riflemen is equal to three of infantry. Meantime, we should not throw away the strength we do possess when a little trouble taken can so much increase that strength. The tactics of the American Federal Horse should teach us the advantage of making our cavalry such a weapon of destruction as it has never yet been, and which the advance made in arms of precision renders it imperative on us to consider. Has it not frequently been our great difficulty in our Indian battles to bring the enemy to a standstill, so as to be able to pound him effectually? With properly-instructed cavalry what would there be to prevent our sending a mounted force at speed to either intercept the enemy, and acting on foot as riflemen keep him in check till the arrival of our guns and Sniders? or, by breaking up the cavalry into three parties, send one to each of his flanks, so as to place him under a cross-fire, while the third body, remaining mounted, hovered about and seized its opportunity for charging? All this was done by our Yankee cousins seven years ago, and led to the rout of Lee's army. Yet still—when 197 points out of a possible 200 can be made at two and six hundred yards with a firearm we have experienced—there are cavalry officers whose advice is, "Stick to the ship—a dragoon's place is in the saddle, and nowhere else!!!"

DR. BIRDWOOD ON COMPETITION.

The Englishman remarks that Dr. Birdwood's paper on the system of competition for the Indian service, and the discussion that followed it, appear to have attracted a considerable degree of attention at home. The competition system is still on its trial, and the entire public are deeply interested in the question of its success. Indeed, it is unfortunate for the impartial discussion of the question that people have come to look upon the system as a sort of political right. There is, no doubt, a great deal of truth in the view that if not injured, the poorer classes are not in any appreciable degree benefited by a system which tends to make the training necessary to qualify candidates for the public service progressively more severe and more expensive every year. We say more expensive, not because severe training is necessarily expensive, but because the training which conduces to success in the examinations is of that kind which more than any other requires the special aid of experts. There is a great deal of truth in this view; but we doubt whether it is truth which much strikes the public. There is a certain charm in the belief that all appointments are open to every one who can win them in an ordeal conducted without favour of persons, which, to a great extent, conceals the real conditions of the case, and after all, there can be little doubt that competition has greatly widened the area of those who may reasonably hope to win the loaves and fishes of Government employ. At a time then when it is high policy to humour the multitude, we can hardly expect the subject to be treated on its merits. On the other hand, there is a tendency in certain quarters to run down the principle of competition merely because the existing system of examination encourages cramming. The Standard, in noticing Dr. Birdwood's paper, dwells especially on the fact that the system has given rise to the establishment and endowment of a class of educational middlemen known as "crammers;" and that the candidates' chances of success are increased in proportion as the time which he passes in the crammer's establishment is lengthened, and the period of his school or college training is abbreviated. No doubt this is the result of the present system; and it is a most vicious and deplorable result; but it is an error to suppose that it is a necessary incident of the principle of competition. It would be absurdly depreciatory of the acumen of those engaged in the work of education of the higher kind to suppose that a system of examination, that should absolutely exclude cramming, could not be devised. The reasoning and critical faculties cannot possibly be crammed. Nor do we believe that true classical or mathematical scholarship can be crammed; and it is quite possible to make the Civil Service examinations a searching test of these faculties and this scholarship. It is, indeed, simply marvellous to us how a body of men like the Civil Service Commissioners can have devised the present system, and still more marvellous how they can persist in retaining it after their experience of its results. For the first two or three years the system led to no considerable abuse, merely because the kind of abuse it was calculated to suggest required a longer period for its development. Its ultimate result might however have been at any time foreseen, and was foreseen by the "crammers," if not by the Commissioners.

THE DENGUE FEVER.—The dengue fever has at last made its appearance in Madras, several residents in the Fort having been attacked by it. It has not, however, assumed a very severe form at present, and it is hoped that, in this advanced stage of the hot season, its attack will be limited to its present mild type.

SERIOUS RIOT NEAR DACCA.—The Bengal Times says:—For some time past a dispute has been going on between Mr. J. P. Wise and the tenants residing on a large tract of his zemindari known as Jowar Noynabad. The facts are very simple. An increase of rent was demanded from the one side and steadily refused by the other. At length a compromise was effected, but on the ryots ^{believing} ~~supposing~~ ^{assuming} that a sale of his estates was meant by their landlord, they determined to set at nought their agreement, and form a sort of defensive and aggressive union to promote their interests. It soon became apparent that a breach of the peace was likely to take place, and recognisances were taken from both sides by the magistrate of the district. Mr. Gray, Mr. Wise's agent, appears to have behaved in the matter with the most praiseworthy moderation, and instead of sending out a force of lathials to defend his property and promote his views, at once sought the aid of the police. At his request a force was sent to the spot, and the officers under the command of a head-constable were stationed at a village named Changa Kandi, somewhere about twenty miles north-east of Dacca. Mr. Gray then took the proper steps to enforce his claims by suits under Act VIII. in the civil courts. Unfortunately for Mr. Gray, the disaffected ryots mostly belonged to a religious sect known as the Feraxis, who possess a wonderful power and system of combination, and are at the same time imbued with the strongest feelings of hate and animosity towards the object of their dislike. The followers of this sect are spread over the greater part of Eastern Bengal, and have already attracted the serious attention of Government by their proceedings in the adjacent districts of Backergunge and Fureedpore. These men came to the determination of resisting not only Mr. Wise, but the police, by armed force, and an opportunity was soon afforded for them to carry out their intention. Preparatory to bringing the civil suits, Mr. Wise's sircar, one Hari Sirdar, proceeded a few days ago to collect rent from those ryots who were willing to pay, and was at once set upon by the malcontents. The police succeeded in arresting a few of the rioters, and confined them in the Changa Kandi cutcherry. A large force was soon collected by the ryots, numbering, it is said, nearly a thousand men. The cutcherry was attacked, the police severely beaten, and several of Mr. Wise's men taken away by the rioters, and amongst them Hari Sirdar, who was terribly wounded, and has never since been heard of. Mr. Wise's munshi, one Moimuddeen, was killed, his skull being literally reduced to fragments, and it is feared Hari Sirdar and others have shared his fate. The rioters then retreated with little or no loss. On the news of the affray reaching Dacca our able and energetic magistrate, Mr. D. R. Lyall, at once set out for the village, and reached it a short time after the affray. He found several of the wounded men in the house, and was able to procure the surrender of several others. As he was unaccompanied by a police force, and the constables on the spot had been put so decidedly hors de combat, Mr. Lyall very prudently refrained from attempting the arrest of the large body of rioters, but returned at once to Dacca, from which place he despatched a large number of police constables with an inspector to effect their capture. We sincerely hope soon to hear that this has been done, and that a swift and severe punishment will be meted out.

THE NEW ARTILLERY BARRACKS AT ALLAHABAD.—The artillery at Allahabad are not, we fear, likely to move from the Wellington Lines to the new barracks for a very long time to come, as it has been discovered that (owing to insufficient foundations probably) the end of one of the new blocks, intended for their reception, has settled down, and the whole will probably have to be rebuilt!—Pioneer.

THE KANGRA VALLEY.—We learn from the Kangra district that a very severe thunderstorm, accompanied with heavy rain, was experienced over the greater portion of the valley on Sunday last. The heat, however, has become excessive, and more resembles the close steamy atmosphere of the Assam climate during the rainy season. This rainfall will, we hear, considerably augment the already favourable out-turn of tea gathered in the spring, many of the plantations having doubled their yield of former years. The Kangra Valley Tea Company and Holta Estates will, it is anticipated, produce alone upwards of 150,000 lbs. of tea this season.—Indian Public Opinion.

THE FINANCE MINISTER.—It would be as well if those of our contemporaries who within the last month have, over and over again, removed Sir Richard Temple from the Financial Ministership—some of them sending him away on a white horse, and in rather suspicious company—would bear in mind that the personage in question cannot be deposed from charge of the finances by any power in India. Sir Richard Temple, like his predecessors, the late Mr. James Wilson, Mr. S. Laing, Sir Charles Trevelyan, and Mr. Massey, holds his appointment under warrant from the Crown; and so holding stands vested with a degree of financial independence that would not be his were he, like the other civilians in the Executive Council, but an ordinary member. Referring to recent financial affairs, it strikes us that it would have been better for Sir Richard Temple had his powers been less plenary. It is fairly assumable that the recent exchange transactions have convinced the Government of India that it may not, in the slightest degree, continue divested of the fullest power over the finances of the country. Under the present arrangement a strong Financial Minister, adroit enough to bring about an understanding with the India House, might virtually defy the Government of India in all matters of finance. A condition of things under which such is possible should not endure.—Indian Observer.

THE REVENUE COURTS OF THE N.W. PROVINCES.—It appears from a recent decision of the High Court that most of the Revenue Courts of these provinces have for the last thirteen years been acting without jurisdiction. The law allowing Deputy Collectors in charge of "sub-divisions of districts" to try cases without special reference from the Collector, a case occurred at Saharunpore, which was tried by Mr. Laidman, a Deputy-Collector, who had been placed by the Collector in general administrative charge of the pergunnah of Nakoor. In appeal from the decision arrived at the Government Advocate contended that the law contemplated a more permanent sub-division to be made by Government, and not by the collector, and that Kirwee and Pilibheet were perhaps the only such sub-divisions in these provinces. He admitted that a different view had commonly obtained and had received the sanction of the Board of Revenue, but he urged that that sanction was of no judicial authority. The Court (the Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Pearson) thought that in one sense every pergunnah or mouza was a sub-division of a district, but that that was not the sense in which the terms could be interpreted in the Act, and they were therefore compelled to declare that the Deputy Collector had no jurisdiction, and to quash his proceedings. It will need "all the king's horses and all the king's men" to set the Deputy Collectors up again by a retrospective Act.—Pioneer.

COLONEL MOWBRAY THOMPSON.—Not only does the final result of his case show that the Commander-in-Chief laboured under a serious error in arriving at the conclusion he did regarding Colonel Thompson's state of mind, but, from careful inquiry, we have no hesitation in saying that there had not been in fact the slightest ground for any doubt about the matter. Now, it is difficult to believe that the Commander-in-Chief could, in the case of so distinguished an officer, have adopted the course he did without strong apparent reasons for it; and it almost necessarily follows that some very gross misrepresentations must have been made to him on the subject. Colonel Thompson himself would probably be the last to wish that the matter should be stirred again. But it is not he alone that is concerned. It intimately concerns the safety and reputation of every officer in the service, that the person or persons who made these misrepresentations should be brought to account for their conduct. People acquainted with Colonel Thompson find great difficulty in believing that these misrepresentations could have arisen from an honest mistake, and if they did not arise from a mistake they must have emanated from very base motives indeed, and call for the severest notice. We believed it impossible that Colonel Thompson should be restored without some such inquiry as that we suggest being instituted; and we should not have stepped forward in the matter had not a considerable time already elapsed, and nothing transpired to indicate that action has been taken for the purpose.—Englishman.

ARTILLERY VACANCIES.—The approaching retirements of officers of the Indian Artillery will place at the disposal of the authorities several regimental appointments:—The Gun Carriage Agency, the Powder Manufactory, four batteries of Horse Artillery, and also the Deputy Adjutant General of the Royal Artillery in India. The command of C Brigade under orders from home will also be vacant by the retirement of Colonels Cox and Smyth. General Huyshe will vacate his appointment in October next. Such a windfall of patronage does not happen more than once in a lifetime. Colonels Bruce and Bunney are spoken of as probable successors of Colonels Lewis and Voyle. Colonel Johnson, as mentioned by us before, will, it is said, succeed General Huyshe, and Colonel Atlay or Colonel Gray may be appointed as Deputy Adjutant General. Captains Traill, Dobbin, Manderson, and McFarlane are spoken of as the next for appointment to batteries of Horse Artillery. The Staff allowances of the manufacturing departments at Futebghurgh and Ishapore may be decreased, and those at Cawnpore and Dum-Dum raised to Rs. 700 or Rs. 750 a-month each. It is not impossible that the brigade system will be abolished or greatly modified. The undue proportion of field officers in brigades is under the consideration of the authorities at the War Office. The plethora of field officers at Woolwich is pronounced intolerable, and their importunate and incessant solicitation for employment at the Horse Guards is considered a "bore" of a monstrous calibre which Mr. Cardwell is determined to reduce. This evil, and the shelving of regimental colonels from the command of brigades, is feared by the idlers at Woolwich.—Delhi Gazette.

NATIVE MARRIAGE ACT.—A public meeting has been called by the Sheriff of Madras for Monday, July 1, at the request of a large number of natives, to adopt a memorial to the Duke of Argyll, praying for the disallowance of the Native Marriage Act lately passed by the Viceregal Council.

MEMORIAL TO MR. BREEKS.—An influential movement has been set afloat at Ootacamund, having for its object the erection of a memorial to the late Commissioner, Mr. Brecks. A preliminary meeting has been held, presided over by the Hon. A. J. Arbuthnot, at which it was resolved to perpetuate the memory of the deceased gentleman in a fitting manner, for which purpose a committee of gentlemen was appointed. Subscriptions for this purpose have already been collected, and it is expected a sum sufficiently large to raise a handsome monument to the memory of the late Mr. Brecks will be shortly forthcoming.—Madras Athenæum.

A PROPOSED FEBRIFUGE.—Much has lately appeared in the papers and quasi-scientific journals concerning the valuable qualities of the Eucalyptus globulus as a febrifuge. In the Lancet for April 20th, 1872, a notice is given of the uses of this tree medicinally, in which it is stated that all parts are most valuable as a febrifuge medicine, and also that the leaves, when smoked, are most efficacious in allaying pain, calming irritation, and procuring sleep. This article furthermore informs us that Professors Vauquelin and Leiciara obtained an alkaloid from the bark which crystallised like quinine sulphate, and which yielded the ordinary reaction of quinine with chlorine water and ammonia. Mr. Broughton, Government Quinologist, examined the bark and leaves of the Eucalyptus globulus, and states that neither quinine, quinidine, chinchonidine, nor chinchonine is contained in the plant in any proportion.—Madras Standard.

BRITISH BURMAH.—The Chief Commissioner of Burma left Akyab on his return to Rangun on the 11th instant, all the better for his visit to the Burmese Brighton. During his visit he took a trip in the Ava up the Kuladan river as far as Myuk Tung, the first village in the hill districts, and about eighty miles from Akyab. As the Ava drew nine feet of water, and the river was at its lowest, this shows that it is available for the ordinary trading boats throughout the year. The Arakan News, to which we are indebted for this information, says that the passengers were astonished at the large and flourishing villages on both sides of the river, swarming with men, women, and children, surrounded by extensive plains of rice, on which large herds of cattle were feeding. Unfortunately all the inhabitants live close to the river, and the interior is little but dense jungle.—Englishman, June 25.

LIMESTONE CAVES IN BURMAH.—The Rev. F. Mason, the well-known Burmese missionary, has, we see, written to the Chief Commissioner, suggesting the probability that an examination of the stalagmite floors of the numerous limestone caves in British Burma would be likely to lead to important archaeological discoveries. Many of these caves are known to have been used by the Buddhists of former generations, as Buddhist idols are found in them; and it is extremely probable that they were also inhabited by men of the preceding age. To take a special instance, Dr. Mason says: "Near the tin mines east of Toungoo, and over the water-shed, the Karens describe to me a large cave, to which a whole village sometimes resorts in times of war, or apprehension of war, because the place is so difficult of access that one man can defend it against an army of assailants. Under similar circumstances—and such circumstances occur in all ages—the cave has probably been occupied for untold generations, and a thorough examination would probably result in the discovery of ancient remains." And again: "In the Dham-ma-that caves near Moulmein there are cavities in which it is known the Talaings hid away their Talaing books, where they were kept concealed, safe from their Burmese conquerors; and they may have been used for purposes of concealment by the generations which preceded the age of Buddhist books." Dr. Mason also describes a celt of unique type, which he lately met with and purchased for the Phayre Museum. This was a narrow spade, an inch and three-quarters wide by three inches long, exactly the same pattern and size as those now used by the Karens when planting their "Toungya" paddy-fields, but made of copper instead of iron, and had a socket for the insertion of a wooden handle.

STATION TALK.

KHANDESH, June 12.—About the close of the year 1844 Government decided that the suitability of the climate and soil of Khandeish should be tested for the cultivation of improved descriptions of cotton. Superintendents were appointed to look after the experiments, American (New Orleans) cotton seed was procured, and great expenses were incurred by Government, but from various causes, such as scarcity of rain, superabundance of rain, inundations of the river Taptee, &c., the reports on the growth of exotic cotton were always unfavourable. And in the year 1854 Government abolished the office of Superintendent of Cotton Experiments in Khandeish. During the last two or three years Government seem to have again conceived the idea of improving the cotton growth in Khandeish. A superintendent has been appointed to look after the experiments, and it is now rumoured that Government have gone so far as to think about establishing three farms, in addition to the model farm (the subject of some discussion and of a good deal of banter lately between the Berar correspondent of the Times of India and Mr. Vase Fretwell). The farms, it is said, are to be of the following dimensions, viz., one farm of 400 acres and two of 200 acres each, and it is also stated that estimates were called for some time ago for establishing these farms, and that the estimates were furnished. This seems to be the extent of it, for no further steps seem to have been taken, and it can only be supposed that, with their usual indecision, Government have not as yet accorded their sanction. It seems strange that Government should be so adverse to their own interests, but it seems to be their policy always to delay giving their sanction on subjects of this description until too late, and then to listen to the idle complaints of everybody as to the bad results of their endeavours. Surely they might have some regard for those scientific agriculturists to whom they have entrusted the carrying out their experiments, and give them a better chance of bringing their scientific knowledge to bear on the subject. If it is the intention of Government to establish these three farms, why have they withheld their sanction, until now, as to the taking up and preparing of the ground? The rains ought to set in any day now, and then it will be too late to build out-buildings, prepare the soil, &c. All the native cultivators have their ground already prepared for sowing, and have now the advantage of the action of the sun's rays on their land, which, acting as a pulveriser, does more for the soil than any artificial preparation or scientific knowledge can attain. Many of them have gone so far as to sow, but this is more a matter of necessity than choice, for of course it is a very venturesome enterprise, and depends on the fall of rain for its success; but the ground is in a light condition now, and, in consequence of the great scarcity of food and water during the late season, their cattle are very weak and poor, and therefore they do their sowing now on the chance of success. Again, why should not Government grant land for experimental purposes at the same rate of land-tax as the native cultivators obtain it? The native cultivator pays about Rs. 1 per acre land tax, whereas, during the last year or two, land for Government experiments has cost from Rs. 10 to 12 per acre. Surely this is not right, it is not fair on the superintendents. Can it be wondered, then, that the results which come before the public are not so satisfactory as they might be? Government would do well to give their sanction for the taking up of land, &c., with more promptitude, out of regard for their own interests, and also as a better chance of success to the superintendents; great results might also be obtained by the improvement of the implements of culture amongst the native cultivators. In consequence of the excessively bad season, it would not be fair to judge of last year's experiments. For several days the sky has had a threatening appearance, but as yet no rain has fallen. The wells are almost all dry, and those who can afford it are sinking the wells deeper, in the hopes of finding water. Great privations are suffered from this scarcity of water and food, and the result is an increase in the crime report. The cattle have been and are still dying in great numbers, consequently this has been a most lucrative season to the Dhars of the villages, to whose lot fall the skins of all the wretched animals that die. Small-pox raged to a great extent during the months of March, April and May in some of the villages. Dhurrungaum appears to have been especially visited, but now the disease seems to have died out. Cholera was reported to have made its appearance in Bhosawul and Massawul. Despite the great privations suffered from the want of food and water consequent on the late bad season it may be said to have been rather a healthy season than otherwise.

MHOW, June 13.—I am sorry to announce the death of Mr. H. Deacon, Bandmaster of the 15th Hussars, which occurred here the day before yesterday, from sunstroke. The deceased was going to hospital to see his wife (who was ailing on the morning of his death), and on his way got the sunstroke from which he never rallied. He was a most accomplished musician, a composer of no mean order, and, generally, a talented man. He was deservedly respected in the band. The band of the 10th Regiment Native Light Infantry, which, in addition to his own duties, he instructed, followed his remains, in a body, to the grave. His own band was in mourning, and the 49th Regiment band, by the kindness of Colonel Goetling and the officers, was sent down to do the mournful duty of playing the music for the funeral. The officers of the Hussars showed their grief and good feeling for the deceased by dispensing with the services of the band, which, in the ordinary course, would have had to attend mess on Tuesday night. The Theatrical Committee also testified their grief by postponing the performances which were to have taken place last night. This reflects the highest credit on Major Swindley, and the officers of that gallant corps, for the interests of the band of which the deceased worked most assiduously and successfully. The sharp and rather long shower of rain we had to-day will, it is hoped, put a stop to any more cases of sunstrokes. Mr. Furdoonjee, the Commissariat overseer, who was charged by the 15th Hussars with selling porter, &c., privately, has just been ordered to proceed to Ahmednuggur, to take charge of the Commissariat stores there. His case has been most thoroughly investigated by a regular "Court of Enquiry," and as the proceedings have even passed the scrutiny of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief in India, it is but just to say that Mr. Furdoonjee has been cruelly maligned. Instead of the Hussars proving their own case, they actually had the hardihood to admit that in their canteen, for some time, they systematically watered the Government porter! What credence can be given to any of the men of the regiment after the revealing of such a state of things among them (which was kept a secret among them until revealed at the enquiry) it is difficult to believe, yet it was, strange to say, on the evidence of a single man of that regiment (who contradicted himself more than once) that a respectable merchant has just been deprived of his licence!—Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

MILITARY.—Colonel J. W. Schneider, C.B., Deputy Judge Advocate-General of the Army, who has been appointed to succeed Major-General Tremenhare at Aden, will leave Poona shortly to take up his new appointment. Colonel J. Field, C.B., A.D.C. to the Queen, is appointed to succeed Colonel Schneider as Deputy Judge Advocate-General, in which appointment Colonel Field formerly acted for General Skinner.

THE MOHAMEDANS OF SINDH.—The Director of Public Instruction, Bombay, has offered a prize of Rs. 400 for an essay in Hindoo-stani or Sindi, on the "Mahomedans of Sind, their numbers, origin, history, divisions, social status, employment, characteristics, education, wants, and aspirations."

BARODA.—The appointment, so hastily made, of a new Residency Surgeon at Baroda is not one that augurs well for the distribution of patronage under the new regime. The young Assistant Surgeon who has vaulted into this prize of the Service has been elevated over the whole list of Surgeons in the Bombay Presidency, and over a dozen Assistant Surgeons. There is no question of special fitness for the post; so that the present appointment is purely one of favouritism and supersession. His Excellency may have his reasons; but we fear they are imported ones, which make the case worse still. If our administrators here are in these matters merely to carry out orders from home, there will be an end of independence and responsibility. It is not likely that we can remind an experienced man like Sir Philip Wodehouse of anything he does not know very well, and he must be aware that such preposterous supersession as is involved in this appointment to the Baroda Residency disheartens a Service, and puts a damper on all professional zeal.—Times of India.

THE ATTACK ON THE S.S. "CASHMERE."—We have received the following further particulars of the attack on this steamer while lying at anchor at Busreh:—The gang who attacked the mail steamer at Busreh numbered about eighty men. The attack was made between one and two A.M. on the morning of the 13th June. The whole affair was over in a short time, and appears to have been very well organised. The men in the first boat which came alongside stated they were passengers, and were, after boarding, directed to go forward. Shortly afterwards they came aft and threatened the sucunny with instant death if he raised any alarm. At this moment the remainder of the gang boarded and took charge of the ship. They immediately stationed one party to keep guard over the fore-castle, so as to prevent any of the crew coming on the deck. Another party remained to watch that part of the ship occupied by the officers and engineer, while a third gang remained at the saloon doors. The remainder ranged themselves on either side of the after hatchway, forced it open, broke the lock of the treasure room, and commenced to pass out the specie. The head of an unfortunate fireman, who was killed as he came on deck, was almost completely severed from his body. Mr. Bradford, the clerk, was stabbed in the back three or four times, while attempting with the chief officer to save the specie; the latter has sustained severe injuries about the head and arm, while the former remains at Busreh in a critical state. The chief engineer's right arm was disabled by a sword-cut while he was proceeding to his cabin for a revolver. It is said that the Chinese carpenter barricaded his cabin doors, and watched the proceedings through the venetians; he has been able to identify one of the robbers, who is also recognised by the clerk. The captain, who was sleeping on deck, after endeavouring to rally his men on the poop, entered the saloon through the sky-light, barricaded the doors, and commenced to distribute fire-arms; but before any effective measures could be taken, treasure valued at Rs.42,000 had been abstracted, and the robbers left the vessel, leaving in their hurry one bag on deck containing 1,700 rupees. This gang, for some time past, has been in the habit of levying black mail on the wealthier residents in Busreh.—Times of India.

IMPORTS.—BOMBAY, June 28.—The business done during the week has been most limited, but prices of all kinds of Grey Goods are well maintained. In Bleached Goods a large business has been done, without change in prices. Yarns of all kinds are steady but quiet. Metals continue very firm, but few transactions have occurred. Coal is steady, but prices are unaltered; and in other kinds of Imports we have no change to note.

EXPORTS.—BOMBAY, June 28.—Cotton: Only market has been very dull, and prices of these descriptions are being dealt in show a decline of Rs. 2 to 6 per candy. The purchases made in Bombay for export aggregate about 3,000 candies. The market closes quiet.

MONEY MARKET.—BOMBAY, June 21.—The Money Market is in the same easy state, and loans on Government Securities are obtainable at 3 per cent.

COURT-MARTIAL.—At a general court-martial held at Bangalore on May 28, Private John White, 1st battalion 21st foot, was arraigned on the following charges:—1st Charge.—Insubordination in having at Bangalore on April 25 last, when a prisoner in the garrison cells, disobeyed the lawful command of Garrison Provost Sergt. E. Jackson, his superior officer, by refusing to go and clean himself when ordered to do so, at the same time saying "I won't, I'd see you — first." 2nd Charge.—Insubordination, accompanied with personal violence, in having at Bangalore, on April 25 last, when a prisoner at the orderly room of the 1st battalion 21st fusiliers, struck with his clenched fist on the head Garrison Provost Sergt. E. Jackson—the said Provost Sergt. E. Jackson being his superior officer, and being in the execution of his office. Finding—Guilty of all the charges. Sentence.—The Court sentences the prisoner to suffer penal servitude for the term of five years. The Court do further sentence him to be discharged with ignominy from her Majesty's service.—Bangalore, May 28, 1872. (Approved and confirmed.) (Signed) E. P. HAINES, Lieut. gen., C. in C.—Madras, June 1, 1872.

EMPLOYEES IN H.M.'S DOCKYARDS.—It is hereby notified for general information that the gazetted officers and employees of H.M.'s Dockyard and those who have come out under covenants are individually entitled to the medical attendance of the presidency surgeon 2nd district and marine surgeon at their houses if residing in his district when their ailments require it, and in the event of their living in another district, application for medical attendance should be made to the presidency surgeon of that district. The apothecary of the dockyard dispensary attends daily in the dockyard during working hours, including the hour for meals, when he can be consulted by the employees of the yard. The marine surgeon can be consulted three days a week at a certain hour regularly, oftener if necessary, by any, particularly by the gazetted employees whose complaints are not of such a nature as to require the attendance of the marine surgeon and presidency surgeon at their houses. Whenever the attendance of the marine surgeon is required he should be addressed at his residence, so that he may receive applications in the morning, in time to make his arrangements, and unless under necessity, no emergent calls are to be made. The days and hour of attendance of the marine surgeon in view to being consulted will be circulated hereafter. These arrangements will obviate the necessity of anyone engaging the services of a private practitioner.

Official Papers.

From Brig. gen. C. H. Brownlow, Commanding Chittagong Column, Loshai Expeditionary Force, to the Quartermaster general, Army Headquarters, Calcutta. Dated Calcutta, April 3.

Report dated Savoonga, Jan. 1, 1872.

1. On Dec. 1, which was as soon as my commissariat arrangements would admit of an advance, I moved two companies 2nd Goorkhas under Major Macintyre to the village of Gnoora, with orders to improve the path to that place, and from thence to the Sahjuck river, intending that the force should follow the route adopted last year by Majors Graham and Macdonald in their ascent of the Rhai Jan Klang range, but I found so many objections to this line that I determined on another, avoiding the high spur on which Gnoora is situated, and crossing the Sahjuck at Vanoonah's, instead of at Lemahilong's old ghat. This gave me water carriage for ten miles further up the river, in the direction of our advance, and an easy road from thence to Vanoonah's village, where I was led to expect the first show of resistance from the Sylhoos.

2. For some distance above Demagiree the Kurnafoolee river runs through a narrow defile in a succession of rapids, which laden canoes cannot ascend. To get over this break in the water communication a road had to be made along the right bank of the river, from the falls, where it is crossed by a bamboo bridge to a spot above the highest of the rapids, where the stream again becomes navigable, and where a depot was established as a fresh starting point for the canoes, and called Hyslop's ghat. This piece of road, of about four miles, was made practicable for laden elephants, which are now working on it. It was a heavy job, and the Sappers and Miners, the 2nd Goorkhas, and 27th P.I., all had their share of it.

3. On Dec. 3, Col. Mapherson, C.B., V.C., marched from Demagiree to Lingoorah's ghat with two companies of his regiment and the half company of sappers. He was joined next day by Major Macintyre and his detachment at Lingoorah's old village, and proceeded on the 5th to Vanoonah's ghat, improving the road as he advanced. At Vanoonah's ghat Col. Mapherson at once commenced to clear ground, and to throw a temporary bridge across the Sahjuck, which, however, is fordable at this point.

5. In my report of Nov. 30 I referred to the desertion among the hill coolies that work the boats and canoes between Burkhul and Demagiree, the sole means of feeding the force at and above the latter place. These desertions at last reduced the 600 men absolutely necessary to carry on the service to 350, with every prospect of a continued decrease, and it became a question whether I should not have to make a retrograde movement, for our supply scarcely sufficed to meet consumption, much less to create a reserve. On my urgent representations Mr. Hankey, the commissioner, himself came to Burkhul, having previously ordered up all the rajahs and chiefs of the tribes from whom the coolies were drawn. His energetic measures led to an immediate improvement in the state of affairs. A certain number of deserters were apprehended, fresh men were found and made over to Capt. Hood, while those whom the good management of the latter officer had kept together were reassured, and at the same time made to understand that they would be punished if they left their work.

6. For the river transport above Demagiree fifty canoes were lifted over the falls on skids, and dragged up the rapids to Hyslop's ghat. The hill coolies were called on for volunteers to man the canoes, but they begged to be decapitated rather than asked to go a step further in the direction of the much-dreaded Loshais. For fear of renewed desertions, they were allowed to have their own way, and Mr. Crouch undertook the service with 100 of his police, assisted by men of the 27th P.I. and a certain number of the regular coolie corps. The policemen can sit and paddle these canoes to perfection; but to utilise the unskilled supplement of hands, it was found necessary to lash two canoes together, with a connecting deck, which formed a raft that could not easily be upset. These rafts were held in readiness to start on the first voyage the day after the 11th December, and they have been working steadily ever since, to the great credit of Mr. Crouch, whose good service, and that of his men, I have already had occasion to notice. From Hyslop's ghat to Vanoonah's ghat the distance is about twelve miles, and the journey takes a day and a-half or two days. There are no bad rapids between those places, either on the Kurnafoolee or the Sahjuck, otherwise rafts could not be used.

7. On Dec. 9 I marched with my head quarters to Lingoorah's old village (eleven miles), and on the 10th to Vanoonah's ghat (six and a-half miles), where I found Col. Mapherson with six companies of his own regiment, and the half company sappers, and two guns of the Peshawar mountain battery under Lieut.-col. J. Hills, V.C. On the 11th the head quarters and four companies of the 2nd Goorkhas were moved forward to the Belkai jooms (four and a-half miles), being little more than half-way up to Vanoonah's village. On the 12th I followed with my staff, and on the 13th was joined by the artillery and two more companies of Goorkhas.

8. On the evening of my arrival at the jooms, Capt. Lewin reported to me that a messenger of his had returned from Vanoonah, saying that the Sylhoos intended fighting. This messenger was "Lingoorah," one of the sub-chiefs of Rutton Pooea's tribe. To insure his fair dealing, and to neutralise his Sylhoo tendencies, he being married to a daughter of Savoonga, the chief of that tribe, and Rutton Pooea having expressed some doubt of his loyalty towards himself and us, Capt. Lewin had made over his wife and child to the latter, to be kept as hostages for his good behaviour. Lingoorah found five chiefs or rajahs assembled at Vanoonah's, and notwithstanding his relationship to Savoonga, was not allowed to proceed on his mission, being told to return and inform us that we were not to come any further.

9. The village of Vanoonah occupies a very strong natural position on the Belkai portion of the Rhai Jan Klang range. It is situated in a slight dip or hollow between two peaks, 1,700 feet above the jooms on the western face, where we were encamped; and the ascent to it, for the last four hundred yards, is almost precipitous on every side except the north. The path from the jooms to the village is not quite three miles, and had been prepared for our reception. Close to the village it ran along a scarped rock, above which we found an arrangement of loose stones and boulders, supported by logs of wood tied up with creepers, which was to do duty as an avalanche on the advancing troops.

10. On the 14th, while waiting for supplies, I ordered out two parties, one under Colonel Mapherson, and the other under Major Macintyre, of the 2nd Goorkhas, to reconnoitre the approaches from the north and south, in the hope of being able to surround the position when it was attacked the next day. Major Macintyre went to the north, and soon came upon the enemy's pickets, which fired on him and retreated. He followed up to within a short distance of the ridge, and having obtained the required information, returned to camp without any loss to himself, though he shot two of the enemy. Col. Macpherson made for the south of the village, in which direction the jungle was very dense, and unbroken by jooms, as on the north. His guide misled him, and, after three hours' hard climbing, he found himself on the ridge, some way beyond the point he wished to arrive at. With characteristic perseverance he adhered to his purpose, and late in the day reached unperceived the peak overlooking the village, of which the leading files of Goorkhas declared they saw Major Macintyre's party in possession. While his men were forming up, they suddenly became aware of their mistake, and dashed down among the astonished Sylhoos, but the opportunity was gone, and they only succeeded in giving them a volley, as they dived into the jungle below. A few guns and spears were taken, and seven or eight of the enemy were seen to fall, but the effect of a surprise, so completely after their own fashion, must have had a very demoralising effect on the Kookies. Col. Macpherson returned to camp the same evening, and next morning the village was reoccupied by two companies of his regiment.

11. On the 18th the head-quarters and four companies of the 2nd Goorkhas were moved up to Vanoonah's. Just as they were starting, sharp firing was heard in our rear. Two parties of Goorkhas, under Captains Battye and Becher, at once dashed down the hill. Within half a mile of camp they came upon three of their own men, who were bringing up letters from Vanoonah's ghat, and had been attacked from behind an ambush. They found one Goorkha mortally wounded, having been struck by five bullets, and two others standing over him, keeping at bay twenty or thirty of the enemy, of whom they had each accounted for a man, when assistance arrived. The Kookies fled, and were pursued for some distance, another of them being eventually killed. I am sure H.E. will agree with me that these two riflemen, by name Lulleet Bum Mull and Martbur Thappa, displayed courage and good conduct of the highest stamp, and that they are deserving of the Order of Merit, for which they will be recommended in due form.

12. On the 19th I established my head-quarters at Vanoonah's village, which is at an elevation of 2,800 feet, and on the afternoon of the same day Colonel Macpherson started with three companies and five days' provisions on a raiding expedition to the east, at a right angle to our line of advance. Early on the third day after his departure he reached the village of Lal Heera on the next range, distant eight miles as the crow flies, across a deep and difficult valley. On the 22nd he made his way through another village to the one marked on the map "Lapocethel," six miles further east as the crow flies. He met with faint resistance, and, having destroyed the three villages referred to, and an immense amount of grain, returned to Vanoonah's on Christmas Day. On the 20th I despatched Major Macintyre with one hundred riflemen and three days' supplies, no more coolie carriage being available, in a north-easterly direction up the valley of the Kahoo Doong, in which lay the villages of Vanooeyeh and Van Shuma, both of which he destroyed, with rice granaries supposed to contain 8,000 maunds. He also captured fifty gyals or tame bisons, which constitute the chief wealth of the Loshais, and are valued at upwards of Rs. 100 each. Of these twenty-five broke away, but the rest were brought into camp. The reports of Colonel Macpherson, C.B., V.C., and of Major Macintyre, regarding their proceedings, are appended.

13. All the grain that falls into our hands, viz., unhusked rice, which we have not the time or the means to render fit for consumption, is found stored in houses on the jooms or patches of cultivation where it has been harvested, and, I believe, constitutes the whole stock in hand of the Sylhoos. It is of this year's growth, and requires to be dried before it undergoes the tedious process of husking, which in these countries is performed by the women, according to the daily consumption of the household. Were it not for this fact, our progress would be very different.

14. On the 26th I sent on 100 of the 2nd Goorkhas under Major Macintyre to the site of an old village (Vanoyeh's), three miles north of the Kothier Klang, and on the 27th moved on there myself with the head-quarters of that regiment, and the half company of sappers, being followed next day by the half battery of artillery. This is a severe march of twelve or thirteen miles along the ridge, and, though the coolies do it in one day, returning the next, I have established a post half way. I hope to work elephants on a portion of it, but the difficulty of feeding and watering these animals is so great, and it takes so much time to make roads for them, that as yet they have only been employed between Upper and Lower Burkhul (two and a-half miles), between Demagiree and Hyslop's ghat (four miles), and between Vanoonah's ghat to within a short distance of Vanoonah's village (seven miles), being altogether something under fourteen miles on the whole line of communication. This difficulty in using the elephants, the sickness among the coolies that arrived early in the season, as well as the quarantine necessitated at different places by the outbreak of cholera among the Nepalese coolies, and its spread to Demagiree, have hitherto deprived us of nearly a fourth of our means of land transport.

16. On the 30th I marched with half the 2nd Goorkhas across a water shed to the village of Van Hoolien on the hill marked in the survey map as Savoonga, the proper name of which is Towrong. Further up the hill is another village of the same name, which a party under Macintyre occupied on the 31st. The enemy stockaded the approaches and defended it for a few minutes, slightly wounding one Goorkha. Yesterday, while destroying the jooms in the vicinity of this, one of Rutton Poosa's men was killed, and another wounded.

17. Every endeavour has been made to induce the Sylhoos to come in and listen to terms. Proclamations in Bengali and Burmese, which it was hoped some of their captives might be able to read, have been put up in villages which they are known to have revisited after our departure; and conversations have been held with them from a distance, but to no purpose. They continue their opposition, such as it is, and we have no alternative but to proceed in our work of destruction, which must bring them to starvation.

JUDICIAL COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL, July 18. RAJAH NIMONEY SING DEO V. THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA AND OTHERS—JUDGMENT.

This was an appeal from Bengal and governed forty-six other analogous cases. The appellant claimed certain lands in India, and it was alleged they were held for the performance of certain police duties. The forty-seven suits had been consolidated into the present suit.

Mr. Leith and Mr. Doyne were for the appellant; Mr. Forsyth, &c., and Mr. H. C. Merivale for the respondents.

Sir M. Smith gave judgment, and dismissed the appeal, affirming the decisions in the Courts below.

MOULVIE ALLEE KURREEM V. SYUD FUZLOOR RAHMAN AND OTHERS—JUDGMENT.

This was another appeal from Bengal, and was in the nature of an ejectment in the Court below.

Mr. J. D. Bell was for the appellant; Mr. Doyne for the respondent.

After hearing the appellant's case, Sir R. Collier gave the judgment of the Committee. The appeal was dismissed.

Mr. Stoker, India Law, £10; Hindustani, £10.

THE COMMITTEE ON INDIAN FINANCE.

The committee renewed its sittings, after a week's adjournment, on Tuesday, Mr. J. B. Smith, M.P. for Stockport, occupying the chair, in the absence of the permanent chairman (the Right Hon. A. S. Ayrton). Mr. Massey, whose examination was briefly summarised in our last report, was re-examined and cross-examined on the present occasion by Mr. Grant Duff and others on the more salient points of his evidence last given. It is necessary to enter somewhat into detail with evidence considered so important as Mr. Massey's, and therefore it is here recurred to. On his first examination, Mr. Massey gave a complete narrative of the course he took with Indian finance, as Finance Minister, in 1865-6. As here viewed the administrative policy he had followed, he commented on particular statements and opinions that had guided him in his course of proceeding in seeking to relieve the Indian Exchequer from its chronic state of embarrassment. Mr. Massey next discussed the new forms of taxation he introduced; the chief tax he most relied upon being his licence-tax on trades and professions. But Mr. Massey admitted that he had been thwarted in and unable to carry out his main financial principles, viz., a complete reorganisation of the financial system, and a new arrangement of local taxation. The existent departments or bureaux of Government maintained either a supine or an obstructive course in dealing with his (Mr. Massey's) plans. He next adopted the course of addressing to each local Government a circular letter communicating his views on general taxation of the country, and offering proposals to invest the Governors of Madras and Bombay, and the Lieut.-Governors of Provinces, with powers to impose a new scale of small local imposts. All the subordinate Governments—Madras excepted—wrote back giving in their approval and consent to his plans, but Madras being a large and important presidency, its opposition proved fatal to his schemes. He could not consent to put in practice in an incomplete way a system which required the adoption of its entire principle to prove effective and successful. He had therefore to cast about for some other plan of raising the "ways and means" for India. Hence his measure, the licence-tax, which he was permitted to impose.

The witness proceeded to refer seriatim to the entire programme of his proposed financial reforms for India, and the nature of the support they had received. Mr. Massey stated that the cost of the army occupied his gravest attention as a financier, herein being one of the largest and yet the most indispensable of the charges on the Government. But he discovered that there was no more financially mismanaged establishment than the military branch. There was no efficient control over the accounts, and much of the expenditure was left, as respected details, to subordinate officials, who, he (witness) considered, were not under efficient control, and therefore economy was out of the question when no one was made responsible for the expenditure. He (witness) thought, therefore, that there should be some superior member of the Governor-General's Council, acquainted with the wants of the army, selected, and invested with authority to see into the nature of the demands for military purposes, and to then decide upon the expenditure and control it, taking care that all accounts for every presidency were properly kept and audited.

As matters, however, stood in 1865-6 in India, the imperfect partial, and irregular communication and correspondence between the subordinate Governments and the Supreme Government appeared to him to be only calculated to confuse instead of elucidating the State accounts. In the preparation of his "budgets" he had always had to wait for the estimates and accounts of the local Governments—Madras and Bombay, &c.—before he could complete his own estimates. Hence it arose that there was no time to examine or analyse the provincial accounts in detail. In reply to questions put to him to test the practicability of his views on local taxation, Mr. Massey said that while entrusting the power of local taxation to the lieutenant-governorships, he intended that a veto should always be with the Supreme Government at Calcutta. He was aware that by his scheme he was returning to a system of local taxation once in vogue all over India, but the system abolished in 1834 was one-sided, harsh, and despotic, whereas he (Mr. Massey) proposed a scale of local imposts which should fall, as he had already stated, in accordance with the capacity of the different classes to bear the imposts. With regard to questions put at his first examination, touching on the Government of Bombay's connection with the Bank of Bombay, Mr. Massey said he considered the connection had been as discreditable as it had proved disastrous. The charter given to the Bank by the Government had involved the latter in responsibilities and speculations voluntarily submitted to. He (Mr. Massey) recommended the appointment of an Imperial inspector of banks.

The examination of Mr. Massey terminated with some inquiry into his views as to the imposition of a tobacco-tax, and it appeared he was opposed to it. The committee adjourned at three o'clock. This was understood to be the final public sitting of the present session. With regard to Tuesday's sitting, it was remarked that neither the permanent chairman of the committee (Mr. Ayrton) or Mr. Fawcett, the leading cross-examining member, was present. The cross-examination was this day strongest on the witness's views as to the income-tax and the tobacco-tax, proposed by other witnesses, and Mr. Massey's own proposal of a very moderate and limited form of local taxation.

The list of the Select Committee on Indian Finance having undergone some changes in the course of the Session, we give the amended list as printed by order of the House of Commons. Mr. Ayrton (chairman), Mr. Baring, Sir T. Bazley, Mr. Beach, Mr. Birley, Mr. Bourke, Mr. Candlish, Mr. Stephen Cave, Mr. Crawford, Mr. Cross, Mr. C. Dalrymple, Mr. B. Denison, Mr. Dickinson, Mr. Grant Duff, Mr. Eastwick, Sir James Elphinstone, Mr. Fawcett, Lord Edward Fitzmaurice, Mr. Robert Fowler, Mr. Haviland Burke, Mr. Hermon, Mr. Lyttelton, Mr. McClure, Sir Stafford Northcote, Mr. J. Benjamin Smith, Sir David Wedderburn, and Sir Charles Wingfield.

Miscellaneous.

MAYO MEMORIAL FUND.—A meeting was held at Liverpool on Monday last, under the presidency of the Mayor, at which upwards of £150 was subscribed. We understand that a subscription list has been started in Manchester for the furtherance of the above object.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL J. G. MEDLEY, R.E., Principal of the Roorkee College, India, has commenced at the School of Military Engineering at Chatham a course of lectures on "Engineering in India," for the instruction of the junior officers and the non-commissioned officers of the corps of Royal Engineers.

RUSSIANS IN CENTRAL ASIA.—The number of Russian settlers in Central Asia already amounts to 60,000, one-third of whom are Cossacks, stationed in the new military colonies of Northern Turkistan. Tashkend alone has 2,500 Russian inhabitants, in addition to a large number of natives.

BILLS ON INDIA.—Tenders for £600,000 in bills on India were received on Wednesday, the 17th inst., at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta, £432,000; to Bombay, £163,200; and to Madras, £4,800. The minimum price was fixed, as before, at 1s. 10½d. on all the Presidencies. Tenders at 1s. 10½d. will receive about 96 per cent. The average rate was 1s. 10¾d.

LONDON, BOMBAY, AND MEDITERRANEAN BANK.—Sir T. G. A. Parkyns, Bart., Mr. James Cooper (Johnstone, Cooper, Wintle, and Evans), and Mr. Archibald Stewart, the official liquidators of the London, Bombay, and Mediterranean Bank (Limited), have, with the sanction of Vice-Chancellor Wickens, declared a third dividend of 1s. in the pound (making 4s. 6d. in the pound), payable this day or to-morrow.

COLONEL JOHNSON, C.B.—There is no truth in the report that Colonel E. B. Johnson, C.B., Royal (late Bengal) Artillery, Aide-de-Camp and Assistant Military Secretary to his Royal Highness the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, accepts retirement under the new India-office scheme. Colonel Johnson, who now stands second for promotion, becomes a Major-General in consequence of the pending retirements, but he will not relinquish his appointment.—Army and Navy Gazette.

SHOOTING AT WIMBLEDON FOR THE BURMESE CUP.—The following gentlemen tied with nineteen each, five shots at five hundred yards for the Burmese Cup:—Mr. Hayes, London Rifle Brigade; Corporal Caldwell, 1st Renfrew; Ensign Adams, 13th Canada; Mr. Turnbull, G. T. Rifles; Corporal M'Nabb, 1st Lanark; Private Cortis, 1st Sussex; Private Burgess, 1st Newcastle; Lieutenant Tanqueray, London Scottish. In shooting off, the prize fell to the first-named gentleman.

FIRST APPOINTMENTS IN THE ARMY.—Sir Richard Airey has issued, by order of his Royal Highness the Field Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, the following regulations for first appointments and examinations for promotion in the army: "No competitive examination for the line will take place until all existing claims have been provided for, which will probably not be until the autumn of 1873. The 'further examination' will follow the 'preliminary examination' at an interval of only two or three days. As certain of the examinations at the Universities do not take place until nearly the end of the year, it will suffice if the certificate of examination required to be transmitted by University candidates is sent in one week before the 1st January, provided that the application, accompanied by the other certificates, has been previously made as directed. Officers of militia who may be recommended for commissions in the army will not be required to produce the certificate from the Civil Service Commissioners referred to in para. 28 (d), provided they can produce a University certificate, as prescribed in para. 22."

THE QUEEN OF ENGLAND AND THE KING OF BURMAH.—The following is reported to be the text of the letter from Queen Victoria to the King of Burma which has been delivered to the latter with much pomp and ceremony:—"Balmoral Palace, Sept. 23, 1871.—To his Majesty the King of Burmah.—My Friend,—I have received with heartfelt gratification your Majesty's most acceptable letter. I have heard from time to time with much pleasure of your Majesty's friendly inclinations, and of the enlightened manner in which you have encouraged commercial intercourse between your own and the British provinces, and otherwise, by your own amicable dispositions and your wise policy, have contributed to the maintenance of peace, and the extension of civilisation. By such interchanges of good feeling between Sovereign States the prosperity of empires and the happiness of nations are much promoted, and it will always be a satisfaction to me to receive tidings of the continued welfare of your Majesty and of the people who are subject to your rule. Hoping that you may long be spared to govern the country committed to your care by the Almighty Disposer of events,—I am your Majesty's sincere friend, VICTORIA, R."

BARON ETTRICK.—Francis Napier, ninth Lord Napier of Merchiston, in the peerage of Scotland, who has just been created a peer of the United Kingdom under "the name, style, and title" of Baron Ettrick, is the eldest son of William John, eighth Lord Napier, by Elizabeth, daughter of the late Hon. Andrew James Cochrane-Johnstone. He was born in September, 1819, and succeeded to his father's honours in 1834. Having filled various diplomatic offices from the year 1840 he was appointed in January, 1857, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to the United States of America, whence he was transferred to the Hague in December, 1858. In December, 1860, he was sent as ambassador to St. Petersburg, and to Berlin in 1864, and he has held the Governorship of Madras from January, 1866, down to the present year. It will be remembered that on the assassination of Lord Mayo, Lord Napier administered the affairs of our Indian Empire, ad interim, until the arrival of Lord Northbrook. Lord Napier arrived at his seat, Thirlestane Castle, Selkirkshire, Scotland, on July 16. The people of the district made a great demonstration in honour of his lordship, to whom a congratulatory address was presented. Lord Napier briefly replied, referring to the more prominent incidents in his public career.

SOCIAL PROGRESS IN INDIA.—On Friday evening, at the Rooms of the Society of Arts, there was an exhibition of MR. W. TAYLER'S Indian Sketches, accompanied by an explanatory lecture, in connection with the Association in Aid of Social Progress in India, and in furtherance of its objects. The sketches exhibited were very numerous, embracing scenes, customs, persons, animals, trees, and vegetable productions, taken in various parts of India, the Cape, Natal, and Suez. They are all executed in water colours, and many of them evince considerable artistic merit, and scarcely needed the apology with which the artist opened his address. The lecture touched upon the condition of the fine arts, and the benefit resulting from the encouragement now given by the Government of India to the study of art in that country, calling attention to the superiority of Eastern over Western decorative art as a subject worthy of consideration by our own art decorators. Pictorial art in India was, however, very backward, owing, probably, to Mahomet's condemnation of pictures, especially the representation of men and animals, and equally so to Hindoo superstition and prejudice. There was a full and fashionable company, by whom the lecture, and afterwards Mr. Tayler's explanations of the pictures, were highly appreciated.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF LORDS, THURSDAY, July 19.—MIRZA ALI KADIR.—Lord DERBY called attention to the petition of Mirza Ali Kadir, one of the ex-Royal family of Delhi (nephew of the ex-King), now detained as prisoner in British Burmah. Recapitulating the material allegations of the petition, which, he said, it had been impossible for him to verify, he thought that a claim for inquiry had been fairly made out, unless some fact unknown to him was in possession of the Indian Government.—The Duke of ARGYLL promised that the petition should be forwarded to India to the proper quarter for inquiry. He added that many of our countrymen had been cruelly murdered in the Royal Palace of Delhi, and not one member of the Royal family had extended a hand for their protection.—Lord LAWRENCE said it was clearly proved that the King and Royal family of Delhi had taken an active part in the insurrection. If Mirza Ali Kadir, who resided in the Palace, had interposed in our favour, the matter would certainly have been brought to the knowledge of the Indian Government. He was understood to add that it would be unwise to allow the members of the Royal family who had been exiled to return to Hindostan.—The discussion was briefly continued by Lord MELVILLE, Lord CAIRNS, and Lord SALISBURY.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, July 19.—THE KOOKA OUTBREAK.—In answer to Mr. DENISON, Mr. GRANT DUFF said, a decision having to-day been come to upon this case, the papers can be laid on the table as soon as my hon. friend the member for Perth moves for them.

THE BENGAL POLICE.—Mr. EASTWICK asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether a deputy-inspectorship of police in Bengal had lately been conferred on a young civilian not belonging to the force, although its officers were entitled to prior consideration; whether the present Governor of Bengal had decided that in future the higher posts, those of Inspector-General and Deputy Inspector-General, were not to be held by any but covenanted civilians; and, if so, whether he would lay on the tables the reasons for this new regulation.—Mr. GRANT DUFF: I have heard nothing of the transaction to which my hon. friend refers. Appointments to vacancies in the Indian police are entirely and exclusively in the patronage of the local governments, and never come under the review of the home authorities. I think it is very probable that some such order as that alluded to in my hon. friend's second question has been issued, because such an order would be very much in accordance with the views announced by Lord Lawrence during his Viceroyalty, which views were approved by the then Secretary of State, the right hon. member for North Devon. No information, however, with regard to the issue of any such order has reached the Secretary of State in Council.

INDIAN SOLDIERS.—Sir R. ANSTRUTHER asked the Secretary of State for War whether, having regard to the recent murder of Captain and Adjutant Laurie, of the 108th Regiment, by Private Butler, he had issued, or intended to issue, instructions to her Majesty's forces in India (similar to those existing in England) forbidding the carrying of ball ammunition by the men when off duty.—Mr. GRANT DUFF said the Government of India has not told us that it proposes to make any change in consequence of the murder alluded to by my hon. friend, and the wisdom or unwisdom of allowing soldiers when off duty to carry ball ammunition depends so entirely upon considerations of which the authorities on the spot can judge and we cannot, that the Secretary of State would be most unwilling in any way to interfere. Of course the position of the individual soldier in India is quite different from what it is in England, and his danger, if insufficiently armed, is far greater. I can assure my hon. friend that the Commander-in-Chief in India is quite alive to the importance of the subject.

HOUSE OF LORDS, FRIDAY, July 19.—LADY MAYO'S PENSION.—The Duke of ARGYLL brought down a message from the Queen recommending their lordships to concur in enabling her Majesty to provide a pension of £1,000 a year for Lady Mayo, in recognition of the public services of the late Viceroy of India. He moved that the Royal Message be taken into consideration on Monday.

THE KIRWEE BOOTY.—Lord HARROWBY, as President of the Royal Commission on Army Prize, called attention to the circumstances of the Kirwee booty. He said that while the distribution of prize money to the Navy was settled by Acts of Parliament, the distribution of Army booty was regulated by no code of law, although it ought to be regulated by law as much as prize by sea. He moved an address to the Crown for referring the questions in dispute between the troops entitled to the prize money and the Indian Department to the cognisance of a judicial tribunal.—The Duke of ARGYLL said that the questions raised between the troops and the Government could not be dealt with by a judicial tribunal, but were extra-judicial, and must be left to the Government. Recapitulating the circumstances of the case and the large distribution of prize money made in 1866, he contended that these were not legal claims, and that the taxpayers of India ought not to be called upon to pay a sum of £500,000 for that which the Indian Government never received in the shape of prize.—Lord LONGFORD, as a member of the Royal Commission, pointed out that the question was, not whether the claimants were entitled to certain Army prize, but whether an independent judicial tribunal should decide between the claimants and the departments which had withheld what her Majesty's bounty intended to confer.—Lord LAWRENCE thought that no real case had been made out in favour of the army. One of the claims was for the interest of the money which the captured jewels would have fetched if they had been sold at the time, and generally the matter was not one to be referred to a judicial tribunal. It would not be for the public interest that the same rule which governed Navy prize should prevail in the army, but it would be highly desirable to lay down definite rules on which Army prize should be distributed.—The Duke of CAMBRIDGE agreed that regulations ought to be laid down, so that in case of war whatever was due to the army might come to them without such an unreasonable delay. This booty was captured sixteen years ago, and he wished to know how many of the original captors were now alive.—Lord HARROWBY protested against these claims being decided on ex parte statements in the dark chambers of the Treasury, but said he would not press his motion to a division.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, FRIDAY, July 19.—PENSION TO LADY MAYO.—Mr. GLADSTONE brought up a message from the Crown intimating her Majesty's desire to confer a pension of £1,000 per annum, during the term of her natural life, on the Countess of Mayo, in recognition of the late Lord Mayo's distinguished services, and in view of the circumstances of his death. The right hon. gentleman moved that on Monday next the House should resolve itself into committee for the purpose of taking her Majesty's most gracious message into consideration. (Hear, hear).—This motion was agreed to.

PETITIONS PRESENTED.—The following petitions from Indian officers have been presented during the week:—By Mr. R. Bright, from Major W. Leete, late Bombay Army, for compensation for loss sustained by the abolition of the bonus system in the Indian Army; also from Major Brown, late Bombay Army; from G. Atkinson, late lieutenant-colonel in the Indian Army; from P. Dods, lieutenant-colonel, late Bombay Army; and from H. S. Ruston, captain, late Bengal Army, with similar prayer.

Spirit of the Home Journals.

BREAK OF GUAGE IN INDIA.

The Money Market Review holds that the military Power which we have most to guard against in the event of political aggression upon our Indian dominions is Russia. Russia, like India, is engaged in the completion or construction of a Railway system combining all the chief places in the empire. We have recently given a list of the various lines, and, on occasion, we have pointed out their several connections and combinations. Nothing in the Railway history of Russia is more remarkable than the way in which the several lines are made applicable at any or at all times to military exigencies; but nothing is more extraordinary in the skill with which the entire system has been devised than the care taken that the guage of the lines shall be uniform everywhere except at the frontiers. The result is that, in the event of war (in which Russia might find it necessary to defend herself from invasion) she could move her armies within her territories with perfect facility, while the enemy, upon attempting to pass the frontier, would be encountered by all the difficulties and impediments to effective movement involved in a change of guage. Russia could act as from a centre, and deliver her defensive blows at any point of the circumference, where they would tell against the invader, at the very moment when he was most encumbered, yet at the moment when it would be most essential to his success that his progress should be most rapid. This is the reason why the Russian Railway system has been devised upon a uniform guage within and fenced from without by an effectual barrier in the shape of a change of guage. The policy of the Indian Government, supported by the Secretary of State for India in Council, is at this moment totally opposite to this, upon the very route by which alone Russia could penetrate into India. A more mistaken policy could not be adopted; yet it is being actually carried out, apparently without reference to the political considerations it obviously involves, in deference to preconceived notions, formed in defiance not only of a knowledge of Russian policy but of our own costly experience at home on the Great Western, and some other railways. At home we found the break of guage so intolerable that we determined to endure it no longer, and the wider guage is rapidly being changed in the narrower, for the sake of an indispensable uniformity. In India the folly is being committed of introducing different guages; so, what we are doing in one part of our possessions, we are undoing in another; and the statesmen in this country who are responsible for India have apparently closed their ears to remonstrances against it. The great trunk system of railway in India extends from Calcutta to Kurrachee, a distance of 2,450 miles. An unbroken gauge has been completed between Calcutta and Mooltan, on the Indus, and the same gauge is in operation between Kurrachee and Kotre, also on the Indus. There remains only the completion of the Indus Valley line, about 480 miles, to perfect the communication between the systems of all the great companies, and to give uninterrupted railway access to Lahore from the entire Continent and the most important ports on the coast. Moreover a branch line is projected to Peshawur, on the most important frontier in the country, intended mainly for military and State purposes. Peshawur is the watch-tower of India. From thence we keep an eye upon Russia, and from thence we have to repel her aggressions. On pretence of its being necessary to construct this branch economically, the metre, or 3 feet 3½ inch, gauge has been introduced; and, with the object of preventing a break between Peshawur and Kurrachee, it is proposed to extend the metre gauge line along the Valley of the Indus, and to add a third rail to the existing Scinde line, between Kurrachee and Kotree—a distance, including sidings, of 165 miles; while a third rail is proposed to be laid between Mooltan and Lahore, a distance of 235 miles, including sidings. The objections to a break of gauge are most forcibly put in the reports of Messrs. Fowler, Bidder, and Hawkshaw, printed in Mr. Andrews's pamphlet. These gentlemen concur in attesting that the alleged saving is illusory, while Mr. Lee Smith, late engineer in charge of the Peshawur line, has offered to construct the lines on the standard gauge of India, 5 feet 6 inches, between the points referred to, not only at the same cost, but at an actual saving; and responsible contractors are prepared to construct the works. The Secretary of State for India in Council has declined this proposal on grounds that will appear totally insufficient to impartial readers of the reports of the celebrated engineers referred to, and quite inconsistent with the experience of railway management at home. The matter must, we suppose, now rest, until Indian statesmen and Indian merchants have gained by practical experience some knowledge of the inconveniences of a break of gauge; and then they may have to undo in haste what they are now permitting to be done with deliberation.

INDIAN ARTILLERY ANNUITIES.—The following are the names of the officers of the Bengal Artillery now in India who have applied to retire from the service:—Colonels Maxwell, Lewis, and Bouchier; Lieutenant-Colonels Voyley, Fooks, Bowie, Maister, Young, and Harrison; Captains De Bude, Rybot Simeon, Present, Gillespie, Butt, Welsh, and Fitzroy. Of the nine field officers mentioned above there are four on the second list, so that only five out of the eighteen annuities set apart for field officers have been claimed in this country, leaving thirteen to be taken up at home, and it is doubtful whether so many will be found to avail themselves of the offer. Some of the junior captains will most probably find that there are no vacancies available for them unless they are allowed to take those declined by the second captains, as none of that rank have applied in India. On looking at the list, it does not seem likely that more than six colonels, six lieutenant-colonels, and five or six captains will retire of those at present at home; and in that case the number of field officers will fall short of the annuities granted. The Madras and Bombay retirements will affect the Bengal promotions to major-general. The senior colonel belongs to Madras, and the next four to Bengal; so that at the most not more than one colonel (E. B. Johnson, Regimental Lieutenant-Colonel) is likely to be promoted in the latter list. Supposing that the whole number are taken up, we anticipate that the juniors will be Colonel Courtenay, Lieutenant-Colonel Frith, Captain Hume, and Second Captain Marshall.—Pioneer.

THE SINGHASAN BUTTEESSEE.

This new and neatly-printed edition of a highly-popular Hindi Work is edited by Professor SYED AB-DOOLLAH, who, aided by European and Indian literary friends, has added copious Notes explanatory of the difficulties presented by proverbial expressions, archaisms, philological niceties, and Hindu manners and customs; while to facilitate still further the students' labours, the Nagari letters have been carefully dotted throughout.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.

Negligence, always inexcusable, becomes altogether unpardonable when a pestilence, such as fever, threatens to stalk throughout the land, and relentlessly claim all ages for its victims. Have these remedies handy.
At certain seasons, when the very air seems foul with infection and the water provokes disease, it becomes the paramount duty of all invalids to keep themselves and their families in full health and vigour. No wound or sore should now be permitted to run its destructive course; no skin disease should be allowed to depress the nervous system, when all such predisposing causes of danger may be effectually removed by this healing Ointment and these purifying Pills, without enervating or irritating the constitution.

THE RACES AND TRIBES OF HINDUSTAN,
ORIGINALLY PREPARED UNDER THE AUTHORITY OF
THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, AND REPRODUCED AT THE INDIA MUSEUM
BY ORDER OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL.

EDITED BY

J. FORBES WATSON AND JOHN WILLIAM KAYE.

MEMORANDUM.

In addition to the copies of this work prepared for the use of the Government, the Secretary of State for India in Council has authorised the publication of an edition for sale.

The work will contain about 450 Photographs on mounts, in eight volumes, super-royal 4to., and it will be issued at £2. 5s. per volume.
The First and Second Volumes are still on hand.

From the TIMES.

"We gather from the Preface that this work grew to its present handsome dimensions from a very modest commencement. It originated in the wish of Lord and Lady Canning to take home a private collection of photographs which might serve to recall the scenes and incidents of their Indian life, but as it advanced its importance began to be perceived, and Government, with a most judicious expenditure of public money, took it in hand. Very few of the photographs are unaccompanied by descriptions, often copious and graphic, of the subjects they illustrate, and the result is a singularly varied panorama of human life and character exhibited under almost every conceivable aspect. Although these four volumes deal with only a portion of the empire, there is scarcely a type of character, from the loftiest to the most debased, that is not to be found in them, and nowhere else, perhaps, in the world are peculiarities of character so strongly marked and sharply defined as in India. We might exhaust far more space than we can afford without giving the reader at all an adequate idea of the strange varieties of character to which these volumes introduce him."

ROWLANDS' MACASSAR OIL

Is the best and safest Restorer and Beautifier of the Human Hair.

Perfectly free from any poisonous or mineral admixture, its certain good effects are lasting, even to the latest period of life, it prevents hair from falling off or turning grey, strengthens weak hair, cleanses it from scurf and dandruff, making it beautifully soft, pliable, and glossy. Great caution is necessary to ask for ROWLANDS' MACASSAR OIL, and avoid all others, this being the only genuine. Price 3s. 6d., 7s., 10s. 6d., equal to four small, and 21s. per bottle. Sold by all Chemists, Perfumers, and at all Bazaars.

CAUTION!—Each Bottle has a GLASS STOPPER, instead of the Cork, as formerly. All with the Cork are SPURIOUS IMITATIONS. This notice is deemed necessary, as the Proprietors have received intimation that a large quantity of Counterfeit, of the most pernicious quality, has lately been sent from France to India and the Colonies under their names. Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail, are—from Bombay, July 5; Agra and Madras, July 3; Calcutta, July 2.

AFTER all it seems that the Rajah of Patiala did express his own opinions pretty plainly on the rumoured attitude of the Indian Government towards the officers who suppressed the Kuka outbreak. The letter itself we have quoted elsewhere. His Highness speaks of the mode in which the rising was suppressed as being necessitated by the evident aims of its promoters, who, under cover of a protest against cowkilling, sought to rouse the whole Hindu community against the rulers of their country. At the least encouragement the whole sect would have "sprung up like fiends." With regard to the censure which he heard was about to be passed on Messrs. Cowan and Forsyth, his Highness thought that the true meaning of it would be misunderstood by the natives in general, especially by the benighted Kukas, and that such misunderstanding would tend to neutralise the excellent effect of the repressive measures employed by the district officers and native chiefs. As this letter was written some time before the appearance of the Government Minute, there was just a little colour for the statement that his Highness had never condemned the decision of the Government. It is clear however that he could not have approved of it, although he may have deemed it best to hold his tongue after the decision had been published.

THE stories which about this time are sure to crop up in the Calcutta papers, touching the abandonment of Simla as a summer retreat for the Indian Government, are met by a statement that Lord Northbrook is going to add new reception-rooms to Peterhoff, his Simla abode. We are sorry for the Calcutta folk, whose pressing invitations to share their sufferings in the hot weather are thus pointedly disregarded. But is it not rather silly to get up a periodical outcry against the Government for doing what every rational Englishman in Calcutta would also do if he could? Why on earth should the rulers of India be doomed to swelter in a hot bath on the Hooghly, when there is absolutely nothing but a display of local jealousy and narrow self-seeking to keep them from bracing soul and body by a visit to the Hills? It might be well to shift the summer retreat now and then, but if an Indian Viceroy must stick to his Capital all the year round, it is very certain that Calcutta would soon cease to be his Capital even for half the year.

THE European shareholders of the old Bombay Bank are not yet disheartened by their late defeat in the House of Commons. They have called a meeting which was to come off on July 6, in hopes of getting a satisfactory answer from the natives of Bombay to their appeal for public sympathy. They call upon their native fellow-sufferers to give Parliament some kind of assurance that the Indian taxpayer would have no objection in the world to compensating them for their losses out of Indian revenue. If such an assurance can be obtained at the next meeting, not from native shareholders only, we presume, the case will be brought again before Parliament next year.

WE notice with regret the death of Lieutenant-Colonel S. V. Stephenson, of the Scots Fusilier Guards, Military Secretary to the Commander-in-Chief of Bombay. He was seized with cholera at Ganesh Kind, Poona, on the morning of June 28, and died the same evening.

THE Camp of Exercise in the Punjab will probably consist of four batteries of Horse and eight of Foot Artillery, including one heavy and three mountain batteries. Of British Cavalry there will be two and of Native Cavalry eight regiments. Six Regiments of British and seventeen of Native foot, with four companies of Sappers, will make up a total of about 20,000 men, and seventy-two guns.

THE weather in Calcutta had been very threatening for some days before the mail left. The reports of heavy gales at the Sandheads and off Akyab have been followed up by tidings transmitted from Bombay of a fearful hurricane in the Bay of Bengal, in which the Liverpool ship Omaha was driven ashore near Saugor with the loss of seventy hands. The Captain saw three other ships disabled; but for more particulars we must wait till next week.

THE Indian police have succeeded in hunting down one of the forgers who have lately caused so much stir in Benares and elsewhere. Venkattachallum, who is said to have uttered in Benares 214 of the Madras currency notes for Rs. 1,000 each, has been caught at Negapatam with a large amount of plunder in his possession. A like case of forgery, for which three natives have been arrested, has occurred in Bombay.

MR. ROBINSON'S resignation of his post as Member for Madras in the Viceroy's Legislative Council has been accepted. Mr. Ellis, C.B., Chief Secretary to the Madras Government, returns very shortly to Europe, Mr. Hudleston taking his place.

FROM a recent Bombay telegram, it appears that the strong feeling in that presidency against the projected railway from the port of Carwar to Gudduk was brought out in a debate of two days at a meeting held by the Bombay Chamber of Commerce. The debate issued in a resolution, from which only two members dissented, to memorialise the Duke of Argyll against giving his sanction to the project in question until further inquiries have been made into its practicability. To an unbiassed spectator, the outcry against this line seems mainly owing to that spirit of trade jealousy which begrudges all help given to a possible rival. The Carwar line might divert to a handier port some of the traffic which now takes a roundabout course into Bombay.

WE are glad to hear that the Secretary of State for India has at length sanctioned the following scheme for distributing the surplus assets of the Bengal Military Orphan Fund. Personal contributions to the fund will be reduced by twelve and a-half per cent., family contributions remaining as they were. Girls over eighteen admitted under the new rules will have their pensions raised from £35 to £40 a-year. All other pensions, whether granted on the old or the new rules, will be augmented by ten per cent. The final grant for boys under either set of rules will be raised from £63 to £105. These changes take effect from the 1st of April, 1872.

It may afford some of our readers a dismal satisfaction to learn that only a few weeks ago a rational retirement-scheme was on the very point of passing the India Office, when some bird of ill omen suggested the idea that all such schemes were barred by the pledges which the Home Government of India gave in 1861 against bribing any more of its officers to retire out of the regular course. It may be remembered that this was one of the reasons cited by the India Office for rejecting the retirement-scheme devised by General Norman a few years ago. It would of course be highly improper to look on such a plea as a convenient excuse for shunting a tiresome question which will have to be settled some day, but ought not to worry the official mind at this present. Promises, let us own, should not be treated like pie-crust, especially when they have been made by one party for the benefit of another. But the pledge given by the India Office in 1861 hardly comes under the head of pledges meant for another's benefit. If we remember rightly its true character was rather that of a threat than a beneficial promise. The extra pensions granted in 1861 were accompanied by a meaning assurance that Indian officers might look for no more concessions from their gracious masters in Westminster. What sort of sanctity dwells in a pledge of this kind, we cannot see. It was not given in the interests of the officers pensioned in 1861. None of them could in any way pretend to be bettered by the keeping or hurt by the breaking of it. Some stiff-necked people look on all kinds of promises as equally binding under whatever circumstances. If you promise to do anything, however wrong, foolish, or uncalled for, they are aggrieved if the promise be not faithfully kept. It may be that one or two such unreasonable beings exist among the retired officers of the Indian army; but how any reasonable being should grumble at an act of justice which would involve no real breach of faith with existing pensioners, we are at a loss to comprehend. And even if the pledge of 1861 had been given in behalf of existing pensioners, that is no good reason why it should not be broken under the altered conditions and unforeseen embarrassments of 1872. Great emergencies override all ordinary sanctions, and it is absurd to suppose that a great question of public policy can be decided by reference to a mere form of words, as idle in this case as the "last appearance" of a popular singer. A little more regard for "the poor Indian taxpayer" would be more to the purpose in a question of saving India several millions by a timely concession to the demands of the unemployed field-officers.

THE game of "Polo," with which the 9th Lancers have lately been entertaining their friends and the novelty-seeking public at Woolwich, is nothing more than the old game of Chaugān, played in Persia and Arabia for centuries back. Something like it, if we mistake not, is also common in Turkistan. It resembles closely our own national game of shinty or hocky, only that the players in this case play on horseback. The Lancers, no doubt, imported the game from India, where it has lately become popular, chiefly among the Europeans themselves. Its Persian name, Chaugān (literally "four-fold"), seems to indicate its Persian origin. How it came to be called "Polo" we cannot tell, for the only name by which it is known in the East is Chaugān.

THE announcement made on Monday last in both Houses of Parliament, touching the grant of a further pension to Lord Mayo's widow, will at least have allayed the fears of those who regarded the long delay in settling so simple a question as ominous of fresh inroads on the Indian Exchequer for England's benefit. Mr. Gladstone indeed made no secret of his opinion that the additional thousand a-year ought to have been furnished out of Indian revenue, and he plainly asserted that the sum now granted from the Imperial Treasury has been granted for Lord Mayo's Indian services alone. We may therefore thank the Duke of Argyll for his sturdy refusal to carry the Premier's views to their logical conclusion, and we hope that Mr. Lowe has not found his slumbers broken in this trying weather by the disagreeable necessity now imposed on him, of paying a thousand a-year out of the Imperial purse to the widow of an Indian Viceroy. It is certain at any rate that the boon so grudgingly bestowed by the present Ministry has given general satisfaction to both Houses of Parliament, and if they are satisfied no one else has much cause to grumble at so modest an acknowledgment of Lord Mayo's services to the Empire at large. Even Mr. Gladstone's denial of any parallelism between Lord Mayo's case and that of Lord Elgin may be accepted with complacency, if the pension now conferred on Lady Mayo becomes a precedent for like bounties hereafter at the expense of other than Indian taxpayers.

LORD STRATHEDEN's demand for strenuous efforts on England's part to put down the growing slave trade of which Zanzibar is the centre on the East-African Coast, drew forth from Bishop Wilberforce an eloquent protest against further toleration of an evil which his father had fought so hard and successfully to blot out of the record of England's crimes. If there be much truth in his picture of the 90,000 slaves yearly torn from their homes on that side of Africa, at a loss of five to ten African lives for every one carried into slavery, to say nothing of the terror spread through many new seats of African trade and industry, it is time that our Government should think of revising the present treaties with Muscat and Zanzibar, and of taking other practicable steps to arrest the growth of an acknowledged evil. The Bishop proposes that we should divide with India the cost of bribing the ruler of Zanzibar to forego his present traffic in slaves. If the eight thousand a-year he now pays to his kinsman at Muscat were thus taken off his shoulders, and an extra consul were quartered in Zanzibar with another ship or two cruising in the neighbourhood, it is thought that the Sultan in question would see his profit in accepting an arrangement which would tend greatly to increase his lawful trade. Lord Granville's answer was much more encouraging than that first offered by Lord Stanley of Alderley, who merely dwelt on the greater need of suppressing "the new and far worse trade of the Fiji Islands." Lord Granville did not dispute the need of doing something in the cause of humanity, nor did he try to underrate the horrors of the slave trade on the Eastern Coast of Africa. All he desired was, time to concert arrangements with other civilised Powers interested in the trade with East Africa, and to see whether India would consent to pay her share for the maintenance of a Resident in Zanzibar. That question of sharing expenses might to our thinking be settled in more ways than one. Perhaps the best way would be to let India appoint and pay the British Resident, while England furnished the requisite number of cruisers along the coast.

IN a long and very interesting letter to the editor of the New York Herald, Dr. Livingstone draws a mournful picture of the misery caused by the slave trade on the Eastern Coast of Africa. It appears that the ultimate blame for so infamous a traffic rests between the Government which conceded "a certain amount of slave-trading to the Sultan of Zanzibar," and the East Indian Banians who work the Custom House, manage the Sultan's revenues, and carry on a brisk trade in slaves through their Moslem agents without fear of check. The slaves thus imported are "not slaves but free people made captive." They are "not traded for"—says the Doctor—"but murdered for." Until he saw and learned something of the wanton cruelties wrought by the man-stealers with their guns on helpless women and children as well as harmless men, he had "no idea how bloodthirsty men can be when they can pour out the blood of fellow-men in safety." Two cases that came under his own notice were too sickening to write about. No matter how much ivory they have got, these man-stealing ruffians turn their guns for very wantonness on the village folk, killing many of both sexes, and taking the rest captive. Many of these poor wretches die on the road, either from the weight of the yoke and chains they are forced to bear, or from literal broken-heartedness, or both causes together. Their captors, we are told, were not unusually cruel in their treatment of slaves on the road.

But it was the old story. "They were callous—slaving had hardened their hearts."

THE past week has been intensely hot—for England. Of that there is no doubt whatever. When the thermometer reaches eighty degrees before breakfast on the cool side of the house, one may allow that it is very hot. To people who have never been in India or have forgotten what they felt out there, the heat of the past week may have appeared quite Indian. We advise such persons however to take a dip into Mr. E. Braddon's "Life in India," lately published by Messrs. Longmans, where they will see what the author thinks, not only about Indian heat, but many other things which, described as he describes them, are well worth the reading even in these muggy July days. Regarding a Punjab summer, he declares with truth that May is "uncomfortably warm." But from June to the beginning of the rains, in July, the Punjab "lives in an atmosphere of which the Englishman of England can have no fitting conception, unless he spends a day or two in a baker's oven, or a July evening in the saloon of the Alhambra." In Southern India again, with a temperature at ninety degrees all the year round, "the enjoyment of a perpetual summer, and a very hot one, tempered for those near the coast by an occasional cool breeze off the sea, cannot be estatic." In Upper India when the dry hot winds blow from the west, it is possible by means of "tatties" and punkahs to keep the temperature down to eighty or even seventy-five degrees; but in Bengal, where there are no hot winds to speak of, the thermometer indoors ranges from eighty to a hundred between March and the end of June. In most parts of India the steamy heats of the rainy season between the showers most nearly resemble the close muggy heat of last week in London. But, as Mr. Braddon remarks, "nowhere in Europe can heat like that of India be discovered, unless we betake ourselves to the oven, furnace, or hothouse to find it." Bombay in the month of March is quite as hot as London was on the hottest day of last week. As for walking out in India under a May or June sun, nobody who values his life would dream of doing it in the dress which an Englishman at home wears through the height of our July weather.

WE have good reason to believe that a third year of furlough, carrying retention of Indian appointments, will be granted on English pay, whenever the furlough is extended on sick certificate.

RETIREMENTS.—ROYAL ENGINEERS.

The following extract from a Despatch from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, No. 63, of March 21, received with Military Department Docket, No. 370, of May 7, is published for general information and guidance:—

I have considered in Council a letter from the Government of Bombay, inquiring whether the Royal Warrant, under which the purchase system of the British army is abolished, affects the Royal Engineer (Bombay) Retiring Fund, and renders the payment of a bonus to a retiring officer illegal, and stating that, if payments from this fund are rendered illegal by the recently issued Warrant, the claim for compensation advanced by subscribers to the fund is, in their opinion, reasonable, and deserving of liberal consideration.

2. The reply to the inquiry will affect the several bodies of officers formerly of the Indian artillery and engineers in Bengal and Madras, as well as in Bombay [Section 4], and I, therefore, address your Government, for the purpose of informing you that the practice to which the Government of Bombay refers is illegal under the Act 49 of Geo. III., and that the officers of royal artillery and engineers are not exempted from the operation of Clauses 138, 139, of Appendix A to G.O. No. 89 of 1871.

HUNTER'S ORISSA.—III.

IN his second volume Mr. Hunter reverts, as we have shown, to the painfully attractive subject of Orissa floods. The damage done by the flood of 1866 in the Puri district, fell, as we saw, far short of the total loss sustained by the whole province from the floods of that year. The hapless people were just beginning to breathe again after the dreadful famine which Sir C. Beadon did so little to avert, when their hopes of a rich harvest were dashed to the ground by an overflow which drove half the surviving population out of house and home. A million and a third of those survivors "suddenly found their homesteads submerged and crops to the value of £3,109,472 were destroyed," over an area of 1,050 square miles, on which the waters lay from three to fifteen feet deep, in most parts for thirty, in some places even for sixty days. Only eleven years before a disaster of equal severity, though of shorter duration, had overwhelmed the province, and smaller floods recur almost yearly in many places. Unluckily for Orissa the land slopes down everywhere from the river-banks, so that a flood once spread over the country cannot find its way back to the rivers, but lies on the face of the land, drowning the harvest and breeding poisonous airs, until it has dried up or slowly dribbled into the sea. Hitherto little has been done to avert these dangers beyond raising artificially the river-banks. This duty in old days fell upon the adjacent village communities, each of which was bound and took good care to look after its own section of the embankments. But with the introduction of British rule, which here as elsewhere paid more heed to individual rights than to corporate duties, the old communal system speedily broke down for want of any supreme control over each separate link in the whole chain. Landholders and villagers "soon began to argue that it was useless for them to keep up their own embankments, while the next landholder or commoner might neglect theirs." Government stepped in to remedy this evil, not by enforcing the old village system, but by taking on itself the cost of keeping the embankments in good repair. And this cost has been steadily rising, from £2,316 a-year in 1851 to £6,498 in 1866, and the latter sum is swollen to as much again by yearly remissions of land-tax on account of floods. Nor is it by remissions alone that the Government income has to suffer. Large tracts of land are allowed to lie waste for fear of the floods, and for a like reason the rent taken from land under tillage is only a fifth of "the natural rate." What with the combined effect of droughts and floods, the mere remissions for the thirty-five years down to 1867 made up a total of nearly half a million. In the course of fifteen years from 1853 to 1867 indeed, the uncontrolled water supply of Orissa cost the Government in remitted revenue, and in actual outlay on embankments, relief-works, and food for starving people, a round sum of four hundred thousand pounds, while the single famine of 1866 "forms a permanent charge on the revenue of £16,828 a-year, or over half a million sterling during the currency of the present leases."

In the well-stored appendices to the second volume Mr. Hunter gives full details of the measures hitherto adopted or devised for lessening the risks of drought and floods. Three separate series of works aim at rendering famine impossible. The first deals with the control of the water-supply by means of a more scientific organisation of dykes and embankments. Had Lord Mayo lived to pay his promised visit to Orissa, his shrewd practical mind would by this time have seen its way to the adoption or rejection of the scheme now awaiting Lord Northbrook's verdict. A thorough system of embankments is so costly, that its perfect adequacy for its avowed purpose ought to be placed beyond question, and yet many officers deny its adequacy altogether. The second series of works consists of a great canal system designed less to control than to husband the supply of water. Chief of these are the Orissa Canals which distribute the water for irrigation, and utilise it for purposes of traffic. Four great canals radiate across the delta of the Mahanadi, three of them running eastwards to the sea, and the fourth bearing northwards across Midnapore to the Hugli. Of its 250 miles 75 are already open, of which the first 36 miles alone will irrigate 89,000 acres. Another of these canals, 42½ miles long, forms a great trade-route from Cattack to the new harbour at False Point. All these works were begun by a private company, from whom the State bought them for nearly a million, spending half a million more on them in the last three years. At first the people were very slow to use the water thus placed at their doors. When the collector of a district in Balasór asked them why they would not use the water, they said it was "not the custom," that the landholders on the river banks would object to channels cut through their land for the benefit of fields further inland, that it would be very hard work, that it would not pay, and that river-water was less fertilising than that which came "from heaven." In 1870 however the husbandmen became frightened at the chance of another famine, the water-rates were reduced to two shillings an acre, and before the year's end 100,000 acres were placed under irrigation.

The third series of safeguards against famine aims at furnishing new facilities for the import of food into a province lately cut off from help by sea for six months together. The High Level Canal will form "a cheap road between Orissa and Bengal, tapping the river systems of both, and rendering the resources of each available for the wants of the other." New harbours also are being improved and brought into use. False Point Harbour, the main entrance by which food was thrown into Orissa during the famine, has lately been deepened and buoyed out, and the Kendrapára Canal has opened a sure highway between the harbour and Cattack. Steamers of large burden have already begun to make use during the monsoon of a harbour which is now acknowledged to be the best between Calcutta and Bombay. The cost of all this is no doubt very great, and the works now in hand may not yield much profit to the State for many years; but Mr. Hunter assures us that a few years more will see the people of Orissa "delivered from the chronic peril of death by starvation, and from the other calamities incident to an uncontrolled and unhusbanded water supply."

Orissa passed under our sway in 1803, after fifty years of Marátha misrule, preceded by about two centuries of Afghan and Moghul conquest. If the Moghuls scourged the people with whips, the Maráthas scourged them with scorpions. Two fearful famines in 1770 and 1777 carried off vast numbers of the wretched people, while the Marátha soldiery ran riot throughout the province. The village communities alone held together, now defying, anon retiring in a body before their merciless oppressors. The first English settlements in Orissa date from 1635, and a few years later an English factory was planted at Balasór, which flourished through all the perils which beset our trade in Bengal and environed the English settlers at Ganjam. "Amid all the confusion of the breaking up of the Moghul power in Orissa, amid all the miseries and maraudings of the Marátha rule which followed, the armed merchants of Balasór married and gave in marriage, had children born into the world, and themselves departed out of it just as they do in a quiet English village." At last, in 1803, Lord Wellesley determined to free Orissa from a yoke which had become intolerable. With about 3,000 soldiers, chiefly native, the task was accomplished in a few weeks, with the loss of only about fifty men. It was not long before the just and merciful British rule made itself felt for the better in a province which Marátha lawlessness had reduced to an almost desert.

Of the aboriginal Kandhs and Savars who people the hill districts of Orissa Mr. Hunter gives a full and interesting account. The Kandhs look down upon the yet more primitive Savars, much as the Hindus in Orissa look down upon the Kandhs. When Lieutenant Macpherson first went among these latter thirty years ago, he found "a free and spirited people, living under a semi-patriarchal, semi-feudal Government, with a strongly developed nationality of their own." Among them the principle of family reigns supreme. Their village communities are practically groups of separate households, each ruled by its own head, and owning little connection with the rest. There is indeed a kind of village headman, as in the Hindu village, but the Kandh headman is merely first among his equals, with no special authority, emoluments, or official distinction. The Kandh hamlet never grew into the firmly cohering entity that stamps the Hindu village, being in fact a mere group of homesteads ranged in one spot for the convenience of the several families. Kindred families have a common link in the patriarch of their clan, and the kindred clans in their turn form a tribe under a tribal patriarch. The Patriarch, whether of a tribe, a clan, or a village, is still "simply the head of a family, of which every member is of equal rank." The head of the tribe may do nothing important as a rule without consulting the heads of clans or the whole tribe. Like other rude races, the Kandhs shift their villages once in every fourteen years, a process easy enough in the thinly-peopled highlands where they mostly dwell.

The rest of the Tributary States of Orissa are more populous, and the villages pay rent to some hereditary Hindu Rajah. In these States there are actually eighteen landlords, whereas in the Kandh Country there is none. The Tributary States can boast of twelve houses and nearly seventy-three souls to the square mile, against four and sixteen respectively among the Kandhs. In British Orissa on the other hand, peopled mainly by Hindus, there are more than 14,000 landholders and co-partners over a country less than half as large as the Tributary States. Here too the number of houses to the square mile exceeds fifty-five, and the number of souls in the same area rises to more than 300. In pages full of interest and suggestive touches, Mr. Hunter depicts the growth of proprietary rights in Orissa, through the era of Offices under the Hindu dynasties, and the age of Inchoate Rights under the Mussulmans, to the age of Landlords as ushered in by our rule. It is an intricate and perplexing subject, this of landed tenures; but the author seems to thread his way successfully through the maze of historic evidence. In the old Hindu days the Sovereign owned the soil, which the village communities tilled for their own use, the Sovereign and his officers getting a share of the profits. Under the Mussulmans there grew up a race of hereditary stewards and rent-collectors, whom English usage has transformed into virtual landlords, with rights of ownership bounded only by the demands of the State and the partial tenant-rights secured to cultivators of a certain class. In dealing with these and other vexed questions Mr. Hunter's language, as if in sympathy with the subject, is inclined at times to be somewhat hazy. A little more of Macaulay's clearness or of Freeman's homelier English would have improved his style without any sacrifice of its rhetorical liveliness, or of the accuracy of statement at which he aims.

Spirit of the Indian Press.

THE CARWAR RAILWAY.

The Bombay Gazette observes that the form of government in Bombay has been, in fact, a despotism of Civil Servants and Royal Engineers, tempered by occasional jobs done in the interest of influential mercantile firms. We need hardly refer to the first and most famous of these jobs, the concession granted by Sir Bartle Frere's Government to the Back Bay Reclamation Company, which, with a recklessness that respectable journalists cannot too sternly condemn, we denounced at the time it was first spoken of, instead of praising the promoters as "our public-spirited and wealthy citizens" while their prosperity lasted, and waiting till they had done. If there be one who still doubts what where the relations between the Government officials and the merchant speculators of those days, we would advise him to read the report of the Bombay Bank Commissioners. The result, in this instance at least, may be considered to have justified our "way" of "flinging about imputations of jobbery." We come next to the administration of Sir Seymour Fitzgerald; and it is difficult, in reviewing the course of that administration, to understand what other objects Sir Seymour kept in view than the aggrandisement of his own family and of the great mercantile firm of W. Nicol and Co. From the first day that he landed in Bombay the darling purpose of his life seemed to be to buy the Elphinstone Company's property at a price far beyond its real value to the State. He and Colonel Kennedy worked for this end with a diligence that had its reward; the land was bought, and the perpetual puzzle of Government and the public is now to know what to do with it. It is often said that poor innocent Sir Seymour Fitzgerald and Colonel Kennedy acted up to the best of their knowledge, and that no one told them it would be a mistake to buy the Elphinstone estate. Though the public interest suffered, Messrs. W. Nicol and Co. and their lucky fellow-shareholders were satisfied, and Sir Seymour Fitzgerald and Colonel Kennedy remained in power to perpetrate the Carwar Railway job.

The Times of India remarks that as if the cause of the opponents of the Carwar line had not been damaged enough by the assertion that the Dharwar districts do not produce surplus grain, and by the organic blunder made in taking Colonel Kennedy's maximum and exaggerated working expenses to set against Colonel Trevor's traffic returns as erroneously reduced by his critic, its daily contemporary has done these gentlemen the ill service of reproducing the romantic memorial of July 1869, wherein it was proposed to "utilise the Bhor Ghaut" by bringing Compta cotton over it—thus subjecting produce to land carriage of five or six hundred miles when one hundred would suffice. Considering the furtive way in which that petition was got up—not a word about it being allowed to transpire before it was thrust before those who were desired to sign it in haste; that probably more than half of those who signed it are not now in Bombay; and above all considering that since the spasmodic opposition in the monsoon of 1869, the whole line has been surveyed for in detail, and the project put in such a shape as, to dispassionate observers, must place it beyond the reach of cavil, we say that in considering these things it was not fair to the reputation of Bombay merchants to reproduce that extraordinary document. At the time this unlucky petition was written, we have little hesitation in stating that not more than one or two merchants who signed it had ever been in the Southern Mahratta Country, or had taken the slightest trouble to investigate the merits of the two lines. They were pressed into signing the petition hastily by certain members of the then committee of the Chamber, who appeared to have taken sudden fright at the probabilities of all the sawn-ginned Dharwar and Compta cotton being shipped direct from Carwar to England, instead of by Bombay as heretofore.

OUR RELATIONS WITH PERSIA.

The Times of India remarks that in Bombay and the Persian Gulf ports, where the urgent need is so keenly felt of some working and intelligible method by which the business relations of British subjects with the Persians and the local rights of the former in Persia can be regulated, the easy-going reply of Lord Enfield to Mr. Eastwick is not a little annoying. It is not well understood how much the Foreign Jurisdiction Act would do to meet the objects mentioned, but there is faith that it might do something, in the absence of a proper commercial treaty, so that the cool proposal that the aged and learned Sir Philip Francis will probably delay framing rules for Persia until something else settles itself in the Levant is exceedingly disappointing. This incident is only one more showing the ignorance of the British Foreign-office as to the actual condition of affairs in Persia, and its stolid indifference to the interest of India in that country, though our revenues contribute the chief part of the cost of the Teheran embassy, and large sums have recently been subscribed by British Indian subjects for relief of the wretched Persians, scornfully neglected by their own Government. As it is said H.R.H. the Shah meditates making a European progress, it is well that Lord Enfield and other dilettante diplomatists should know that at present, and for some years past, the Persian administration is and has been utterly rotten and inefficient, except for extortion and oppression; while, at the same time, in Seistan and in Beloochistan its officials have exhibited an insolence and grasping disposition which England would not tolerate in "the most favoured nation." Neither Lord Enfield nor his chief know anything of all this, nor Parliament either; and this state of obscurity must continue until an experienced Indian officer is appointed to Teheran, and that mission be placed in direct communication with Bombay and Simla. Though General Goldsmid is quite sufficient of a philo-Persian for the present juncture, he would deal plainly with the Shah's Ministers and convince them that through him they would soon have turned on them the scorching light of a well-informed public opinion. Something must be done in business matters without waiting for Sir Philip Francis and the Levant rules.

WANTED—AN INDIAN "PUNCH."

The Bombay Gazette complains that in India we have no Punch, no comic journal, the Economist perhaps excepted, that can place grave matters in a ridiculous light, although in truth we have from time to time tried several, commencing with the Delhi Sketchbook, and terminating with our own Punch in India. They have all, alas! proved failures, though Punch in India might have survived, if it had not fallen on evil times in Bombay, when no one could afford to laugh. At one time the Delhi Sketchbook was a popular production, and could hit hard upon occasion, but the illustrations were exaggerated and badly engraved, probably because the artists, as amateurs, were unable to draw upon the wood, a common weakness of their class. The public wearied of comicalities, dependent for amusement upon the prodigious nasal organs of the parties caricatured. Gilray was burlesqued in the Sketchbook, and subscribers could be hardly expected to submit tamely to such pranks played upon their pockets. The Sketchbook went the way of all comic journals in India; but not, as we have heard it said, because people in India cannot understand, or at least appreciate a joke; but because the fare provided was so indifferent that few cared to purchase it. The same may be said of subsequent comic papers, and yet what a wide field for satire and caricature India affords to artists with the talents to make much of it! Nowhere are public men so open to ridicule as in this country. The blunders and economies of the dual system of government would furnish one of Punch's artists with comic material for a lifetime; nay, the very income-tax itself would be worth a fortune to a professional jester. And Anglo-India, what a theme this for men capable of adequately representing it with pen and pencil! The insolence of office; the snobishness of wealth; the results of the military amalgamation; the tittle tattle of society; the struggles for precedence; the quarrels of the pugnacious; these, and kindred pieces which it would exhaust a column to recount, are all lively themes for the caricaturist to exercise his heart upon; and, if more was yet wanting, the natives could supply the deficiency ad libitum, the Bengalee Baboo himself being probably equal to the employment of half a dozen artists from morning to night all the year round. No, there is certainly no lack of material for Punch in India; lack of capital to set him afloat is his want, we suspect, and this will never probably be forthcoming until such time as some of the progressive, enlightened, and wealthy natives of India embark money in an enterprise which, we daresay, would serve their countrymen infinitely better than other speculations in the literary line they affect at present with but little profit as the results. They are ready enough, some of them, to subsidise the native press under the fallacious notion that it must exercise a certain influence upon the Government; if influence for good is their object, we should say that an English comic journal would be more likely to suit their purposes; but not one of the calibre to which we have hitherto been accustomed. A comic paper must be first class or nothing, and a paper such as is here hinted at would require a heavy outlay at the commencement of its career to ensure it a good circulation in the future. We commend the idea to the attention of Mr. Knight, whose fine natural humour is wasted in serious literature, and we say to him, what we have already said to young India, that, if the Government of India is to be checked in its career of extravagance and blundering with any prospect of success, the event is more likely to be consummated under the dread of ridicule a comic publication can effect, than by all the belchings of the native press, than by even the startling figures and statistics of an Indian Economist.

INDIAN TEAS.—Messrs. Balmer, Laurie, and Co. report to us from Calcutta, July 2, 1872, that a very strong inquiry for Indian teas has existed during the fortnight between the 18th June and 2nd July. The bidding at the public sales was very keen and prices considerably over the London parity were freely paid. A great improvement in the manufacture of Cachar teas was evidenced at the sale of the 24th June, when the prices were run up in a most spirited manner.

Bengal.

CHRISTIAN MARRIAGE BILL.—A special telegram from Simla informs us that there was an animated discussion yesterday in the Governor-General's Council on the Christian Marriage Bill. The discussion has been adjourned for a week.—Bombay Gazette, July 5.

MISSIONS.—The Agra paper informs us that the Rev. Mr. Baring, a nephew of the Viceroy, is coming to this country as a missionary of the Church Missionary Society, and will be appointed to a station in Northern India.

THE VICEROY.—Lord Northbrook has offered a gold medal to the Bengal Medical College for the best essay on the causes of fever in Burdwan. His Excellency has also given a cup valued at Rs. 500 to the Northern India Rifle Association, and Rs. 100 to a rifle club at Bangalore.

CALCUTTA UNIVERSITY.—We are told that the faculty of law at the Calcutta University have elected Babu Shama Charan Sarkar, Interpreter of the High Court, to the Tagor Law Professorship. The subject of the lectures will be the Muhammadan Law, on which Babu Shama Charan is an undoubted authority.—Englishman.

MILITARY.—The Court Martial on Captain Lindsay, of the 1st Bengal Cavalry, was to assemble at Kanhpur on Monday, June 24th. Captain Lindsay is charged with being in an unfit state for duty when the Viceroy arrived at Kanhpur on his way to Simla.—We hear that part of her Majesty's 65th Regiment at Agra have been moved into camp at Bombay in consequence of the re-appearance of cholera of a very fatal type.

A NARROW ESCAPE.—Col. Thuillier has had a narrow escape from an accident which must have been fatal. While riding along one of the hillroads on the top of a steep khad at Simla, the Colonel's horse became troublesome, and he was obliged to dismount. After walking a short distance, he mounted again, and had no sooner done so than the horse reared on the edge of the narrow path, and the rider had just time to throw himself off, when the animal fell back, and rolled down the khad, breaking its back, and sustaining such fatal injuries that it died in three hours.

AGRA.—A correspondent writes from Agra to a contemporary on the 28th June :—"The rainy season has been fairly ushered in by a thunderstorm, which began at 4 A.M. this morning, and lasted several hours. Not much rain has fallen, but the steady and continued drizzle, together with the dark masses of clouds hanging overhead, leave little room for doubting that the regular monsoon has burst, and that the hot season of 1872 is already a matter of history. The thermometer, which at 4 P.M. yesterday stood at 98 deg. in a covered verandah, has now fallen to 81 deg., a difference of seventeen degrees in the course of a single day."

A NEW SIMLA PAPER.—A weekly journal—the Civil and Military Gazette—has been started at Simla. It is designed to supply a void which has long been felt by "the very large proportion of the intellect, ability, and talent of India," which the editor tells us in his opening article on "Ourselves," is congregated at Simla for six months out of the twelve. With such an inexhaustible fund of "intellect, ability, and talent" to rely upon, the new journal ought to be a success, and great things are expected of it. Its line of policy is "left to be developed by time, but whatever view it takes, its articles will be guided by honesty and candour, and its principles governed by prudence and justice to all."

EXPERIMENTAL FARMS IN THE PUNJAB.—Mr. Login is very confident as to the success of his cotton experiments in the Punjab. He has established farms at three different points—one, of fifty acres, ten miles below Kalka; another, a smaller one, at Kurnaul; and the third is the farm twenty miles north of Delhi, which produced 500 lbs. of clean cotton per acre last season. This year it is expected that the yield will be still greater, and this practical proof is said to have gone far towards inducing neighbouring zemindars to take kindly to the Egyptian system. The Hindoos, however, have raised an unexpected stumbling-block, as they unhesitatingly aver that to pluck two crops off the same cotton plant is sure to bring bad luck, and will result either in a pestilence among the cultivators or a murrain among their cattle.—Pioneer.

CHOLERA STATISTICS.—Up to June 17 the following reports of admissions and deaths from cholera, among British troops in the Bengal Presidency, from the first appearance of the disease this year, had reached Simla :—Benares, Artillery, 1 admission, 1 death; Wing 1st Battn. 3rd Foot, 1 admission, no deaths. Allahabad, Artillery, 1 admission, no deaths; 2nd Battn. 19 Foot, 7 admissions, 4 deaths. Cawnpore and in Cholera Camp in neighbourhood, Artillery, 4 admissions, 4 deaths; 1st Battn. 8th Foot, 26 admissions, 16 deaths. En route to Fyzabad, Detachment 26th Foot, 1 admission, 1 death. Fort of Lucknow, Artillery, 2 admissions, 1 death; Detachment 62nd Foot, 1 admission, no death. Agra, 65th Foot, 16 admissions, 11 deaths. Sealkote, 5th Lancers, 1 admission, 1 death; 58th Foot, 3 admissions, 3 deaths. Also a veterinary surgeon of the Royal Artillery on leave from Cawnpore died at Benares on June 8, 1872. Total, since the first case in March, 65 admissions and 43 deaths.

THE PESHAWUR COMMAND.—We have seen it stated by some of our contemporaries that Brigadier-General T. F. Wilson, C.B., was desirous of a transfer to the Eastern Frontier District (shortly to be vacated by General Bouchier, C.B.), but have reason to feel certain this is not the case. We suspect there is nothing further from General Wilson's wish than to relinquish the arduous honour of the Peshawur command. Able officers who have long had large bodies of Europeans under them are apt to find the command of an exclusive native force rather tame work. If there were any prospect of another Loshai business, it might perhaps alter the question; but as matters stand the exchange would naturally seem uninviting.—Pioneer.

MR. FORSYTH.—Our Lahore correspondent, says the Pioneer, usually so well informed, lately assured us and the public that Mr. Forsyth, C.B., was forthwith about to resign the Indian service. This time, however, our correspondent has been altogether misled by groundless rumour. Mr. Forsyth himself has preserved throughout what seems to us a perfectly dignified reserve and reticence under the rebuke passed upon him by the Government of India; but those who know him well assure us that he has shown no signs of an intention to give permanence to the slight he has suffered by quitting the service. There are as many ups as downs in the world, and Mr. Forsyth has seen too much of the high official world not to know that the disfavour of one Government is no reason to a man of proved capacity why he should not be amongst the most favoured confidants of the next.

RESIGNATION OF MR. CAMPBELL.—The Hindoo Patriot regrets the resignation of Mr. C. H. Campbell, the Presidency Commissioner, who is, says our contemporary, "the very antipodes of his brother, the Governor of Bengal. It is," continues the Patriot, "believed that he has done so because he is unwilling to serve under the 'fast' rule of his brother. Consequent on his retirement, Lord Ulick Browne, the genial Chief of the Calcutta Municipality, is appointed to be Presidency Commissioner, and Mr. Horace Cockerell, the present incumbent, to be Commissioner of the Chittagong Division. Lord Ulick Browne had extorted from the Lieutenant-Governor the promise of the Presidency Commissionership before he joined the Calcutta Municipality, and he has got it. But an officer of Mr. Cockerell's ability and experience ought not to be transported to the Botany Bay of the service. We hope he will be kept nearer Calcutta, to which, as a member of society, he is very useful."

RAGGED SCHOOLS.—A system of Ragged Schools, or, as the Government suggests they should be called, "Municipal Free Schools," has been established in Benares with great success, chiefly owing to the exertions of Mr. W. Forbes, the commissioner of the division. The Maharaja of Vizianagram found the funds for the erection of the first school-house, and Mr. Forbes maintained it at his own expense. As this school proved a success, the Municipality opened nine additional schools of a similar class in June 1871, and these also have been successful. One satisfactory feature in the schools is that in a town like Benares, the very hot-bed of caste-prejudices, boys of no less than fifty-three different castes, from almost the highest to the very lowest, have freely mixed in the schools. The total number of pupils on the rolls is 740, and the average daily attendance was above 562, of whom the majority were studying Hindi, and only twenty-four Urdu. For all this number of pupils, and though rewards in the shape of a few cowries are given daily as an encouragement to the pupils to attend to their lessons, the total costs of the ten schools has been only Rs. 1,048 for the year 1871-72, or an average of Rs. 1-11-7 per head.

RETIREMENT SCHEMES.—A correspondent writes to the Indian papers :—"In case the contemplated scheme for the retirement of field officers should be carried out, viz., £1,000 a-year annuity after thirty-eight years' service, and £40 per annum reduction, for every year less than thirty-eight years' service, the immediate saving to the State for every Staff Corps field officer who retires will be as under, to say nothing of the value of the abandonment of his reversion to colonel's allowances, &c. :—

INTRODUCTION OF COINS WITH ENGLISH INSCRIPTIONS INTO NATIVE STATES.—The Maharajah of Patiala very recently requested the Government of India to have some copper coins, to the extent of two lakhs of rupees, coined for him at the Calcutta mint. The Government, at the instance of the Mint Master, enquired of his Highness whether the coins required by his durbar should bear British or native inscriptions, and the Maharajah, in reply, informed the Government that they should bear British inscriptions, and that he intends to introduce British copper coins into his territories. On the receipt of this reply, the Government of India requested the political authorities to convey its thanks to his Highness for the liberal views expressed by him in connection with the circulation of metallic currencies in his territories. Some time ago, if we remember rightly, the Maharajah of Rewah made a similar requisition to the Government of India, but desired that the copper coins required by his durbar should bear native inscriptions.—Indian Daily News.

THE CHOLERA AT AGRA.—The Delhi Gazette of the 27th June says:—"Exaggerated rumours of the prevalence of cholera among the troops in Agra are again going about. To stop them if possible we again refer to the subject. With the gallant 65th everything has been going on most favourably since they went into camp. Only one case of cholera occurred in the Rambagh camp, and the man died from 'after effects' after several days' illness. The camp immediately changed ground, and has since been quite free. There is now—that is up to yesterday—absolutely no sickness in camp. Other two companies, hitherto in preparatory camps, on the parade, moved out yesterday and pitched on high ground beyond the Taj. They moved only because the rain of Sunday morning had made the parade damp and steamy, and not, as some people have had it, because there was a fresh outbreak of the disease. If we are not mistaken there have been only twenty-five cases of cholera in the regiment from first to last,—including one woman and four children,—and seventeen deaths. Ambulance carts have been provided for the use of the poor women and children in camp, who are permitted to visit the neighbouring gardens morning and evening."

HURRICANE IN THE BAY OF BENGAL.—On Wednesday night we received a telegram from Calcutta announcing that there had been a fearful hurricane in the Bay of Bengal, during which the Liverpool ship Omaha had been driven ashore near Saugor and totally wrecked with a loss of seventy hands. The captain of the Omaha escaped, and states that he saw three other disabled ships. We do not know what kind of ship the Omaha was, but we think there is good reason to think that there is some mistake in the report that seventy hands have been lost, for no ordinary trading ships carry so many hands; probably the word "twenty," which, with a carelessly-written capital initial letter, looks very like "seventy," has been changed into the latter word in course of transit by the telegraph clerks. The Calcutta papers received in Bombay on Wednesday report that the weather for the previous two or three days had been remarkably threatening, and that the barometer had given very distinct indications of a probable storm. Up to the afternoon of Saturday there was every prospect of a cyclone, and it was thought that Calcutta had probably just escaped another of those calamitous visitations; and it was then feared that there must have been very bad weather in the Bay of Bengal and on the east coast.—Bombay Gazette, July 5.

WHAT THE PATIALA RAJAH DID SAY.—The following letter was addressed to the Secretary of the Punjab Government, on the 15th of February, very soon after the executions:—"My dear Friend,—In reply to a telegram from you I promised in my letter of the 20th ult. to make inquiries as requested by his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor, and communicate to you the real cause of the Kooka outbreak. I therefore write, for his Honour's information, that, from many proofs, it is quite certain that Ram Singh's real motive and ambition was bent, upon religious pretext, to reign and acquire dominion, and he deceitfully implanted this capricious notion in the minds of his ignorant and superstitious followers that their creed was to predominate, that everywhere the government of the country would be very soon in their hands; and as they had the fullest belief of this absurdity, he never failed to excite their minds, and keep them in agitation and earnest expectation to attain their object. And as the numbers of his followers—full of blind bigotry and zeal—had now increased to enormity and vastness, he, therefore, had a sanguine hope of success, and excited them to view with the utmost horror and hatred the act of cow killing. In exciting this prejudice his motive was—as, under the religious pretext, the cart-ridge prejudice subverted and put in commotion the whole of India in 1857—that, by means of this ignitable match, he may rouse up and excite the feelings of the whole Hindoo community, including the chieftains, gentry, and the troops, to stand up and sympathise in support of a common cause of hatred against the rulers of the country, anticipating, with some reason, a result from the confusion which would follow, that in every class and grade of the community he would be held in respect and awe, and thus establish a powerful sway over them, of which he was long in earnest. Had not this appalling punishment been inflicted so promptly and so well as was the case, and had not Ram Singh and his sobbahs been deported from the province, there was no hope of the disturbance being quelled soon, and without doubt there would have been an endless waste of money and life before tranquillity and confidence would have been restored. Had they had the most meagre success the whole sect would have sprung up like fiends who were all anxiously watching the result of this pantomimic attack. The above is a brief result of my enquiries, which have been recorded after the most careful observation. There is one thing more which I think it right to bring to your notice. I have learnt from newspapers, &c., that the Government of India has expressed its disapprobation at the manner of the punishments awarded by the local authorities. I believe the object of Government will be misunderstood by the native public, and particularly by the benighted sect, who will no doubt attribute it to the supernatural power of their 'Sutgooroo.' This will tend in a great measure to frustrate and invalidate the excellent action and efficient measures adopted in the coercion and eradication by the district authorities and native chieftains of an evil which had been so promptly and adequately nipped in the bud before bringing forth blossoms of further evil, and would make them look light and unimportant. I am of opinion that misconception of intention of a Government by the public is always fraught with unpleasant consequences, and I deem it right to inform you of the views I take on the subject.—I am, my dear friend, yours very sincerely,

"MOHENDRO SINGH, Maharajah of Puttiala."

* Transactions.

IMPORTS.—CALCUTTA, July 2.—Market during the week very quiet, and prices remain almost unchanged.

EXPORTS.—CALCUTTA, July 2.—Jute: Holders have been forcing their stock on the market, and the consequence has been another fall in prices. Saltpetre: The market shows every symptom of a further rise, as the stocks are but small. Rice: The market continues firm at last quotations. Linseed: All descriptions are quoted from two to four annas lower. Raw Silk: The only sale reported during the week is 6 bales Jungypore Filature, March bund, at 20-14. Corals: Holders still stand out for extreme rates, and no business has been reported.

PRODUCE MARKET.—CALCUTTA, JULY 1.—We have received the following special Tea Report from Messrs. Balmer, Lawrie, and Co., No. 4, for the season 1872-1873:—"We have to chronicle several auction sales of the new season's Teas, of which it will perhaps suffice to say that at each the demand was active, and the prices realised were generally above London rates, thus evidencing that it is of importance to planters to get their first Teas early to market. With the exception of some very excellent samples of Cachar growth, the character of the Teas has been generally rather disappointing. We cannot allow this report to leave our hands without raising our voice against the manner in which public sales are often unduly hurried in Calcutta, in some instances the samples being given out only twenty-four hours before the time of sale. We submit that this practice can serve no good end, and is unfair alike to the planter and the buyer. Assam: The weather has been pretty satisfactory. At Debroghur more rain was looked for; Golaghat—first-rate Tea weather, warm and steamy, with fine intermittent showers; Gowhatty—hot and muggy, but favourable for Tea. Cachar: The weather in this district has generally improved, and the bushes are throwing out furly. Dargeeling: We regret to report but little abatement of cholera. Many gardens have suffered considerably by its ravages, and we fear that the mortality, in addition to the panic, which has kept many coolies from their work, may seriously affect the prospects of the district. A want of rain has been generally felt, both for the sake of the bushes and for the removal of the epidemic. Kumayon: The season has, up to date of last advices, promised well; and, notwithstanding the hail storms reported in our last, planters look for a profitable outturn. Kangra: This valley, on the whole, has been excepted fairly fortunate in the yield, and some estates show even double the outturn of last season. London advices by mail are dated 6th ult. The visible supply at 1st June may be estimated at 8,033,639, against 6,801,530 lbs. at same date last year, or an increase of 1,232,109 lbs.; but we see no reason to be alarmed at this, as the deliveries up to same date were 1,544,281 lbs. over last year, and we think it will be found that the Teas of last year's crop were got home earlier than the previous season, which met would, of itself, supposing our ideas to be correct, largely account for the increased supply at 1st June. The only thing likely to affect the relative value of Indian and China Teas would be, if the latter crop should prove exceptionally fine, the use of Indian descriptions for mixing would be limited; but of this there appears to be no present probability. The low prices just now current in London, have brought Indian sorts into large consumption, and when dealers once get thoroughly into the way of using them, they will be unable to give them up; we therefore look for an extended demand next year.

Madras.

MILITARY.—The important post of Adjutant-General of the Madras Army is likely to become vacant by the retirement of Colonel P. B. Ro., on the return of his corps, the 3rd Battalion 60th Rifles, to England towards the close of the year.

DEATH FROM SUNSTROKE.—A telegram has been received at Madras by the agents of the barque Aldebaran stating that Captain Grigg, commander of that vessel, died on Sunday, June 23, at Cocanada from sunstroke.

THE "GOORU OF THE WORLD."—A Brahmin priest who lives at Mysore in the odour of sanctity has been lately paying Dindigul a visit. The old gentleman, we are told, succeeded in extracting some Rs. 4,000 from the pockets of his admirers in those parts, and he intends extending his tour over the whole of Southern India.—Lanalore Herald.

HYDERABAD.—A correspondent, writing from Hyderabad on the 27th ult., informs us that Colonel Lumsden, the new Resident, had arrived at Hyderabad, and purposed taking charge at once of the Residency from Mr. Saunders. Mr. Saunders leaves on the 10th instant, travels by a horse transit a part of the way, and on account of the bad state of the roads takes a palankeen the rest of the distance. The condition of the road to Goolburgah is described as something dreadful. Sir Salar Jung gives Mr. Sanders a fete on the 7th instant, previous to his departure.—Bombay Gazette, July 5.

A FEMININE WAY OF FIGHTING.—One of the magistrates at the Royapettah Police-court has given us a valuable piece of information. He has let us know the value of the first joint of a little finger. Two individuals, belonging to what is generally termed the gentler sex, had a set-to at pulling each other's hair, but one of them finding this rather slow work, got the little finger of the other into her mouth and bit off the first joint. For this she had to pay Rs. 20. At this rate for a little finger a calculation might be what would be the value of a leg if it were bitten off.—Madras Times.

RAM SINGH.—Ram Singh, the Kooka, does not seem at all satisfied with his present position. He complains bitterly and loudly that he has been forcibly removed from his native country to a land beyond the seas by a Government to whom, while at large, he constantly conveyed the fullest information of all Kooka doings. "And," alluding to his detention, "this is the reward I have received for my vigilant loyalty!" There need be no apprehension that Ram Singh will be permitted to return to the Punjab. His followers in that quarter hold that if he is the gooroo he represented himself to be, it is in his power to return amongst them whenever he feels disposed to do so, and after waiting a little longer they will not be indisposed to think that as he has not come back he must either prefer remaining where he is, or be an arrant impostor.—Madras Times.

THE DEATH OF MR. MAN.—The following further particulars regarding the death of Mr. Man, Assistant Commissioner of Bassein, is taken from a Rangoon journal:—It seems at the first alarm Mr. Man seized a musket from a policeman, and ran down to the scene of the dacoity many yards in advance of the policeman. The people whose houses he passed shouted "Woondou labee" (the Assistant Commissioner is coming) and Man rushed on. As he neared the house where the dacoits were a shot was fired, which struck him in the breast, and killed him instantly. Arrests were made that night, and the dacoits were found to consist of two parties from villages in the vicinity of Nagathiangyoung. Fifteen men are now under trial. The man who fired at Mr. Man has been caught. Public opinion in the district seems to show that the crime is a simple dacoity of the old Burman type, and the death of poor Mr. Man an unfortunate accident of no political import.

CALICUT.—The Protestant Church at Calicut is, we learn, in a very decaying state. Formerly there was a chaplain located there, but as the chaplains looked upon the place as a sort of penal settlement, and not as a field at all for the spread of the Gospel, the chaplaincy has been all but abolished, and only once a month does the Rev. Mr. Pope pay the place a visit, arriving usually on a Friday night, and departing by the first train on Monday morning. The Roman Catholics have the run of the place, and are doubtless doing a great deal of good.—Madras Mail, June 26.

CAPTURE OF A FORGER.—The utterer of the forged currency notes has been caught at Negapatam. He had worked his way round to that place, and on the 29th of May he went to the Madras Bank and cashed twenty 1,000 rupee notes. The notes, however, were genuine, and the forger took the money, and went quietly away. An inspector of police hearing of the case had his suspicions aroused, and he determined to capture the man. So he went off to his lodgings, but found that he had gone to the station to leave by the first train. The inspector went to the station, and there entered into conversation with the man. He told him that he wished to purchase jewellery, and then Vencatachellumyiah showed him some, and while he was doing so he displayed a number of bank notes. The inspector then seized him, and marched him off to the station. There is a report that the man had jewellery and notes with him to the value of two lakhs of rupees, so if that is true the Government will not lose much. The next thing will be to bring the man to trial, and no doubt he will get what he deserves.—Madras Times.

DEATH OF THE NIZAM'S TUTOR.—We regret to learn that the Nizam of Hyderabad has sustained a great loss by the death of his tutor, Mr. C. Willis, the second son of the well-known judge of that name at home, who came out to India as tutor to the Nizam about a year ago, and endeared himself by his kind, gentle deportment to all who knew him. Ill-health compelled him to proceed, during the last hot season at Hyderabad, to Bangalore, and it was with mingled surprise and sorrow that a telegram was received announcing his death at the latter station. Sir Salar Jung, whose sons Mr. Willis used to instruct in company with the little Nizam, is very sad about it, and has ordered, at his own expense, a very handsome monument to be erected over the remains of one whom he held in such great regard and esteem. Mr. Willis belonged to St. John's College, Oxford, and was a very good classic scholar. The cause of his death, we learn, was pulmonary consumption. Sir Salar Jung has written to England for another tutor (a Cambridge man) to fill the post rendered vacant by the death of Mr. Willis. Mr. J. W. Edmunds, one of the masters of the Engineering College, has been appointed to officiate until the successor to the late Mr. Willis arrives.

THE ATTACK ON THE "CASHMERE."

We subjoin the following account of the affair by Mr. Loutit, the first officer:—

The attack had been evidently planned by men well acquainted with the interior of the steamer and the time of her departure, as we had embarked our passengers, received mails, and purposed leaving at daylight on the day the outrage was committed. At about 1 A.M. the quartermaster on watch noticed a native boat quietly drop alongside, with the strong ebb tide, to the after accommodation ladder. He hailed it, and the occupants replied that they were passengers. He then told them to go to the forward ladder, which they did, with the exception of one man, who, having got on the ladder, was allowed to come on deck, when he rapidly drew a long knife from his belt and made a stab at the quartermaster, which he intercepted with his hand, thereby having his thumb and two fingers nearly severed from the wrist. He called loudly for help. I was sleeping in my cabin almost fronting the gangway, and hearing the quartermaster's cries for help jumped out of bed and found him struggling with an armed man. Thinking he was some petty robber, I at once grappled with him and endeavoured to secure his knife. Whilst doing so he cried to some one by name. I did the same, calling on the officers, whose cabins immediately adjoined mine. The second and third officers immediately came out, and just as we had overpowered the man, a crowd of some twenty men came rushing from forward, armed with guns, scimitars, and knives. The first intimation I had of their arrival was a violent sword-cut over my head, which partially blinded and stunned me. I at once relaxed my hold of the first robber and staggered to the poop-ladder (a few paces aft from the place where we were struggling), and I managed to get up. I was met by the captain and Mr. Cunningham (the Company's agent at Bussorah), who, from having slept right aft on the poop, had only just been aroused. Whilst I was speaking to them the quarter-deck was rapidly filled with some fifty armed Arabs, who blockaded all the officers and engineers in their cabins (with the exception of the second and third officers, who managed to escape to the poop), and cut off our communication with the crew. The captain at once placed one of us over each poop-ladder to keep the robbers from coming up, and going down to the saloon by the skylights, managed to barricade the saloon doors and get at the ammunition room for rifles and swords. Whilst this was being done we were joined by Mr. Mackenzie, the chief engineer, who had managed to run the gauntlet through the robbers on the quarter-deck at the expense of having his right hand nearly severed from his arm, which he had raised to ward off a scimitar blow, and a few minutes after by the clerk, Mr. Bradford, who, poor fellow, fared still worse, as his cabin being right forward he had to choose the alternative of being murdered where he was or making a dash aft through the robbers, who now had entire possession of all the ship except the poop; and choosing the latter he got unscathed as far as amidships, where he was recognised and at once attacked. He made a dash first into the second officer's cabin, and then into mine, thinking to obtain help, and leaving ghastly evidence of his temporary occupancy in both cabins. He then made for the poop, crying for help. The captain hearing these cries rushed to the ladder and managed to haul him up on the poop out of the Arabs' hands, who, like incarnate fiends, seemed to thirst for blood as well as plunder. The poor fellow fainted in the captain's arms from loss of blood, caused by three deep sword gashes in his back: and had Captain Gavin not torn off his linen night-shirt and made a temporary ligature for the wounds he would certainly have bled to death. At present he lies at Bussorah under medical attendance in a very precarious state. The robbers in the meantime divided themselves into two gangs, one half forward and the other half aft. The forward party devoted their attention exclusively to the crew and deck passengers, whom they cut and slashed about in the most brutal manner, irrespective of age, sex or caste. The crew had mostly escaped aloft; but one poor fireman, Esmail Khan by name, was not quick enough, and paid the forfeit of his deep sleep with his life. One of his messmates, who witnessed the scene, tells me that an Arab first pricked him with a dagger, and on his arising he fell on his knees, and clasped his hands crying out, "Sahib, ham ko mauve carow, ham Muesulman hai." In answer the brutal fellow with a single blow severed the suppliant's head from the trunk and left it hanging by only a small piece of skin. Death, of course, was instantaneous. The aft party taking possession of the quarter deck took off the after hatches, and with a few vigorous blows with some heavy iron implements burst open the treasure-room doors, and rapidly passed the contents, amounting to some Rs. 42,000, on deck, and thence into their boats over the forward ladder. The other gang had completed their plunder of the passengers and crew, and the whole pack then jumped into their boats and shoved off. As soon as the crew could be communicated with, a boat was lowered, and the Turkish frigate communicated with, which at once sent its surgeon to render assistance. The Turkish authorities have taken a full list of the property stolen and injuries sustained, and it is to be hoped they will make ample recompense and bring the scoundrels to justice.

Miscellaneous.

THE ALLEGED CUSTOM OF INFANTICIDE AMONG KOONBEES OF AHMEDABAD AND KAIRA.—A correspondent of a Gujerat paper asserts that there is no custom of female infanticide among the Koonbees, either of Ahmedabad or of Kaira, and yet several men of that caste, in order to be regarded as head men, represented to Government the existence of this crime in their caste; and Government has passed an Act, which, says the correspondent, works prejudicially to the peace of the people, and inflicts on them great sufferings. The writer prays Government to inquire into the working of the Act.

COLONEL SCHNEIDER.—Yesterday Colonel W. Schneider, Deputy Judge Advocate General, left here to take up his appointment as Resident at Aden with the rank of Brigadier General. It is not too much to say, perhaps, that Colonel Schneider was greatly respected by all in Poona, and the whole of those acquainted with him express much regret at his departure, but at the same time congratulate him on his appointment and wish him a long continuance of good health to fill the honourable post which his meritorious services have gained for him.—Poona Observer, July 2.

RAILWAYS IN THE BOMBAY PRESIDENCY.—A Belgaum paper thinks that the Bombay Presidency has not derived as much benefit as it should have received from railways. A small portion only of the Presidency has obtained the blessing. In the opinion of the writer, a line from Dhoolia, going by Ahmednuggur, Poona, Satara, Kolapore, and Belgaum towards Dharwar, and another line from Raichore going by Mudgul, Bagulkot, Kuladghee, Gokak, and Belgaum, to Vingorla, will prove of immense benefit to the trade and commerce of the Presidency.

EFFECTS OF SUNSTROKE.—We regret to hear of another instance of the effects of the Gulf weather upon Englishmen. Captain Macdougall came out to India ten months ago, and some time afterwards left for the Persian Gulf, where he held command of H.M.S. Nimble. There he was stricken with sunstroke, and the shock has had such an influence upon him mentally that he has been compelled to leave for England, and yesterday he was a passenger by the home going mail. His stay in the Gulf was little over two months. Lieutenant Lang now temporarily commands the Nimble.—Bombay Gazette, July 5th.

ARCHITECTURAL.—The design for the High School at Kolhapoor which is now being exhibited in the Royal Academy, is attracting much attention among architects at home, who now see, for the first time, a modern building thoroughly carried out in one of the most beautiful of the indigenous architectural styles of India. It would perhaps be too much to say that Captain Mant has in this design definitively settled a question which has been frequently discussed, but the ventilation of which in mere words, no matter how skillfully turned, must ever be fruitless and inoperative; but it is at least an important and very successful contribution towards the solution of that problem,—which style of architecture is the most suitable for India? The style in which Captain Mant has worked is that variety of the many-sided Mahomedan architecture, most fully developed in the capitals of Rajpootana. The main features, the spirit of the style, so to speak, is Mahomedan, but the Hindoos have engrafted on it certain variations—curvilinear roofs and projections like great hood moulds, for example—which, as Mr. Fergusson points out, were clearly derived from the bent bamboo roofs of the ordinary villager's hut. But, without stopping to inquire very closely into the exact historical or artistic position of the style selected, there can be little doubt in the mind of any one who studies the design that an exceedingly rich, graceful, and characteristic effect is produced, and that Captain Mant's building, unlike too many of our mere recent Gothicky creations, will look as if it belonged to the country, and not as if it had been just unpacked from the Bombay Custom-house. Captain Mant may well be congratulated on the common sense, courage, and skill with which he has availed himself of the materials which lie so near at hand, but which the ambitious architect is too prone to neglect in favour of the recondite and half-understood. As treated by him the High School of Kolhapoor promises to be a worthy contribution to that most desirable consummation—the renaissance of the native styles of architecture in India.—Bombay Gazette.

Official Papers.

From Brig. gen. C. H. Brownlow, Commanding Chittagong Column, Loshai Expeditionary Force, to the Quartermaster general, Army Headquarters, Calcutta. Dated Calcutta, April 3.

Report dated Sylhoo Savoong, Jan. 29, 1872.

2. On Jan. 1 I was joined at the village of Lower Hoolien, on the Towrong range, by the half-battery of artillery and half-company of sappers. The day following I moved with the whole of the advanced force three miles further up the range to the village of Upper Hoolien. From this place, which is 4,000 feet high, or rather from a peak beyond it, 700 feet higher, where the survey had cleared a station the day before—for even at this elevation, though the undergrowth is not so great, the hills are clothed with forest to their summits—a fine view could be obtained of the surrounding country. Sylhoo Savoong, the capital of the chief, lay ten miles to the east, or a little to the north of east, but separated from us by a deep and difficult valley, intersected by the head-waters of three rivers (running like the ranges north and south), two towards Cachar, and one into the Kurnafuolee, and a confusion of minor ranges and spurs involving, as we afterwards found, ascents and descents, aggregating in this comparatively short distance 4,200 feet of the latter, and 3,300 feet of the former. Further to the east, and on the third and fourth ranges from the one on which we stood, were to be seen the most important of the Howlong villages, and our direct road to their country was clearly through Savoong's. About ten miles due north stood the deserted village of Lal Gnoora, and eight miles beyond that again a large and newly-built one belonging to the same chief, one of the sons of Savoong. The road to these villages was a comparatively easy one along the Towrong range, and I determined on destroying them before turning eastward.

3. Captain Battye, with two companies 2nd Goorkhas, was ordered to proceed at once and occupy the deserted village. On Jan. 3 Col. Macpherson joined him with two more companies of the regiment, and the day following marched and attacked Lal Gnoora's, which he found strongly stockaded, and in taking which he lost one Goorkha (killed), and an officer (Capt. Battye) and nine men wounded.

The village was burnt and a large quantity of grain destroyed. Col. Macpherson's report is appended, and I beg strongly to endorse his recommendation of Major Macintyre for gallant conduct on the 4th inst. This officer has been in the advance all through the expedition, and his eye for country, as well as the care and skill with which he works his men, have rendered his services with the column invaluable. The claim to the order of merit put forward by Col. Macpherson on behalf of riflemen Indrajest Thappa will be duly submitted as soon as a committee can be assembled.

4. During the 4th and 5th raiding and reconnoitring parties were sent out in different directions from Upper Hoolien, and on the 6th I moved with two companies of Goorkhas, half-battery of royal artillery, and the half company of sappers to Lal Ngoor, a village on the road to Savoong's, situated on a ridge in the valley to which I have already referred. This march of seven miles took the troops as many hours, and the coolies were not up until three hours later. Where the path did not ascend or descend at an angle of 35 deg., it followed the tortuous bed of a mountain torrent overhung by trees and precipices, and blocked up with rocks and boulders, through which we waded and stumbled for three miles, chilled by the cold clammy atmosphere, and feeling that fifty determined men might do as they liked with us, for there was no possibility of protecting our flanks. The Loshais engineer their tracks with considerable skill, and at tolerable gradients along the top or face of a range, and keep to the high ground as much as possible; but when they have to cross a valley they do so by the shortest lines, and a day's journey, such as I describe, is a fair specimen of its kind.

5. On arriving within a thousand yards of Lal Ngoor, an open joom or clearing on a spot where a bend of the hill afforded a view of the vil- and its defences, gave me an opportunity of using the artillery for the first time. Colonel Hills's 7-pounder steel guns, which are carried by coolies, and keep up with the column on any ground, fired some very effective shots, while a company of the 2nd Goorkhas, under Capt. Nash, accompanied by Capt. East, asst. qmr. general, worked round under cover and drove out the enemy.

6. On the 9th I was rejoined by Col. Macpherson and the headquarters 2nd Goorkhas.

The same day the post of Upper Hoolien was abandoned, as being off the direct line of communication, and the village of Lal Shumah, to the south-east of it, was occupied as a halting ground between Kothier Klang and Lal Ngoor, the whole distance between these places being about eighteen miles by road.

7. I may here mention, in the order of time that the particulars reach me, another attempt of the enemy to waylay a convoy. On the 6th inst., while a small guard of the 2nd Goorkhas and a few Sappers were marching in charge of coolies along the Towrong range, they came suddenly upon some thirty Kookies in the act of preparing an ambush. There were only four Ghoorkhas in front, who at once dashed at the enemy, drawing the fire of the whole party, and yet killing one and wounding two without any loss to themselves. Such conduct needs no comment, and is the third or fourth instance of the kind. It is due to the material training and matchless spirit of this regiment that the column has suffered so little at the hand of the Sylhoos, who, I feel sure, would have given us very much more trouble had they met with the slightest success in their encounters with small bodies, and in their attacks on our line of communications. I am happy to say that not a single follower has been killed or wounded up to the date of this report, our only losses having been among the fighting men.

8. On the 11th I started for Sylhoo Savoong with 200 Goorkhas, the half battery of artillery, and half company of sappers, intending to reach it the same day, but the march was a difficult and tedious one, and at four o'clock in the afternoon, finding we had still an ascent of 2,000 feet before us, and expecting more than usual opposition at the head-quarters of the tribe, I determined to halt. For the sake of water, the spot selected was just above a stream. It was covered with jungle, but the force has now had considerable experience in bivouacking, and enough space was soon cleared to enable us to get through a very unpleasant night, for the thick mist which gathers in these valleys immediately after sunset penetrates everything, and the drip from the trees as it condenses can only be compared to rain. The wood in such places is too damp to burn; and altogether, the situation, not unfrequent in this campaign, is trying to the strongest. Next morning a dose of quinine was administered to every soldier and follower, and after a steep ascent of two hours, we occupied Sylhoo Savoong without a shot being fired. The village, which consisted of between 300 and 400 houses, had been burnt on the 7th inst. It occupied a fine position, at an elevation of 3,200 feet, with the river Kloong-Doong or Dullesurree flowing under it to the east, and two tributaries, one of the Gootur, and another of the Kurnafoolee, rising at its western base.

10. On Jan. 13 Capt. Lewin proceeded with an escort of fifty Goorkhas to put Rutton Pooea across the Kloong-Doong, which river is the boundary between the lands of the Sylhoos and Howlongs. I have already mentioned that Rutton Pooea is at enmity with the former, but allied by marriage and other ties to the chiefs of the latter, whom he has always confidently declared he could bring into camp whenever we reached this point. Capt. Lewin returned with his whole party next day, having failed to carry out his object. A small village on the other side of the river was burnt at his approach, and there were so many signs of Sylhoos having fled in that direction, that Rutton Pooea declined to go any further, saying that to do so might precipitate a collision with the Howlongs, and put it out of his power to mediate. He begged to be allowed to proceed by a more southerly route, and urged that we should not cross the Kloong-Doong before the 25th. As we had barely one day's rations in camp, and it was necessary to my plans to have a reserve of ten days at least before moving, I consented, and the chief started next morning, accompanied, as far as it was safe for him to go, by Subadar Mohamed Azim, of the police, an officer whose services with the expedition have been most valuable.

The only conditions to which I referred, as the grounds on which we could treat with the Howlongs, were the restoration of the captives, and an unmolested march through their country.

11. As the 2nd Goorkhas had recently done very severe work, having since the 3rd instant marched over some sixty miles of bad road, carrying everything on their backs except their cooking-pots, and, when not marching or fighting, been employed at long distances from camp destroying jooms, it was necessary to give them a few days' rest. During the next week, parties were sent out in various directions for reconnoitring and survey purposes.

12. On the 20th I moved out with head-quarters and 160 of the 2nd Goorkhas, half battery royal artillery and half company sappers, five miles in the direction of Lal Jeeka, the village of one of Savoonga's sons, whose name it bears. The next day, after a march of seven miles, I attacked and occupied it. Naturally a strong position, it had been elaborately stockaded, and without artillery, could not have been taken without a certain number of casualties, had the Sylhoos defended it even for a few minutes. I thought, too, that it was advisable, if not absolutely necessary, to use the guns, for the sake of the moral effect they are likely to produce on the minds of these savages, who have hitherto been so ignorant of our power. Colonel Hills's battery was therefore brought into action, and at a distance of 700 and 1,000 yards, fired ten rounds of shell and shrapnel with a precision that soon put the enemy to flight, and enabled the Goorkhas to pull down the defences and enter the village without loss.

13. It being an object to economise the rations at Lal Jeeka, and to employ every available coolie in bringing up supplies on the main line, I sent back the artillery on the following day to Sylhoo Savoong, and on the 23rd returned there myself, leaving Col. Macpherson with orders to remain till he was rejoined by a company of his regiment under Capt. Battye, which had proceeded on the 22nd, as an escort with Major Macdonald and Capt. Tanner, of the Survey Department, to a range of hills about four miles to the north, and overlooking Bypari Bazaar.

15. Nearly a month ago, or as soon as we were in a position to show that the Sylhoos were not too formidable for us, and that such a step was not dictated by any doubt as to our ability to reach them, I pressed Rutton Pooea, through Capt. Lewin, to send a message from himself to the Howlongs, advising them to come to terms. The chief made the usual objections to do anything at once, and said he would open his mouth in counsel when we reached the Kloong-Doong, but I insisted on the messengers going, if only to give evidence of the futile efforts of the Sylhoos to oppose us. They started accordingly, but I learnt about a week later that an accident had prevented their reaching their destination. I urged Capt. Lewin to make the chief send again, and two more men were despatched, who so far fulfilled their mission that when Rutton Pooea and Subadar Mahomed Azim were on the way to the Howlongs after the failure to communicate with them across the Kloong-Doong, referred to in para. 10 of this letter, they met these men and some Howlongs returning with the child Mary Winchester, who was made over to the Subadar, and brought back by him to Rutton Pooea's village, near Demagiree, while the Rajah continued his journey, and has since reported that Vandoola and some other powerful chiefs have declared their willingness to give up all their captives. He expressed a hope that the rest would follow their example, and begged me not to invade Howlong territory until the 28th instant, when he would appear in camp. Taking the unconditional surrender of Mary Winchester as an earnest of their desire to come to terms, I thought it advisable to accede to this request. The date fixed has passed without his return; but, considering the extent of the Howlong country, and the slow progress of Kookie councils, I am not surprised that he has been unable, in so short a time, to get the whole tribe to be of one mind with regard to our demands.

17. It may not be out of place here to remark that the Loshais, or Kookies, for the former term, properly speaking, applies only to the family from which the chiefs of all the so-called tribes are descended, appear to me, in spite of their misdeeds, very far removed from the savages they are supposed to be. They live in comfortable houses, on high and healthy ranges. Their mode of cultivation yields the most abundant and certain crops. They are surrounded by pigs and poultry, goats and gyals (a domesticated bison). They fish and shoot, and brew both beer and whisky. Their domestic and tribal arrangements appear most happy, and altogether their condition contrasts very favourably with that of many of our own subject races; so much so, that I am not surprised to hear the majority of their captives, whom they treat as their own people, would look upon a return to civilisation as a doubtful boon. The men are of middle height, well limbed and fair, with the Indo-Chinese type of face. Most of those who have hitherto fought against us are armed with flint muskets, but I imagine a spear or javelin, and the universal dao, are the more common weapons; we have seen no others.

18. Mary Winchester has been forwarded to Chittagong, where she will remain in charge of the Commissioner until the wishes of Government are known with regard to her. She is described as a very pretty girl of six or seven years of age, with hazel eyes and good features. She talks nothing but Kookie, smokes a pipe, and orders about the Loshais with an air of authority which shows that she has been well treated.

19. I must bring to H.E.'s notice the very great assistance I have derived from the new system of army signalling with flags. On many occasions I have been able to send instructions to detached parties and posts at distances of ten and twelve miles, and to receive replies in a few minutes, which otherwise must have taken three or four days in transmission, and have given extra and trying work to the troops detailed for carrying orders. It appears to me that in mountain campaigns in this country the system of army signalling, when properly carried out, must be of the very greatest utility; and I venture to express an opinion that every British officer should learn it as part of his drill, and that an apparatus for night signalling, under a specially qualified officer, be attached to every expedition that may in future take the field.

20. With the exception of sixteen, unfit for work, the whole of the elephants with this column have been working regularly since the 22nd January, on seven stages along my line of communication. On this side of the Sahjuck roadmaking has been steadily carried on by the 27th Punjab infantry and the half company sappers which I placed at Col. Doran's disposal, and I am much indebted to this officer for the efficient arrangements made by him for opening out a good elephant path as far as Lal Shumah.

21. I have already explained, for his Excellency's information, the nature of my communications as far as Vanoonah's ghat, the highest point on the Sahjuck to which water carriage has been employed. In advance of that place eight posts are now established, at each of which a company of not less strength than fifty men is stationed. From these posts the necessary escorts for elephants and coolies, consisting as a rule of a section, are furnished. Each post is protected by a rough stockade of heavy timbers, and these have been efficiently and rapidly constructed by the sappers, assisted by the fatigue labour of the troops under the very zealous superintendence of Lieut. Hyslop, R.E.

22. The Commander in Chief will have learnt from my telegrams that cholera has occurred at Demagiree, and the stations below it. In nearly every detachment arriving at Chittagong through the Sunderbuns, one or two cases took place, the first being among the 2nd Goorkhas, and 3rd company sappers and miners, which troops formed the advanced part of this column. Amongst the coolies and followers despatched by sea route, I have not heard of a single case during the voyage. No serious outbreak, however, took place until the disembarkation of the Nepaulese coolies on December 7, when 297 men arrived, having lost fourteen of their original number since their departure from Dobree.

Subsequent to their arrival, there have been several outbreaks of the disease.

Every precaution has been taken to isolate all men attacked, and to prevent the spread of the disease, considerable delay and confusion in the movement of both troops and coolies being occasioned by these necessary measures; putting men into quarantine, who were urgently required in the front.

I am afraid that in the low belt of moist and thickly wooded country, extending from the sea coast to the first range of high hills, cholera must be looked upon as endemic, and I much fear that, despite all precautions, an occasional, though I trust not a serious, recurrence of the disease must be expected.

23. The health of the force in other respects has been satisfactory, though the change in the weather, the monotonous diet and want of shelter, added to the very hard work that both troops and coolies have lately been doing, are beginning to tell, and sickness is steadily on the increase.

In addition to the seventy miles of road constituting our main line of communication in advance of Demagiree, columns have gone over an aggregate of 200 miles to the right and left of it, and attacked and destroyed twenty villages, the jooms of which frequently lay at long distances from them, and the search for which had to be carried out with all military precautions, entailing severe exertions on both officers and men.

INDIAN CIVIL ENGINEERING COLLEGE.

FIRST PRIZE DISTRIBUTION.

One of the most fashionable and enjoyable "outings" of the season took place on Saturday, when a large party of ladies and gentlemen, mostly connected with the Indian Services, accepted the invite of the President of the Indian Civil Engineering College, Cooper's Hill (Colonel G. Chesney), to witness the first distribution of the prizes to the successfully competing scholars of the above recently established Institution. The party were taken down to the pleasant locality of the College, situated amid the sylvan scenery of Cooper's Hill, Berkshire, by railway, from Waterloo. On arrival at Egham, carriages were in attendance to convey the visitors along the mile and a half of picturesque road which leads to the College. Arrived at the spot, rendered famous by the poetical tributes of Denham and Cowper, the visitors had abundant opportunity for strolling over the beautifully kept gardens, and undulating grounds by which the new building is surrounded. The College has been established, under the orders of the Secretary of State for India in Council, with a view to the education of civil engineers for the service of Government in the Indian Public Works Department. Among those who witnessed the ceremony of the first annual prize distribution were Sir T. Erskine Perry, Sir H. Montgomerie, Sir H. Rawlinson, Lieutenant-General Sir Robert Vivian, Mr. Alderman Allen, Mr. W. Urquhart Arbuthnot, Colonel Chas. Chesney, R. E., and Mr. W. T. Thornton. The company, including a large number of ladies, among whom were the Duchess of Argyll, Lady Rawlinson, and Lady Vivian, having assembled in one of the large lecture rooms to lunch, the Duke of Argyll called on the President of the College to make his report on the progress of the students. Colonel George Chesney in the course of his speech claimed for this meeting the interest attaching to a first anniversary. The students of the College now in residence had, he said, completed one year of their course, and had still two years more to go through before entering the public service. Colonel Chesney read the reports of the examiners—Major Phillips, R. E., of the Royal Military College, Sandhurst, on surveying and drawing; Mr. B. W. Horne, late Fellow and Tutor of St. John's, Cambridge, on mathematics; Mr. T. H. Cottrill, of the School of Naval Architecture, on applied mechanics; Professor Duncan, of King's College, London, on geology; Mr. Madan, Science Master of Eton College, on chymistry; and Professor Dowson, on Hindustani. After referring to the most conspicuous student Mr. W. P. Brodie, whom he had peculiar gratification in recommending for the first public appointment from the College, Col. Chesney adverted to the scholarships which had been founded. The Secretary of State for India promised, so long as he should hold office, an annual scholarship of £30 for natural science, to be awarded to second-year students. An extra scholarship had been given on this occasion. Major-General Sir W. Baker gave on the same conditions an annual scholarship of £25 for applied mechanics, with an extra scholarship this year. A Cooper's-hill Endowment Fund had been raised by the civil engineers of the Indian Public Works Department, the income from which was already sufficient to furnish seven annual prizes and scholarships of from £50 to £30. Three would now be awarded.

The Duke of Argyll, who rose amid cheers, congratulated Colonel Chesney on the fulfilment thus far of the hopes they entertained that this would be a successful institution. Although they could not yet be assured of final success, he thought there was good promise for the future in what had already been done. It must be remembered that this was the first attempt at systematic education for any civil profession in this country.

The undermentioned students were the chief prize winners:—Scholars: In Engineering, on the Cooper's Hill Endowment Fund, established by the Civil Engineers of the Indian Public Works Department, J. Benton, A. T. Goodfellow, C. W. Hodson; Argyll Scholar, in Natural Science, C. W. Hodson; Baker Scholar, in Applied Mechanics, J. Benton. Qualified for the Public Service in one year, W. P. Brodie. Prizemen: Engineering, J. Benton, B. Parkes, ceq.; Surveying, J. Watkin; Geometrical Drawing, C. W. Hodson; Freehand Drawing, E. Penny; Mathematics, J. Benton; Geology, G. E. Coles; Hindustani, E. I. Shadbolt; Indian History, A. J. Chancellor. General Proficiency, B. Parkes (First Class in all Branches).

Miscellaneous.

INDIAN RELIEFS.—It is proposed that the corps to be brought home from India next season shall embark on the following dates at Bombay:—D Brigade Royal Horse Artillery, 15th November; 20th Hussars, 22nd November; 2nd Battalion 24th Foot, 11th December; 2nd Battalion 21st Foot, 15th March; at Aden, 3rd Battalion 60th Foot, 4th December; at Rangoon, 2nd Battalion 10th Foot, 8th January.

INDIAN APPEAL CASE.—SHEO SINGH V. MUSSUMAT MIRIAM BEGUM. —At the sitting of the Judicial Committee, July 20, Sir Barnes Peacock pronounced the judgment of the Court in this case. It was an appeal relating to the mortgage of certain villages of land, and a question which arose as to the redemption money to be paid, was connected with the Indian Mutiny and restoration of peace. The respondent claimed a much larger amount than the appellant alleged to be due. The Judge said their lordships would advise her Majesty to allow the appeal, with costs.

ENTERTAINMENT GIVEN BY THE BURMESE ENVOY.—On Saturday the Burmese Envoy entertained a large circle of friends on board his yacht, a fine vessel of 200 tons, built by Messrs. Palmer for the King of Burmah. This remarkably fine vessel has made the passage out and home via the Suez Canal, and is probably the finest seagoing yacht ever built. She is manned entirely by Lascars, and one has only to look at the trim and taut appearance of the craft to see what can be got by a smart skipper and good officers out of an Asiatic crew. The visitors proceeded by a Citizen steamer to the Royal yacht lying off Blackwall. A sumptuous breakfast was awaiting them, comprising the chef d'œuvres of the Burmese cuisine with the art of Messrs. Gunter. The yacht steamed rapidly down to the Great Eastern, now moored in the Medway, and returned after time had been given to the curious to thoroughly exhaust the treasures of the Leviathan. The envoy and his suite were on board, and seemed himself to enjoy the trip down the river, and the visit to the great ship out of whose hold had come the wires that have almost, and may yet, "put a girdle round the world." On the return trip a few speeches were made, in which the general feeling in favour of our honourable treatment of independent Sovereigns, whether Asiatic or European, was warmly manifested, and more than one public man advocated a generous recognition of a government which was evidently doing much to introduce to its subjects the highest works of civilisation. At eight o'clock the company returned. The assiduous diligence of the Burmese agent, Mr. Jones, was much appreciated by the company. We understand that he is likely to be appointed consul for Burmah in London.

ABYSSINIAN PRIZE MONEY.—The sum of £2,000 having been awarded by the Government for a gold crown and chalice captured at Magdala, the Accountant-general of the Navy has given notice that the distribution of the portion allotted to the men of the Naval Brigade who were actually present at the capture will commence on the 1st August.

MILITARY.—A question went to the India Office on Friday from the Horse Guards which may cause considerable modification in the number of Artillery retirements. The latest information we have been enabled to obtain was to the effect that twelve Colonels, twenty-four Lieutenant-Colonels, and thirty Majors would be retired. —Army and Navy Gazette.

BONUS FUNDS.—A military correspondent writes to a contemporary as follows:—"I think it likely that the following piece of news may not have reached you; and that, as it would be of great interest to several of your readers both in India and England, you may be disposed to publish it. I have it from, as I believe, a perfectly reliable source. The information supplied is that the Crown lawyers have now pronounced that the Royal Warrant of last year does not affect the bonus funds of the artillery and engineer corps of the late Indian army which have survived amalgamation, and that the officers thereof may continue as heretofore to receive bonuses on retirement. The officers concerned had reason to believe that these same law officers had given, some four months ago, an opinion to the opposite effect, and have thus been kept in a state of suspense and anxiety. Of course the decision leaves the officers of the corps in question in the same position in respect to the general bonus grievance as those of the rest of the Indian armies, with whom they may hope to share in any remedies which may be brought about through the action of the Indian Army Defence Association and the Bonus Committee."

THE SCIENTIFIC CORPS.—We understand that a despatch, dated the 18th July, 1872, was sent to India by last mail, directing that the distinction between junior and senior-lieutenant-colonels of the Royal Artillery and Engineers be abolished, and that all lieutenant-colonels be placed on the higher scale as regards pay and pension. We have been informed that Mr. Cardwell agrees with the decision of the Duke of Argyll announced in our last week's issue. The Secretary for War considers that the emoluments of officers in command of batteries are already so large that there is no necessity to give the Indian rate of pay to the first captains just promoted to majors, more especially as to do so would impose an additional burden of £50,000 per annum on the revenues of India. The sanction of so high an authority as Mr. Cardwell does not, however, alter the nature of the transaction, and we still adhere to the opinion we expressed last week. If regimental staff salaries are too large, they can be re-adjusted to the new rate of pay; but to make the scale of staff salaries a pretext for depriving unemployed and seconded officers of the pay of their rank is surely unjustifiable and impolitic in the extreme, and will, we are sure, add another grievance to the many already existing. —Home News.

THE KOOKA EXECUTIONS.—The following has appeared in the Times:—"I had not intended to address you again on the subject of the Kooka outbreak, but I have ascertained, beyond all doubt, that there is an important error in the Government despatch censuring my brother, and I wish to put the matter right. In that despatch a letter from my brother to Mr. Cowan, dated the 18th of January, is quoted, in which he is made to say, 'You have acted admirably.' My brother never wrote those words. What he did say was, 'You acted with energy and promptitude,' using the identical words which the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab had used in a telegram just received by my brother with reference to the conduct of Mr. Cowan. And at the time when my brother wrote those words he did not know that Mr. Cowan had disobeyed his orders. I need not point out the importance of the difference between these expressions, but what I do wish most strongly to insist upon is the gross injustice done to my brother in not having been called upon for any defence or explanation. If he had been asked for this, he would have furnished a true copy of his letter; but, instead of this, the Governor-General in Council (i.e., the Provisional Governor, Lord Napier) adopted Mr. Cowan's inaccurate version of the letter, and there can be no doubt that the word 'admirably,' which was a pure invention, weighed heavily against my brother. I have no doubt that Mr. Cowan made the mistake inadvertently; but why was my brother not called upon for his defence, in which case the mistake would have been rectified? —Your obedient servant, WILLIAM FORSYTH. Temple, July 16."

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF LORDS, MONDAY, July 22.—LADY MAYO'S PENSION.—The Duke of ARGYLL, in moving an address expressing concurrence in the Royal Message, recommending a suitable provision for Lady Mayo, stated that an annuity of £1,000 would be settled upon her out of the Imperial Exchequer, and a further annuity of £1,000 out of the Indian Treasury, in addition to a capital sum of £20,000 to be settled upon Lord Mayo's children. He paid a high tribute to the late Viceroy, whose character and services had, he said, produced a profound impression upon the natives of India.—The Duke of RICH-MOND seconded the motion, and bore warm testimony to Lord Mayo's heroic devotion to his public duties, and the universal sympathy felt for Lady Mayo. The Address was unanimously agreed to.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, MONDAY, July 22.—LADY MAYO'S PENSION.—The House went into Committee on the Countess of Mayo's Pension, and the message from the Crown having been read, Mr. GLADSTONE, without remark, moved a resolution granting to the Queen an annual sum of £1,600 to be settled on the Countess of Mayo.—Mr. EASTWICK expressed some regret that that the Prime Minister had not referred to the precedents and had said nothing of Lord Mayo's merits. He went over the precedents himself, from the time of Lord Clive downwards, which led him to the opinion that the Government had not gone far enough.—Mr. E. SMITH, as the last member of the House who had seen Lord Mayo alive, desired to bear testimony to the devotion with which he had worked, and to the success of his administration; and also expressed his entire concurrence in the tribute which the Government, rather tardily, proposed to pay him.—Mr. GLADSTONE reminded the House that when the news of Lord Mayo's death was received he and the Duke of Argyll had expressed their appreciation of his services. There was no precedent whatever for this grant, in fact, the Government, responding with alacrity to public opinion, had gone out of their way to create one.—Sir S. NORTHGOTE deprecated marring, by the introduction of any controversial topics, the grace of a grant which had not been prompted by the Government or Parliament, but by the whole people.—The resolution was then agreed to nem. con.

HOUSE OF LORDS, TUESDAY, July 23.—THE SLAVE TRADE ON THE EASTERN COAST OF AFRICA.—Lord STRATHEDEN moved an Address praying her Majesty to take such measures as are necessary to assist the cruisers employed in the repression of the slave trade on the Eastern Coast of Africa. He pointed out the extent and enormity of the traffic, but explained that his motion involved no censure upon the Government.—The Bishop of WINCHESTER seconded the motion, on the ground that Great Britain was thoroughly determined to put down the slave trade, and that great ignorance existed as to the amount of this traffic. It was believed that about 90,000 slaves were annually exported from the East Coast, and that for each slave so exported the lives of from five to ten others were sacrificed. There was good reason to think that we might within a reasonable time sweep away this great evil. If, however, we shrunk back from the work which our forefathers undertook, we should render useless their sacrifices, and bring back those curses the entail of which he had hoped was cut off.—Lord STANLEY of ALDERLEY urged some objections to the motion.—Lord GRANVILLE believed that the horrors of this traffic had not been exaggerated. It was right that we should take a leading part in putting it down, but it was also desirable that we should not act without the co-operation of the other Powers. Recapitulating the principal recommendations made to her Majesty's Government and the measures about to be taken in accordance therewith, he said he had addressed communications to the Governments of the United States, France, Germany, and Portugal, asking what amount of co-operation they were prepared to give, and had received satisfactory assurances in reply. Under these circumstances he trusted that Lord Stratheden would not press his motion.—The Bishop of WINCHESTER tendered his thanks to the Foreign Secretary for what he is doing, and hoped Lord Stratheden would not carry his motion to a division.—Lord STRATHEDEN declined to undertake the responsibility of withdrawing his motion; and on the proposal of Lord GRANVILLE it was disposed of by means of the "previous question."

HOUSE OF COMMONS, TUESDAY, July 23.—THE COUNTESS OF MAYO'S PENSION.—The report on the message from her Majesty relative to the pension of £1,000 a year to the Countess of Mayo was brought up by the Chairman of Committees, and agreed to.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, July 25.—THE INDIAN BUDGET.—In reply to Mr. ILLINGWORTH, Mr. GLADSTONE said that in the present state of public business he could give no assurance that the Indian Budget would be taken on the 2nd of August.—(laughter).

Spirit of the Home Journals.

THE SLAVE TRADE IN ZANZIBAR.

The Times thinks it quite certain that, so long as the present Treaties which regulate our relations with the Sultans of Zanzibar and Muscat subsist, we can take no effective measures for suppressing the trade along the eastern coast, and it is equally clear that we hold towards these potentates a position which would enable us to revise the Treaties that now facilitate the export of slaves. Under existing arrangements we tolerate not only the home slave trade of Zanzibar, but the export of slaves, within certain limits, to Arabia, Persia, and Madagascar. It is easy to see how this limited toleration gives an indirect sanction to the trade, and, at the same time, tempts those who engage in it to transgress the prescribed boundaries. There is a difficulty, however, in treating with the ignorance and obstinacy of semi-barbarous peoples and Princes, such as we have to deal with in Africa. It is not very wise, and it is scarcely moral to employ direct bribery, while we are reluctant, save in the last resort, to appeal to naked force. It is not always easy to hit upon a judicious mean. This, however, we hope Lord Granville, strengthened by assurances of adhesion from France and the United States, and even from the Portuguese Government, will lose no time in devising. The importance of strengthening the Consular Staff at Zanzibar has been considered, we hope, favourably, by the Government; and there surely could be no difficulty about apportioning the cost of this improvement between the Imperial and Indian Exchequers. India is deeply interested, not only in the political position, but in the legitimate trade of Zanzibar, which has shown in recent years such a tendency to expansion, nearly doubling itself since 1865, that the most splendid development may be hoped for when the fetters of slavery are broken. It is possible also that we may be compelled for a time to increase our naval force on the Eastern Coast, but any temporary outlay of this kind would soon be repaid by the permanent reduction it would make possible. The suppression of the slave trade at Zanzibar would enable us to get rid of an element in our expenditure which not only vexes the souls of economists, but excites the unfounded, though not unnatural, jealousies of foreign nations. We may leave to Lord Granville the task of devising means for obtaining the assent of the Sultans of Muscat and Zanzibar to a revision of the existing Treaties; but the suggestion which was made by the Committee of the House of Commons last year, and which the Bishop of Winchester supported on Tuesday night, does not seem, at a first glance, open to serious objection. If, by undertaking to meet an annual payment of £8,000, for which the former Prince is responsible, we can obtain his co-operation in suppressing the trade, this country would not be apt to consider the money ill spent. In any case, we have the power, and we surely are not wanting in the will, to persuade, or if needs be, to compel these barbarian Princes to compliance with the dictates of humanity. Although two powerful nations were interested in the maintenance of the West African slave trade, and offered a stubborn opposition to our attempts at its suppression, we succeeded by the cool manifestation of a firmness which could neither be shaken nor misapprehended. On the Eastern Coast we have to deal with difficulties far inferior, and civilisation expects from us that we shall again display the qualities which before insured success.

"CRAMMERS" AND COMPETITION.—A "Competition-Wallah" writes to the Madras Mail respecting a lecture on "Competition and the Indian Services," delivered a few weeks ago by Dr. George Birdwood in London, and on which we commented at the time. The writer says:—I agree in much of the speaker's censure of the system as at present practised; but there is one point on which he made a great mistake, which it is important to correct, because it may discourage many young men, who are not only qualified to pass, but qualified for the service . . . by competency. "The supply of young men for the Civil Service," he says, "is kept up by one of the tricks of the trade of crammers. . . . You must be quick and rich, or you have no chance." Now, I have heard this sort of thing said before; and I believe there are a great many people who would be glad to avail themselves of the opportunity which the competitive system offers of starting their sons in life, who are deterred from the attempt by this consideration. They believe that the services of a "crammer" are necessary to ensure success, and they cannot afford the expense. But I know by my own experience that this is untrue; and I shall be glad if you will help me to contradict the Doctor, and set the public right on the question. I am a Competition-Wallah myself, and I never employed a "crammer" in the course of my preparation, either for the open competition or for the subsequent pass examination. I am no genius; I am not particularly fond of hard work, and my father was miserably poor. It was not till I was fourteen years of age that I was sent to school at all. I then spent a few years at a small private school, where I learned a little Latin and Greek and French; and, being fond of reading, I read a great deal of English literature in my leisure hours. I subsequently spent a year at the university, where I attended the usual college lectures; and, for one term, I used to go twice a week to a "coach," who corrected my Greek and Latin compositions. At the end of the year poverty compelled me to leave the university, and for two years more I read by myself, getting only occasional help from a friend. At the end of that time I went up for the examination, and took in five subjects: English literature, English composition, Greek, Latin, and French. There was a very large number of appointments that year, and I passed in the first half of the successful candidates. The deductions I draw for the encouragement of others are that the examination is by no means so severe as is generally supposed; that the services of a "crammer" are not at all necessary; and that, with average ability, and no unreasonable amount of labour, any man who chooses to try may pass the examination.

INDIAN ARMY DEFENCE INSTITUTION.

The Committee of the Indian Army Defence Institution have to notify with regret that the illness and death of Colonel Sykes, who ever had the interests of the Officers at heart, have prevented the question of the Bonus being brought forward during the present Session.

Arrangements will be made for placing the question in new hands, in view of its being brought forward during the next Session. Officers are requested to forward their Petitions for presentation.

Blank Forms will be supplied on application to Messrs. HENRY S. KING and Co., 46, Pall-mall, London; Messrs. KING, HAMILTON, and Co., Calcutta; Messrs. KING, KING, and Co., Bombay; and Messrs. PARRY and Co., Madras.

Donations and Subscriptions will be received by the firms above mentioned.

The scale fixed is as follows:—

Donations.
Colonels	...	25 or Rs. 50
Lieutenant Colonels	...	4 " 40
Majors	...	3 " 30
Captains	...	2 " 20
Lieutenants	...	1 " 10

Monthly Subscriptions.

In India.		In Europe.
Colonels	Rs. 5	...	5s. 0d.
Lieut. Colonels	" 4	...	4s. 0d.
Majors	" 3	...	3s. 0d.
Captains	" 2	...	2s. 0d.
Lieutenants	" 1	...	1s. 0d.

Payments are, however, invited according to inclination and ability.

Should the Bonus question be carried in favour of the Officers, there will be a prospect of most Claims being satisfied, either by the offer of a Bonus such as the Officers of the New Line Regiments have received, or of an Annuity in addition to Pension, the commutation resting with the Officers, who, to be entitled, must have been on the Cadres of Regiments prior to the Amalgamation.

Support is also invited to the Institution, in order that the interests of the Officers generally may be protected with reference to the Henley Clause, or Parliamentary Guarantee.

All communications for the Committee should be addressed to the President Indian Army Defence Institution, care of Messrs. HENRY S. KING and Co., 46, Pall-mall, London, S.W.

DOVER COLLEGE.

PRESIDENT.

The Right Hon. Earl GRANVILLE, K.G.

HEAD MASTER.

Rev. WM. BELL, M.A., Chr. College, Cambridge.

TERMS:—

Tuition Fees, from Ten to Fifteen Guineas per annum, according to age.

Charge for Boarders in Head Master's House, £40, in addition to School Fees.

BROOKE HOUSE SCHOOL, BURY ST. EDMUND'S.

PRINCIPAL—MR. ROBERT CRASKE.

PROSPECTUS.

Mr. CRASKE desires to receive Boys at an early age—as soon as they can read well—in order that he may have charge of their Education from the very commencement of their studies.

Great care is taken that the elementary subjects are first thoroughly mastered, and that each Boy writes a good legible hand.

The next two or three years are devoted to Classical and Mathematical work; and Mr. CRASKE is confident that the best of his Boys will be found able, at the age of Thirteen, to compete successfully for the various Scholarships now open to competition at Eton, Harrow, Winchester, and other great Public Schools.

The Classical and English Department is under the direction of the Rev. W. A. OSBORNE, B.A., Graduate in Classical Honours of Brasenose College, Oxford.

Mr. CRASKE himself takes charge of Arithmetic, Euclid, Algebra, and the higher Mathematics. Each Boy, in these subjects, is under his own personal instruction.

The French and German Languages are taught by competent Masters.

TERMS:

For each Boarder ... 60 Guineas.

Those who remain after Thirteen ... 90 Guineas.

Years of Age ... 90 Guineas.

Day Boys and Weekly Boarders by Special Agreement.

These Terms include Drawing and Drilling. The charge for Laundry is also included. The only extra subject is German, the charge for which is Two Guineas per Quarter.

Mr. CRASKE considers it an essential part of a Boy's Education that he should be taught to swim. He has, therefore, constructed a Bath twenty-five feet in length, with warming apparatus, to carry out this object effectually.

There are three Vacations in the year—a fortnight at Easter, seven weeks at Midsummer, and five weeks at Christmas.

References are kindly permitted to—

The Right Rev. Lord ARTHUR HENRY, Lord Bishop of Bath and Wells.

WILLIAM EDWARDS, Esq., H.M. Bengal Civil Service, late Puisne Judge of H.M. High Court of Agra; Craigton, Inverness.

WHITE AND SOUND TEETH are indispensable to PERSONAL ATTRACTION, and to Health and Longevity by the Proper Mastication of Food.
ROWLANDS' ODONTO, OR, PEARL DENTIFRICE,
Compounded of the choicest and most recherche ingredients of the Oriental Herbal, is of inestimable value in Preserving and Beautifying the Teeth, Strengthening the Gums, and in giving a pleasing Fragrance to the Breath. It eradicates Tartar from the Teeth, removes spots of incipient decay, and polishes and preserves the Enamel—to which it imparts a Pearl-like Whiteness. The general demand for it at once announces the favour in which it is universally held.
Price 2s. 6d. per box. Sold by Chemists and Perfumers everywhere, and at all Bazaars.
* * Ask for "ROWLANDS' ODONTO," and avoid all others as cheap spurious imitations.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS
Are admirably adapted for the cure of diseases incidental to females. At different periods of life women are subject to complaints which require a peculiar medicine, and it is now an indisputable fact that there is none so suitable for such complaints as Holloway's Pills. They are invaluable to females of all ages, young or old, married or single. They purify the blood, regulate the secretions, give tone to the stomach, correct all suspended functions, and clear the complexion. The first approach of disordered action should be met with appropriate doses of these Pills; whilst taking them no restriction need be placed over the patient. They contain nothing which can possibly prove injurious to the system. They act by purifying the blood and regulating every organ.

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.
WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS. Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 500 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer,
Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.
Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d., postage, free. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, free. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, free.
Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS, &c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, free.

East Cowes, Isle of Wight.—A Gentleman's very attractive Freehold Marine Residence, together with excellent Stabling and Outbuildings, a beautiful Terrace, having a long sea frontage and landing steps, available at all times of the tide, and off which there is anchorage for a yacht; indeed, it is in every way adapted for the occupation of a yachtman or for the formation of a Yacht Club. For Sale with possession. Also, the East Cowes Pontoon Pier, with a Dwelling-house, Wharves, Landing Stages, &c., part let on lease, the residue with possession; and the Medina Hotel, together with three Dwelling-houses, and an extensive range of Buildings, known as the Medina Stables.

MESSERS. DEBENHAM, TEWSON, and FARMER will SELL, at the MART, London, on TUESDAY, August 13, at Two, in Three Lots, the following valuable FREEHOLD PROPERTIES, viz.:
Lot 1. The truly charming Marine Residence, known as East Lee, beautifully situated on the east side of the entrance to Cowes from the Solent. It is of attractive elevation, in the Gothic style, has a portico entrance, and comprises nine excellent bed chambers, a dressing-room, a bath-room, housemaids' closets, store-rooms, &c., an elegant drawing-room, opening to a handsome conservatory, a dining-room, a library, a vestibule, a spacious hall, a noble billiard-room, with aviary and lavatory. The domestic offices are very convenient, and include every requisite for a gentleman's establishment. The stabling department is of a very complete character, and includes eight loose boxes, four stalls, coach-house for six carriages, coachman's house, extensive storage, &c. The beautiful terrace, extending along the entire sea frontage, is an unusually pleasing feature in addition to affording great facilities in connection with yachting. Good hunting can be enjoyed during the winter months. Possession of this lot may be had on completion of the purchase. Lot 2. Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail, are—from Bombay, July 12; Agra and Madras, July 10; Calcutta, July 9.

THE Indian papers give further details regarding the disgraceful panic at Saugor, got up among the Europeans under the seemingly unfounded notion that great disaffection prevailed among the 40th Madras Sepoys. The guards were strengthened. Women and children were hurried off to safer shelter, and a station containing three hundred English Infantry and a battery of guns was thrown into the wildest confusion, because two dozen sepoy were found together in the Bazaar. A Court of Inquiry was being held at Saugor when the mail left. It appears that the regiment in question has for some time been in an unsatisfactory state, for this is the second court of inquiry ordered upon it in the last few months.

It turns out that the number of lives lost in the wreck of the Omaha was not seventy, as Reuter and the papers said, but only seven. The loss of the Rothsay, bound for Bombay, includes that of the captain and sixteen of his crew, nine more having landed safely from rafts. The crew of the Champion, which foundered off the Eastern Channel, have been picked up, and the same thing has happened with the crew of the Oriental.

THE same hurricane in which so many vessels were lost or injured, caused no little havoc at the small civil station of Balasor, about seven miles from the coast on the road from Calcutta to Puri in Orissa. The station, except a few brick-built houses, is said to be a perfect wreck. At a place called Bhudruk in the Balasor district, the cyclone was followed by a great flood from the Salundi river, which nearly rivalled that of 1868. On the road to Puri cholera is so prevalent that the pilgrims going to Jagannath's Temple have been warned against the danger.

FROM the Bombay side we learn the wreck of the England, a large Liverpool liner of 1,700 tons, off the Fort of Alibag, not far from Colaba. It seems that the captain mistook the fort for the lighthouse and battery at Colaba. There was no hope of saving the vessel, which was being dismantled and cleared of her cargo.

If the news telegraphed from Simla to the Bombay journals be quite trustworthy, Sir W. Muir is not likely to be relieved in his present office by Sir John Strachey before 1874. Meanwhile the latter gentleman is coming home about October to recruit his health, during the eighteen months or so which would still intervene between him and his destined prize. In the North-West Provinces there will have been general satisfaction at the extension of Sir W. Muir's term of office, for a more popular and efficient governor those provinces have never had, and the natives in general would regret his departure, whenever it may happen, as sincerely at least as his own countrymen.

FROM a Simla telegram to the editor of the Englishman it appears that after all no regiment in the course of the ensuing relief will be sent from Bombay to Madras. One regiment from England goes to Bengal, and the 107th Foot are ordered from Dum-dum to Madras.

FROM the Madras papers we learn that two of the men concerned in the recent murder of Mr. Man at Nga-thain-kyoung have been sentenced to death by Colonel Ardagh, and three others to transportation.

At a meeting of the Directors of the Bank of Madras it was agreed to recommend a dividend for the half-year at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum. The rates of interest and discount in the new Bank of Bombay have been reduced one per cent. all round.

At the last meeting of the Viceroy's Legislative Council at Simlah on the 4th July there seems to have been a warm debate on the Christian Marriage Bill, the final report on which was brought up from Committee by Mr. Hobhouse, who spoke at some length in favour of the amended Bill. It was opposed however by some of his colleagues, and the debate was postponed for a fortnight. Several minor measures were advanced a stage.

MR. H. L. DAMPIER has resigned his seat in the Bengal Legislative Council. A telegram from Europe has induced Mr. Ellis to give up his purpose of going home, and he has by this time resumed his post of Chief Secretary to the Madras Government.

COLONEL WRIGHT, C.B., has been appointed to act as Quartermaster-General during Colonel Lumsden's absence, so that the reported appointment of General D. Stewart was all a bad shot. Now it is rumoured that he will be offered a brigade command.

MR. J. S. CAMPBELL, of the Punjab High Court, has returned from his visit of enquiry to the Andamans, and was last heard of at Simlah, whither he had gone to draw up his report.

A CALCUTTA telegram states that ten more native regiments have just been armed with Enfield rifles. Only six regiments now remain to arm in like manner. So far good; but why not give them all the Snider?

A Times telegram of August 2 from Calcutta states that the Camp of Exercise in the Punjab will probably assemble early in January. In its sketch of the troops who will be told off for the Camp the telegram differs from the Indian papers, as quoted in our last Summary. The Camp, we are now told, will comprise eight batteries of Royal Artillery and two Punjab Mountain batteries, four companies of Sappers, two regiments of British Cavalry, five of Bengal Cavalry, one of Punjab Cavalry, the Guide Cavalry, six regiments of British Infantry, ten of Bengal Infantry, four of Punjab Infantry, and the Infantry of the Guides; in all, 30 regiments and 10 batteries. That is, three regiments and two batteries fewer than were at first reported. Which of these statements is the more accurate we cannot pretend to say. The telegram, being some weeks later than the newspapers, ought to be the better authority.

FROM the same source we learn that the Viceroy leaves Simla about the middle of October for Lahore and Sealkote, and goes down the Indus to Kurrahee. This is a capital move, which ought to be extended another year to Madras. It is good for Viceroys to get away sometimes from the official atmosphere of Bengal, and gain some personal insight into things as they are in the minor Presidencies. On his way down the Indus let us hope that Lord Northbrook's good sense will yet avail to stop the monstrous project of a narrow-gauge line along the Indus Valley and up to Peshawar.

ACCORDING to a Times telegram of August 4 from Barrack-poor the Calcutta Gazette announces that the Secretary of State has decided against giving inducements to officers to retire, unless from inefficiency or misconduct, when they will receive, in certain cases, the next higher rate of pension. Unemployed efficient officers of the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel may reside in England on English pay till wanted, counting time for pension and colonel's allowance. The latter part of the telegram will be no news to our readers.

ACCORDING to the Bombay Gazette some of the coolies who return home from the West Indies and the Mauritius bring good round sums of money back with them. One of these returned emigrants lately brought home as much as four hundred sovereigns in hard coin. Another who had gone from Calcutta to the West Indies, eight or nine years ago, lately sailed thence with his family for England, and finally took second-class passages for them all to India in one of the P. and O. Company's steamers. On landing in his own country he was still the happy owner of eight hundred sovereigns—a nice little fortune even now for a thrifty Hindu. These sums of course are not made every day, but most of the returned coolies bring home a pretty large amount of savings. That they are not badly treated in the places whither they emigrate may be inferred from the fact that so many of them overstay the term of their first engagement.

IN his masterly minute on the Administration of Justice in British India, Mr. Fitzjames Stephen recommends that judgeships should be thrown open to all instead of being reserved for the Covenanted Service. He thinks well of the educated natives who have entered the judicial service, and would gladly see the pick of them promoted to the higher posts, especially in the quieter parts of the country. But he protests with perfect justice against granting native officers the high salaries expressly designed for Europeans. His reasoning is so clearly and tellingly put that we cannot do better than quote his own words:—

I may here observe that it appears to me quite unnecessary to pay native judges at anything like the same rate as English judges or officials. An Englishman who adopts India as his profession has to be paid a large salary by way of compensation for the following, amongst other matters:—He has to live in an unhealthy and unpleasant climate; he has to leave his home for the best part of his life; he has to live in a very expensive manner, e.g., the expense of educating his children is greatly increased; he has to retire from active life far earlier than would be the case if he were in England, and yet at a period when it is practically too late for him to turn to other pursuits. The high pay which he receives in India is in the nature of compensation for all this. Is it not obvious that no one of these considerations applies to a native official? Yet native judges are paid in many instances as highly as an English Police Magistrate or County Court Judge, though living in England is far more expensive for an Englishman than living in India is for a native of India.

The arguments are obvious and trite enough. But it is good to repeat a truism however old, when the prevalence of an opposite opinion threatens to overpower and bury the old truth out of sight. It is wonderful to think that anyone's desire for formal justice should lead him into the wildly unjust mistake of placing the high native official on the very same footing in respect of pay as his English compeer, whose expenses are twice as heavy and whose market value is still several times as great. It can hardly be supposed that a native judge or collector would feel himself specially aggrieved at drawing somewhat less pay than an Englishman of the same rank, so long as he understood that reasons of State demanded the employment of many Englishmen in the Indian services. His real grievance, if any he had, would be the presence of so large a foreign element in the administration of his own country; but that is a grievance which must remain undressed while India continues to be an English possession. All we can do in that direction is to open gradually more and more of the higher appointments to deserving natives, without swamping the English element altogether.

It is worth noting that two former finance-ministers for India, in giving evidence before Mr. Fawcett's Committee, agree in condemning the Indian Income-tax. Mr. Massey, who himself had imposed a license-tax not wholly free from objection, declared that nothing on earth would tempt him out again to India as Finance-Minister, if the maintenance of the Income-tax were made the condition of his going. The natives, he said, viewed "with a dread and horror which he was hardly able to exaggerate, the erection of the machinery necessary to work the tax." Mr. Laing, who succeeded Mr. Wilson in 1861, would abolish the Income-tax as "a tax obnoxious to the people." Had he been responsible for the last budget, he would have counselled its abolition, deeming it "as obnoxious a tax as could be imposed in a country like India." Another witness, Mr. James Hutton, brought forward some telling instances of the way in which the tax has been worked all over India. In one case the assessment was entrusted to a chuprassie or messenger on four rupees a month, who entered or omitted names at his own pleasure. In another a Tahsildar in the North-West Provinces gave his victims the choice between paying him two rupees each or six to the Government, and he managed so cunningly that most of them preferred paying his private charge to risking failure on an appeal. Many a poor peasant has sold his cow for the purpose of meeting an unjust demand, while others, more obstinate, have been sold up on an order from the Magistrate. Extortion in short is a necessary feature of income-tax collections in India.

THE question which the Indian Government referred to the India Office, touching the legality of the bonus system in the Indian Artillery and Engineers under the Royal Warrant of last year, has been answered by the Duke of Argyll in a manner more distinguished by brevity than correctness of statement. His Grace informs the Indian Government that "the practice to which the Bombay Government refers is illegal, under the Act 49 of George III." If his Grace has never read the Act in question, he may be excused for repeating the stock assertions of Sir Charles Wood on a subject which official cleverness and legal quibbling have rendered needlessly obscure. We are fain to credit him with only secondhand knowledge on this point, for the Act itself speaks plainly enough to the most careless reader. It expressly provides that nothing therein contained shall apply to "any purchases, sales, or exchanges of commissions in his Majesty's forces, under regulations made, or to be made, by his Majesty." Now every English officer in the Indian Army held his commission from the Crown, and the Bonus System was established in the Indian Army with the formal sanction of her Majesty's Ministers acting through the Board of Control. If therefore the Indian Bonus System was "illegal under Act 49 of George III," we are curious to know what kind of practices are considered legal. But certain eminent lawyers, Sir John Rolt for instance and Mr. H. James, have even contended that the Indian Bonus System has nothing at all to do either with Act 49 or Act 33 of George III. In reference to the case of Græme v. Wroughton they express a decided doubt "whether there has been any sale or transfer in the sense contemplated by the statutes. Neither in letter nor spirit does the retiring officer sell or transfer his commission. He receives a sum of money which is more in the nature of a superannuation allowance than the price of a sale." That is a question over which lawyers are free, for our part, to split as many hairs as they please. Of one thing only we are quite certain; that it is dead against facts and plain English to say that the Indian Bonus System was "illegal under Act 49" or any other Act of George III.

LORD STRATHNAIRN has been following the example of his old comrade, Lord Sandhurst, by dwelling upon the wrongs of the poor superseded officers in the Cavalry and Infantry, whose pet privileges have been invaded by Mr. Cardwell on behalf of their fortunate rivals in the Scientific Corps. It is certainly very hard that the once favoured children of the Horse Guards should suddenly find themselves placed on a level with those who had hitherto vainly toiled after them in the race for promotion. What will become of the Service, when a mere artillery officer, who had nothing but his own brains to help him forward, is no longer to be heavily handicapped, while his rival who may have more friends and money than brains is allowed to carry feather weight? The list of line officers superseded by the new majors of artillery and engineers will bear mournful witness to the hardships of which Lord Strathnairn complains. It is a comfort however to learn from the Marquis of Lansdowne that in the return demanded by Lord Strathnairn he means to insert "another column, showing how many officers of the Ordnance Corps had been superseded by officers of the Guards and the Line." Even the suffering now inflicted on the latter can hardly match the case of an artillery captain, who, after twenty-seven and a-half years' service, was a captain still before the new Warrant lifted him a step higher. When the linesmen come to look on this picture and on that, they will perhaps learn to feel a little for the ills of others, however keenly conscious of their own.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Times of India argues, with apparent justice, that no retiring scheme that may be offered the Indian Army will keep up a steady flow of promotion in the Staff Corps, unless it be one devised for the future as well as the present. Liberal pensions to colonels and lieutenant-colonels would doubtless get rid of the present block, but unless some permanent scheme be brought forward the same difficulty will in a few years occur again. No lasting improvement can be expected in short, until a thorough revision of the present scale of retiring pensions has been carried out. Prices must have risen two or three fold at least in the last ninety years; they are rising ominously still; and yet an Indian officer of twenty years' service is expected in these days to retire on a pension of £191 a-year, without even the bonus he would once have got, because that sum may have sufficed his predecessors in 1780. Of course he will not retire if he can possibly help it on such a pittance, but hangs on to Indian allowances as long as he can, thus helping to clog the upper ranks of the service with worn out or discontented men. The correspondent in question proposes a scheme which looks fair enough. After twenty years' service he would grant a pension of £300 a-year, one of £400 after twenty-three, and of £600 after twenty-six years. Another hundred might be given for every three years up to thirty-five, when the amount would rise at a bound from £800 to £1,000. Surely some such plan as this is well worth considering, as a matter not only of common justice but of common sense.

LEAVE.—Under instructions from Government, officers proceeding on leave in India or to the Colonies, are directed in future to report their place or change of residence to the Adjutant gen. of the army. Officers on leave to Europe will, as heretofore, keep the Horse Guards or India-Office informed of their place of residence.

ABSCONDED.—The Calcutta Gazette contains the following advertisement:—John Foster Campbell, late extra assistant commissioner, in charge of the sub-division of Darjeeling Terai, having absconded, and a defalcation in the sub-divisional treasury having since been discovered, the Lieut. Governor directs that the said John Foster Campbell be dismissed from the service, and declared disqualified for future employment in any situation under this Government. A reward of Rs. (500) five hundred will be paid to any person giving information which may lead to the arrest of the said John Foster Campbell in India.

CENTRAL INDIA.

A REPORT as interesting as that on Rajputana has lately been issued from the press of the Indian Government on the Native States in Central India. In this report Sindia and Holkar, the chiefs of Gwalior and Indore, necessarily play the leading part. Sindia himself appears to have little relished the principle on which these documents are framed. The idea of lifting up the purdah which formerly screened the Native States from general notice, is not one which native rulers would readily cherish. The truthful pens of English Politicals might reveal things unflattering to native pride, and it is hard to uproot from the minds of native princes the suspicion that all this interest taken in their well-being may serve as a convenient excuse for easing them in due time of their dominions. To judge however from the present Report, Sindia at any rate has little to fear from the revelations of viceregal inspectors. He is depicted as an earnest and able ruler who keeps his word, listens patiently to his official guides, and deals fairly and considerately on the whole with his ryots. They are not screwed and fleeced at every turn, but live in general comfort under light assessments. Of Holkar on the other hand we hear little that is good. The people of Indore are described as groaning under his exactions, which touch all classes alike, the Thakoor as well as the husbandman. On one occasion more than a hundred victims of his oppression flocked into Augur, beseeching help in their misery from the Political Agent. This unhappily he could not give; and after returning at his advice to their homes, they were summoned to Indore, where more ill-usage was in all likelihood awaiting them. While Sindia is laying by thirty per cent. of his public income, Holkar is running more and more into debt.

Both chiefs hold their possessions under the settlement made by Sir John Malcolm in 1818, after the victory of Mehidpoor, in which Holkar was utterly routed. So great was the distress consequent on years of misrule, anarchy, and warfare, that Chiefs, Thakoors, and people "alike yearned for peace and the close of the reign of terror." No attempt was made to resist the new conqueror. Malcolm's settlement secured to each owner the lands he held, on the one condition of good behaviour. From that time the Marátha Chiefs, confirmed by British sanctions in their former conquests, have been accepted as rulers by the Rajput Thakoors. Three years later Malcolm wrote exultingly of the wide contrast between past and present, adding the avowal of his belief that the natives at that moment were probably happier than they would be thereafter. His name is still gratefully remembered by the people he thus served. That some of their descendants are less happy now than they themselves were fifty years ago, is due to the efforts of later rulers to set aside the engagements sanctioned by the Treaty of Mandisor. In this respect the present Maharajah of Indore has been sinning heavily for years past, encroaching right and left on the lands and rights of his subjects, whose forefathers we induced to acknowledge the Holkar rule. At one time it was hoped that Holkar would stay his hand, but it seems that his appetite "has been too frequently whetted to be appeased by mere discussion." General Probyn, late Political Agent for Western Malwa, follows his predecessors in pointing out the danger of the growing discontent fostered by Holkar's oppressive policy among his ryots and Thakoors. "There is not a Rajput house in Rajputana or Central India, which is not alive to the sufferings of their clansmen under Indore. The subject is discussed in every bazaar." Now, as in 1818-19, the people look to us as their ultimate rulers, and pray for our intercession. The very British garrisons which maintain order in Mulwa tend to encourage tyranny and oppression on the part of the ruler whose authority they appear to support.

Sooner or later, unless something be done by the Paramount Power to enforce on Holkar respect for treaty engagements, his people will be driven to despair. What is the Paramount Power to do then? Here we come upon the very difficulty which Lord Elgin pointed out ten years ago to Sir Charles Wood. When those, he wrote, "who have treaty claims to our protection, come to us to complain, and to ask our help—are we to say to them, 'We have too much respect for Holkar's independence to interfere. Right or wrong, you had better look up, for we are bound to keep the peace, and we shall certainly be down upon you if you kick up a row?'" Whatever answer may be given to such a question, lands us equally in a fix. Interference on behalf of the oppressed subjects would tend seriously to curtail the rights and powers guaranteed to their ruler. If on the other hand we scrupulously respect the right of the chiefs to do wrong, and suppress all attempts of their subjects to right themselves by force, we may find perhaps, as Lord Elgin puts it, "that it may carry us somewhat far—possibly to annexation." Whichever side we take in such a quarrel, we may be doing injustice to the other, for want of a clear insight into the causes of dispute. In the present case however it seems pretty clear that Holkar has placed himself in the wrong, and that nothing short of strong measures on our part will secure his subjects redress to which they are entitled.

Very different is the story told of Punnah, in Bundelkund, as ruled by its Rajah, Nirpat Singh, "whose death last year called forth the regrets of his people and of the Government of India. Before his accession in 1849, Punnah was "in utter darkness and misrule." He left it a model State. During his reign of twenty-one years he abolished suttee, reformed every part of his administration, carried good cart-roads over places where Banjāras with their pack-bullocks could hardly get along a few years before, encouraged agriculture in every way, and paid special attention to cattle-breeding. His diamond mines were worked with English machinery. Punnah itself was adorned with broad streets, good houses, schools, and public offices. In all this he was aided by an "honest Minister," who enjoys the affection and guides the policy of his eldest son, no unworthy successor to such a sire, whose death is justly lamented by his Thakoors and Zamindars.

The Rajah of Tehree, the chief State in Bundelkund, rules an area of 2,100 square miles, containing 200,000 souls. Among his Thakoors are the "descendants of the men of war for whom Bundelkund was famous," strong, brawny barons, than whom, says the agent, "I have never seen a finer body of men in physique." They are at variance with their Rajah, who seems unable to manage them. It is the old story with men of their class, for whom peace and order have few charms, and whose numbers are increasing on their paternal lands. In the little State of Sumpthur, with its 30,000 people on an area of 175 square miles, the servants of the State are paid by assignments of land, instead of money. Chirkaree, endeared to Indian rulers by its loyal conduct in 1857, is a thriving little State, with an area of 800 square miles and a population of 120,000. Dewass is chiefly remarkable for its spendthrift Rajah of the elder branch, who in four years has run through all his money, and well-nigh exhausted the forbearance alike of his bankers and his people.

Malwa and its opium are the chief sources of Sindia's revenue. In Malcolm's time the yearly outturn of opium amounted only to five or six thousand chests, consumed by Rajput nobles, Sikh and Maratha soldiers, and the horsemen of Mysore and the Dakhan. Now, as many as 37,608 chests are exported to China, while 20,000 are probably consumed at home. In Rajputana and Central India almost everyone eats or drinks opium, from the very infants to the grown-up men, who take it as regularly as their meals. "It is the stirrup-cup of the Rajput, and no visitor comes or goes without a draught of the 'Kossumbah,' opium in a liquid form spiced." Taken moderately, it seems to do no harm; but its free use by the nobles of Rajputana is thought by many observers to have long been undermining their bodily and mental powers. On this point however there is room for scepticism.

Spirit of the Indian Press.

A FEDERAL GOVERNMENT FOR INDIA.

The Madras Times observes that for a long time past it has been felt that the growing centralisation of India must be checked, and that something else should be tried. The Government of India takes everything under its charge and attends to everything itself. The old trading spirit is not yet worn out, and the officials, even the governors of provinces, are, in the opinion of the Supreme Government, required to be looked after, just the same as the lowest clerks in an office. Everything has to be referred to the head quarters of the Government, and the time that is thus occupied must be a great loss. Indeed, it is wonderful how the work of Government is carried on at all under such circumstances. All sorts of questions are sent on for reference, from the reorganisation of a department to the increase of a peon's pay. It appears perfectly ridiculous that such trifles should not be settled on the spot. If the Governor of a Presidency is fit to govern at all, and if he has officials fit for anything, they ought to be able to answer most of the questions that are now sent on for reference. What then ought the form of Government to be in this country? We think that a Federation should be formed, and the present divisions of the country might be taken for the purpose; for they probably would do as well as any other that could be chosen. The Presidencies ought to form a Federation with the Supreme Government overlooking the whole of the country. Some time back, the different Governments were told that they might manage their own financial affairs to a certain degree, but it was soon found out that this was a mockery, a delusion, and a snare. Managing their own finances meant simply paying the Imperial taxes without having anything out of them for local purposes. Money for these purposes might be raised by the different Governments in any way they thought proper, but they were not always to be allowed to spend it as they wished. The thing would be to let the local Governments almost, if not entirely, manage their own financial affairs. Each Presidency should be told what it had to give towards the Imperial exchequer, and then the way of raising it should be left entirely to the local Governments. They should also be allowed to expend the money that was necessary, the Supreme Government having a control over what was spent. This control, however, should be exercised very charitably when everything was going on well, but sharply when a blot was discovered in the administration of a minor Government. In this way, there would be a regular federation of the different parts of India, and the Supreme Government would not be looked upon as taking more power to itself than it ought to have. Each Government would try to do the best that it could for the people under its rule, and there would be a healthy rivalry between the different Governments, and each would make the best use of the power entrusted to it that it possibly could. The people would know those who ruled them, and would try to help in some way or other. They would feel that the Government was their own, and they, as well as the rulers, would in time take a pride in seeing that things were done.

LIFE INSURANCE BY THE STATE.

The Indian Economist thinks that if Sir Richard Temple would leave a mark upon Indian finance, he should take up the suggestion it has more than once made, and create a Life Assurance Department in connection with the State. As we have repeatedly pointed out, there are no vested interests to interfere with our doing so in this country. A department of this order would be an immense public boon, and a sure and prolific source of revenue. It is a terrible misfortune to nations that statesmen are so slow to adopt the simplest measures of reform. Within the last two or three years, we have seen two of the great life insurance companies of India collapse, to the ruin of numberless families, provision for whom depended upon their stability. But the business of life insurance involves no risk, and failure can result only from mismanagement of the grossest order, in competing with other offices and the reckless incurring of expenses that have no necessary connection with the business. Were the State to be—as we think it ought everywhere to be—the great Life Insurance Office of the people, its expenses would be purely those of book-keeping, where millions are now squandered upon the palatial edifices, the costly establishments, and the thousand arts of puffery of the private offices. Such a department within a very few years would yield an immense public revenue, while eventually, as the practice of life insurance spread amongst the influential classes of the people, it would give us a guarantee for the maintenance of public order and of the nation's loyalty, to be secured in no other way. Certain reforms, moreover, that are urgently needed in the business of life insurance, could be adopted by the State from the commencement. Thus what can be more unjust than the practice [followed, we believe by every private company] of declaring a policy forfeit for non-payment of the premium, when the policy has a surrender value? The surrender value of the policy ought plainly to be regarded as a fund for paying the premia as they fall due, until the fund was exhausted. Within the last few weeks Mr. Gladstone has announced in the House of Commons that the whole subject of life assurance by the State is under the consideration of the Chancellor of the Exchequer. The limited system of assurance which the Government had established had, he said, worked well, and although they felt reluctant to interfere in any respect with private commerce, yet “if the character of the assurance business was such that it was idle to dream of any effective control whatever by policy-holders upon the managers of companies, the time must certainly be considered to have come when it was the duty of the Government to examine with care whether they ought not to offer to policy-holders an absolute and simple security for the moneys which they invested, and for the promises held out to them, in the shape of Government assurance.”

NATIVE EVIDENCE.

The Bombay Gazette remarks that one of the greatest difficulties in the way of justice in the Mofussil is the reluctance of natives to give evidence, a reluctance for which the authorities are in a great measure to blame. Ask kindly, ask harshly, a native about a crime, and in nine cases out of ten the answer will be, “Mala tank nahee Maharaj.” He is induced to give this answer by circumstances. Let the example be taken of a case of housebreaking by night, that being the most common crime up country. It is a full-power magistrate and Sessions Court case, and witnesses in such cases are, after three or four days' questioning by the police, sent to the full-power magistrate to give evidence. The full-power magistrate happens to be forty miles away. They are told to be in his camp on the fifth day after leaving the village. When they come there, they find that the full-power magistrate has left the day before yesterday for another village twenty miles off. They trudge after him again, and meet him at last only to be told that their case will come on to-morrow, and, if it does, then two or three more days are taken up by his trying it. Then they are bound down to appear at the Zillah station for next month's Sessions, and, having received their two annas per day up to date, they start on their seven days' march home, for which seven days they get nothing. They come home, and certainly find something amiss; the barbari field not looked after, the red cow dead, or the children with the measles, and sometimes the wife away with a paramour. Meanwhile the month draws to a close, and as the sessions commence on the 2nd they have to start about the 29th to be in time. Arrived, they are told that their case figures as No. 7 in the calendar, which means that it will not come on before the middle of the month! Tookaram sits down and waits and sometimes weeps, when he thinks that rain might fall in the meantime, and that he will lose the chance of sowing his few acres with bajree in proper time. About the middle of the month his case comes on, and poor Tookaram finds himself in the witness box—in front the stern visage of the judge; on one side the assessors who, when awake, smile blandly and try to look interested; next to them the public prosecutor, who, as a rule, is afraid of the judge; and on the other side is the unlovable individual known as a Bombay vakeel, who appears on behalf of the thief or robber. Of course Tookaram takes an oath to tell the truth. And of course he does not do so as a rule, because he has actually forgotten one part, and he is frightened and confused about the other part, of the true story; and after being occasionally bullied into telling falsehoods, he, with cold perspiration streaming down his back, is permitted to leave the Court, and go home about the 20th of the month. Thus, because in an unguarded moment he spoke the truth, and admitted having seen the two Bheels in such and such a place, Tookaram is deprived of his liberty for four days by the police, seventeen days by the full-power magistrate, twenty-one days by the session judge, or forty-two days in all. This may appear a fanciful case, but it is the manner in which experience has taught people of Tookaram's class to reason, and their deduction is that it is better not to be a witness than to have that honour. Besides this great matter of delay, annoyance, and loss, the Mofussil witness also takes into his calculation the danger of revenge, and all these reasons combined, with the indifference he may feel as long as his own pocket does not suffer, render him all but useless to the police. With this important instrument of justice, the witness, so unavailable, it need not, perhaps, be so much a wonder that the police are often baffled.

ALLEGED MUTINY AT SAUGOR.—A Court of Inquiry is at present sitting at Saugor to investigate alleged charges of mutiny against certain native commissioned and non-commissioned officers and men of the 40th M.N.I. at that station. This is the second Court of Inquiry connected with the above regiment that has been assembled at Saugor this year. I understand that a strong guard of the Borderers, commanded by an officer, mounts daily; that an artillery officer is ordered to remain by his guns day and night, and that numerous armed patrols are sent out in every direction. Saugor appears to be well prepared.—Pioneer Correspondent.

A SEVERE WHIRLWIND.—At the last meeting of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, Mr. W. G. Willson, the officiating meteorological reporter, gave an interesting account of the occurrence of a whirlwind of unusual severity, which took place on the evening of the 28th of April at Alipur, a village about five miles S.W. of Satkera, which latter place is about forty-six miles E. by N. of Calcutta. The following epitome of the report on the subject, received by the Bengal Government from the Deputy Magistrate of Satkera, is published in the June proceedings of the Asiatic Society:—“The storm commenced about 6 P.M. It was preceded by drizzling rain and hail, and lasted from about ten to fifteen minutes. The general direction of the storm's motion was from south-east to north-west. The wind did not blow from one quarter only, but appears to have assumed the character of a whirlwind, scattering thatches and trees in all directions. The inhabitants of the village considered it as birbatas, air troubled by the fighting of two giants, and they described it as a column of smoke rising towards the sky. The area affected by the storm was small, being only one particular quarter of the village, but during the fifteen minutes which it lasted, it blew away every hut and tree within its reach. During the great cyclones of recent years all the houses in a particular locality were not destroyed, some were left standing, but this whirlwind razed to the ground all the houses it touched. As an instance of the force of the wind it is mentioned that a dinghy, capable of carrying fifty maunds, or more, which was lying in the Dhompottha Khal, to the west of Alipur village, was blown away along the ground for upwards of three hundred yards from the water's edge. The casualties caused by the storm were, three persons killed and fifteen wounded, seventy-six huts destroyed, and three head of cattle killed.”

THE OTHER SIDE OF THE QUESTION.—Referring to Syed Abdoolla's recent letter to Allen's Indian Mail on the Kooka Executions the Lucknow Times writes:—At the time when two religionists of Syed Abdoolla had successively committed treacherous and dastardly murders upon the two highest functionaries of State in India, it was, perhaps, somewhat natural in the Oriental professor to display his loyalty to the best advantage possible, as a set off against the suspicion with which Englishmen, especially at home, naturally looked upon Mahomedans. But Syed Abdoolla had no necessity of standing in England as an apologist for his race. Englishmen, both here and at home, know perfectly well that the loyalty and faithfulness of respectable and educated Mahomedans are unquestionable, and if certain men among their race are incited by fanaticism or fancied political wrongs, it in no way sullies the character of the community at large, for criminals are to be found in every sect and creed. And if Mr. Abdoolla wanted, for reasons best known to him, to defend his race and condemn the foul deed by which India was deprived of her ruler, he could have easily and more successfully done that, without traducing other communities, by quoting the pre-historic statement of a Governor, who succeeded a period of anarchy and misrule and had experience only of that class of men who hunted British Courts. Equally unhappy and ill-judged has been the letter of the Syed in which he supported the action taken by Messrs. Cowan and Forsyth, to punish the Kooka offenders. With a lamentable ignorance of facts Syed Abdoolla condemned the action of the Supreme Government—who know better than he can ever possibly do—the real state of affairs in the Punjab. The Syed's only pretension to a knowledge of Punjab politics and of the local native feeling is based upon the experience he gained while employed in that province, and it may be here remarked that the Kooka sect then hardly assumed any importance, for its development is of rather recent date. Mr. Abdoolla compares the Kooka affray with the rebellion of 1857, and gravely tells Englishmen at home that but for the prompt and vigorous measures of Mr. Cowan, no English life would have been safe in the land of five waters! The critical juncture, the magnitude of the outbreak, and the formidable force of the Kookas ready to break into open revolt are not facts but creations of the Syed's over-wrought imagination.

THE PANIC AT SAUGOR.

There has been quite a panic at Saugor during the past week. Some days ago we received intimation from a native correspondent that a guard had been placed at the Cantonment gates, that a public road near the barracks had been closed to the public, and that many other precautionary measures had been taken to meet some anticipated disturbance. We are informed that on the 19th ult. a detachment of European infantry with Colonels Redcliffe and Doveton, and Major Griffith, and a body of police with Mr. Inspector Garlah, surrounded some houses in Wardgunge where some ex-non-commissioned officers and men of the 4th M.N.I. had assembled. As no response was given to the demand for the doors of one of the houses to be opened, the doors were forced open by the soldiers, and about two dozen persons who were found in one of the rooms were taken into custody by the police. Of the number arrested all were released with the exception of five men, who were charged with being members of an unlawful assembly. The trial of the accused was to have taken place on Monday. As there was nothing particularly alarming about five men being charged with being members of an unlawful assembly, we refrained from noticing the circumstance in our last issue. We have since received some particulars of the panic which occurred last week. On Friday night two guns (the alarm signal) were fired, but shortly after Artillery men were galloping all over the station to inform the residents that the alarm was a false one, and those ladies who rushed from their own houses to others, where they thought they would be safer, returned to their respective abodes. The report that a portion of the Borderers was to be detached from this station to Saugor is entirely without foundation. Assuming the whole of the native troops in the Saugor garrison to be disaffected, the European troops there are sufficiently strong to coerce them; for there is a detachment of the Borderers about 300 strong, and a Battery of Artillery, numbering more than 100 men, and if those 400 Europeans could not hold their own against treble their number of natives, we would strike them off the roll of the British Army. We expect the result of the inquiry that is going on will show that a few discontented blackguards arranged to create a panic, and succeeded. As to Sawmy fighting us, we laugh at the bare idea.—Jubbulpore Chronicle, July 3.

SAUGOR, June 29.—Another panic. Two guns were fired about half-past twelve o'clock this morning as an alarm, because the officer on duty on the Artillery hill saw his own patrols returning! The Europeans turned out in a most excited state, indeed at present it is unsafe for natives to be out after dark. Who is responsible for all this? It has created a very bad feeling between the Europeans and the 40th; the former declare that guards would not be strengthened, and extra guards under officers furnished, if there was nothing in it. A sick man of the 40th, on his way to the hospital a few evenings ago, was arrested and confined, because he was found near the Artillery stables which lie in his road to the hospital. To treat a perfectly loyal regiment as if they were mutineers is the severest test you can put a regiment to, and they have stood it so far. It is to be hoped that the matter will be well sifted, for we have been living in a state of panic ever since these extra guards and such warlike preparations have been taking place; and the cause of it all?—Some one told some one, that some one heard some one on some day say something, and so on ad infinitum.—Correspondent of the Pioneer.

Miscellaneous.

MRS. BUTLER.—The widow of Lieutenant-General Butler died at Simla on the 26th June.

PUNJAB.—Cashmere advices state that there is cholera on the Bhimber route, and that travellers should take the Murree or Hazara route. The Banhihal route has been closed, and Cashmere authorities recommend travelling via Kohala, Mosufferabad, and Punch.

N.W. PROVINCES.—Mr. A. Gough, B.A., Professor in the Anglo-Sanscrit Department, is appointed to officiate as Principal of the Benares College, during the absence of Mr. R. Griffith on leave. Pandit Gaya Dutt will officiate as Professor in the Anglo-Sanscrit Department.

DON'T ALL GO AT ONCE!—Diamonds, yes diamonds, have been found at Simla. Reduced to its true dimensions the fact is that three small stones, but real diamonds, were found in some stream in the neighbourhood of Simla, which have been sent to the museum in Calcutta.—Pioneer, July 9.

DEATH OF MR. H. SPENCER.—We regret to record the death of Mr. Henry H. Spencer, the manager of the Mooltan Branch of the Punjab Bank. He had for some time been suffering from a most painful disease, to which he at last succumbed during the late hot weather. He was in the 49th year of his age.—Indian Public Opinion, July 5.

SIR MADAVA ROW.—Maharaja Holkar is said to have offered the Dewanship of Indor to Sir T. Madava Row, late Devan of Travankor.

BULRAMPUR.—The Maharaja of Bulrampur is about to establish and endow a school of medicine in connection with the hospital which his Highness has already built at Lucknow.

DENGUE.—This epidemic is spreading rapidly through Bickram-pore, Parjowar, and other places contiguous to Dacca. The infection was taken there through people suffering from dengue visiting these places.—Bengal Times, June 29.

A FRAUDULENT OFFICIAL.—A notice appears in the Calcutta Gazette of yesterday, dismissing Mr. J. F. Campbell, late Assistant Commissioner of Darjiling, from the Government service, on account of defalcations discovered in the treasury, and offering a reward of Rs. 500 for his arrest.

CHOLERA AT AGRA.—We learn that the total number of cases of cholera in H.M.'s 65th Regiment at Agra up to June 27 was twenty-five, of which seventeen proved fatal. Since part of the regiment has been in camp at Rambagh, only one fatal case has occurred there, when the camp was at once moved.

MAJOR-GENERAL D. STEWART.—The Pioneer has received news confirming our special telegram from Simla, to the effect that Major-General D. M. Stewart, at present Officiating Superintendent of Port Blair, is to officiate as Quartermaster-General during the absence of Colonel Lumsden.

BIKANIR.—The Governor-General has selected Dhandi Sing, a minor and a descendant of a collateral branch of the family of the late Maharaja of Bikanir, as heir to the throne. During the minority the State will be under the joint management of Captain Burton, the Political Agent, and Pandit Manphul, C.S.I., a well-known Panjabi official.

HALF-A-DOZEN OF THEM.—It would appear that we were mistaken in identifying the newly appointed Personal Assistant to our Finance Minister with Mr. Rivett-Carnac, the Cotton Commissioner. There are, we are told, six Carnacs in this country, sons of Sir J. C. Carnac, once Governor of Bombay, of whom the officer named is, we believe, the youngest.—Allypore Gazette.

BRAHMO MARRIAGE.—The new Marriage Act has already borne fruit, for Baboo Radhakanto Banerjee, a Brahmo, the son of Brahmins, has married, under it, Gunesh Sundari Sen, a lady who was formerly an orthodox Christian, but is now of his own faith. The Brahmin parents of the bridegroom have, of course, turned him out and disavowed him.

THE HURRICANE IN THE BAY OF BENGAL.—A Reuter's telegram received from Calcutta (on July 4) reports another shocking calamity which occurred near the mouth of the Hooghly during the dreadful hurricane of Monday. The ship Rothsay, bound to Bombay, was totally wrecked, and it is feared that the captain and sixteen men have perished. The cyclone passed over Balasore on the same day, and devastated the country over which it traversed.

INDIAN ARTILLERY.—The Allahabad paper gives the following as an authentic list of the officers of the Royal Artillery, late Bengal, whose applications to retire on special annuities have gone home:—Colonels W. Maxwell, H. Lewis, and G. Bouchier, Lieutenant-Colonels G. E. Voyle, W. K. Fooks, C. Cookworthy, G. Maister, C. M. Young, D. J. F. Newall, and E. Harrison, Captains F. R. de Bude, J. Hunter, G. O. Rybot, W. de Lane, E. Simeon, J. Presant, A. Gillespie, F. R. Butt, D. J. Welsh, and F. Fitzroy.

A CORRECTION.—Captain Thomas Presant, R.A., sends the following "correction" to the Pioneer:—Sir, My name appears in the "authenticated" list of the officers of Royal Artillery (late Bengal) whose applications to retire have gone home, published in the Pioneer of the 26th June; and as the statement is likely to mislead my friends and those who are interested in the scheme, I beg to inform you that, as far as I am concerned, your list is incorrect, and request therefore you will be good enough to insert this in your next issue.

ASSAM.—Favourable accounts reach us from Luckimpore of the state of the gardens. From the 28th May up to the 20th June there had not been one entire day without rain. The gardens are keeping ahead of last year in yield, and also in making finer tea; though it is feared that a continuance of rain will injure the low-lying estates. The amount of tea shipped this year is in excess of the quantity shipped at this time last year. One garden in the Luckimpore district has quadrupled last year, up to date.—Bengal Times, July 3.

THE GARROW HILLS.—A serious outbreak is reported by the Darjeeling News to have broken out amongst the tribes on the Garrow Hills, who have murdered thirteen British subjects. The reserve police force from Gawalpara has been concentrated at Tura, in the Garrow Hills, under command of the District Superintendent; and Mr. Barlow, the Commissioner, has paid a visit to Calcutta to consult with the Lieutenant-Governor as to the means to be adopted to punish the murderers. We (Englishman) have reason to believe that the report of the murder of thirteen British subjects by the Garrows is only too true. So far as we have been able to ascertain, however, the raid was entirely confined to the Garrow Hill District, and the alarm in Gawalpara and Maimansingh had, according to latest accounts, entirely subsided.

THE MAYO MEMORIAL.—We are told that a sum of Rs. 60,000 has been raised in Ajmir and Mhairwara, and the other independent states of Rajputana, for a memorial to the late Earl Mayo. The Maharaja of Udaipur heads the list with Rs. 15,000, Jaipur and Jodhpur gave Rs. 10,000 each, and Bhartpur Rs. 7,000. Colonel J. Brooke, the agent to the Governor-General in Rajputana, gave Rs. 1,000. The form of the memorial has not yet been decided upon.

AN UNWELCOME MORNING VISITOR.—A few mornings ago a cobra is said to have come into the tap-room of a tavern in Howrah, while its occupants were at breakfast, near whom it approached, raised itself in the usual attitude of attack, while scrutinising the place, &c., and apparently, not fancying the situation, made its exit by the back door into the yard, where it was killed, and found to measure nearly four feet in length.—Pioneer.

THE CALCUTTA VOLUNTEER RIFLES.—The annual report of the Calcutta Volunteers is in every way satisfactory, and the present efficient state of the regiment redounds highly to the credit of Colonel Walton. At the close of last season the total strength of the regiment was 582, of whom no less than 569 were effective members. That the regiment contains many first-rate shots is not to be wondered at, when the value of the prizes given last season was Rs. 4,370. The funds of the regiment are also in a satisfactory state, as the accounts show a balance in hand of Rs. 4,677.

EPISCOPAL.—The Bishop of Calcutta, attended by his Chaplain, arrived at Goalundo by train on the 29th June. The Government steamer Koladyne, with yacht Sonamukhi in tow, was in readiness. In the evening his Lordship consecrated the new cemetery. On Sunday morning prayers were said on board the yacht, followed by administration of the Holy Communion, the offertory being devoted to the Additional Clergy Society. On the first July, on the arrival of the rest of his Lordship's party, the steamer left at once for Gow-hatty.

URIYA LITERATURE.—From Mr. Martin's report on Uriya books and Uriya teaching, forwarded to the Government of Bengal, "it is now perfectly clear to the Lieutenant-Governor that even in the zilla schools of Orissa, Oriya is preferred, and receives more attention than Bengali." His Honour has accordingly placed at the disposal of the Commissioner of Orissa, out of education funds, the sum of Rs. 3,000, to be expended in rewards for the production of Uriya school-books on Arithmetic, Agriculture, Geography, History of India, and Letter-writing, and also for an Uriya Atlas, and an enlarged and complete Dictionary of the English language.

MAYO MEMORIAL FUND.—At a meeting of the General-Committee of the Bengal Mayo Memorial Fund, held at Calcutta on Thursday, July 4, it was resolved, on the motion of the Hon. the Lieutenant-Governor, seconded by Dr. J. Ewart, that the memorial should take the form of an equestrian statue to be raised in Calcutta. A number of gentlemen resident in London, consisting of the Hon. R. Bourke, M.P., Major O. T. Burne, C.S.I., General R. Strachey, Dr. J. F. Mouat, Sir Henry Summer Maine, K.C.S.I., and W. Seton-Karr, Esq., were invited to form themselves into a committee for the purpose of giving effect to the committee's wishes, and for the selection of a sculptor, &c. The appropriation of any surplus will be decided afterwards.

INVENTIONS.—The undermentioned specifications of inventions have been filed under Section 10 of Act XV. of 1859, in the office of the Secretary to the Government of the North-Western Provinces:—"Improvements in machinery for the manufacture of splints for matches: by William Judson Addis, and Vistnoo Ram Chunder Ranada, of Bombay." "Invention for a more economical method of burning bricks: by W. Bull, of Lucknow, Civil Engineer." "Improvements in galvanic batteries: by H. Highton, M.A., of Putney, in the county of Surrey, England." "Improved process of treating animal and vegetable fats or grease for the purpose of obtaining stearine and oleine: by A. Grell, Merchant of Odessa, Russia."

NATIVE CONSERVATISM.—A correspondent takes exception to the common statement that the people of India are averse to adopting improvements. He says:—"The native of Hindoostan is often accused of apathy, neglect of his own interests, and of an antiquated and obstinately conservative turn of mind, incapable of appreciating, and averse to follow, imitate, and adopt any of the customs or inventions of the Western people. The notion, though partly true, is not wholly so, for the natives have adopted many western inventions though in somewhat rude fashion. That they do not (as some would have them do) adopt more, is often not from any disbelief in their efficiency, but because knowing their own business better than their critics, they are aware of the impracticability of so doing. Many of our improvements are too far ahead of him and his requirements. The people have imitated more or less all their conquerors from the Greeks downwards, i.e., imitated any practices which they think likely to pay; but the native is never in a hurry. When natives refuse to have anything to do with a European invention or improvement recommended to them, it may be taken for granted, with tolerable safety, that the improvement is either too expensive, that he could not repair it if broken, or that it is unsuited to the climate—in fact, that in some way or other it would not answer his purpose. It, of course, occasionally happens that he ignorantly assumes the inefficiency of certain agricultural methods, &c., &c. This, however, is quite as pardonable as our greater ignorance of him and his wants, which we may be said to display daily, and of which the native, being well aware, is the more disposed to question the value of the advice and recommendations which we offer him.—Indian Economist.

THE COMING AND DEPARTING COMMISSIONER.—Mr. J. H. Morris, the permanent Chief Commissioner, Central Provinces, returned to Nagpore from leave on Saturday last, and Colonel Keatinge, V.C., the Commissioner nominate Assam, who has been officiating for Mr. Morris for two years, and who has become so very popular in that time, resigned his honours and his office to Mr. Morris on Monday last. A correspondent has favoured us with the following account of the two events:—"Nagpore, July 8.—This day's passenger train takes away from us—we trust for a season only—our late officiating Chief Commissioner, Colonel Keatinge, V.C. He leaves with the good wishes of all classes, and with expressions of regret at losing one who was, as our worthy chaplain happily expressed it at a recent burre Khana, "a jolly good fellow." On Saturday at midday Mr. Morris, our permanent Chief, arrived and was welcomed by a strong party of the Nagpore Volunteer Rifles, and the Civil and Military gentlemen residing here. He appeared very hearty and hale. The universal hope is that he has returned with improved ideas of the necessity for greater social intercourse than existed previous to his departure for Europe. All agree in thinking that he should use his "sumptuary allowance." No doubt he will; we sincerely hope so. Colonel Keatinge, as was his wont, invited all classes of the Nagporeans to do Mr. Morris honour, so that there was a good assemblage of native bankers, pleaders, merchants, &c., at the railway station; and on both sides of the avenue leading to the Residency were drawn up elephants, camels, and ponies, all gaily caparisoned. What with two bands playing, one belonging to the 20th M.N.I., a detachment of which was drawn up near the portico of the Chief's palace, sowars galloping, lances glittering, and carriages "like Iser, rolling rapidly," the tout ensemble was excellent, and Mr. Morris need express his thanks to the gallant gentleman he has just replaced; but now, the train whistles, au revoir.—Times of India, July 12.

WRECK OF THE "OMAHA."—Finding the ship going fast to pieces at ten A.M. on Monday morning, we lowered the two largest boats. I took charge of one with thirteen men in all, and the chief mate of the other with eleven men. In a short time both boats capsized, and three men out of my boat and four out of the mate's were drowned. The rest of us got on the keels of the boats, and after being washed about for some time in this position, we succeeded in righting them, and lashing two oars, which we had secured, across each boat, which enabled us to keep them on their keel. The water in the boats and our weight put them down so far that only our heads and necks were above water. The tide at this time was carrying us towards land, but turned at dusk, and swept us out again to sea. The flood made again in the course of the night, and at daylight we were washed ashore, after being sixteen to eighteen hours in the water. We sat down on the beach, and wrung out our scanty clothing. Then, being parched for want of water, wandered about the island in the hope of finding some human habitation. Having no shoes, our feet were severely cut, and our limbs were sore through being knocked about so long in the water. We had also to carry with us one of our men, who was nearly exhausted. We gave several hearty cheers, when, in about three hours, we saw a native coming towards us, who took us to his hut, and gave us water and some rice, and afterwards conducted us to the Lighthouse. We had to leave one half-dead comrade in the hut in charge of another native. After travelling ten or twelve miles through the jungle, having at times to swim across creeks, and hardly able to walk, we arrived at Saugor Lighthouse at about six P.M. on Tuesday evening, where we were most kindly treated by the Superintendent, who also sent a stretcher to convey the man left behind in the native hut. We remained at the lighthouse till Thursday morning, when we were taken on board the P. and O. steamer Goleonda, where we were all treated with the utmost kindness, and arrived in Calcutta, two of us only fit to be sent to the hospital, and all more or less injured.—From the Captain's Narrative.—Messrs. Finlay, Muir, and Co., of Calcutta, agents of the wrecked Liverpool ship Omaha, are attempting to raise a subscription of about Rs. 1,000 for the relief of the fifteen or sixteen seamen who survived the loss of that vessel. We are very glad to inform our readers that the loss of life on the occasion of the wreck of the Liverpool ship Omaha, off Saugor Island, is not seventy, as reported by Reuter, or seventeen as suggested by us, but seven. In a matter of this kind it is really too bad of Reuter to make such a blunder, when the true facts were at hand. We may state that the Omaha was a wooden ship of 1,171 tons, classed A1 at Lloyds.

PASSENGERS DEPARTED.

Per str. Himalaya.—From CALCUTTA.—For BOMBAY.—Mr. W. Howie.
Per str. Abyssinia.—From CALCUTTA.—For AKYAB.—Mr. and Mrs. Bryson.

IMPORTS.—CALCUTTA, July 9.—Transactions are on a very limited scale, and in some description of goods a decline of one anna has been submitted to. Twist quiet.

EXPORTS.—CALCUTTA, July 9.—Jute: A large business has been done, but prices have again declined. Sultpêtre: A slight fall has taken place, which would have been greater, but for the small supplies. Linned: Dull; but no actual decline can be quoted. Raw Silk: The business reported since our last has been 90 bales D. K. Centrically, Asia, Birmah, and from 17-8 to 16.

MONEY MARKET.—CALCUTTA, July 9.—Exchange: The demand continues unusually small, with no immediate prospect of improvement.

Madras.

MR. HANNAY.—The Government of India have presented Mr. Inspector Hannay, of the Barma Police, with a rifle, with a suitable inscription engraved on a silver plate fixed to it, for his gallant conduct in following up and defeating a large body of Shendu raiders in the Arakan hill-tracts in February last.

CIVIL.—A Madras contemporary learns from Trichinopoly that Mr. McC. Webster, the Acting Collector, has been ordered home without delay on sick certificate for two years. His successor is to be, we believe, Mr. J. P. Pennington, the present Acting Collector of Madras.

THE ACTING CHIEF COMMISSIONER FOR BURMAH.—Mr. Eden left on Wednesday in H.M.S. Daphne for Moulmein. We understand that General Blake, commanding the Pegu Division, will also leave shortly for Moulmein. The gallant General has been very much prostrated by dengue fever, but we hope the sea air on this short trip, and the pleasant scenery of his old station, will restore him to his wonted health.—Rangoon Mail, June 22.

BURMAH.—The King of Burmah appears to be in a bad way. A Mandalay correspondent of the Rangoon Mail, writing on the 13th June, says:—"The King has taken the death of his Queen very much to heart; she was his first love, and he married her when he was only a prince. He sees no one at present, and is said to gaze upon skulls, whilst pondering on the vanities of life. I hope he is not going mad. The late Queen's food is placed for her daily, and she is not spoken of as dead, but sleeping."

MEDICAL COLLEGE.—The Madras Medical College had its anniversary on the 4th of this month; Mr. Justice Holloway presided. The college showed real progress during the year. There are plenty of students, and the report, as Mr. Holloway pointed out, bears the stamp of sincerity, and shows the exact work done during the year. If a student is dismissed for incompetency the fact is mentioned. A clear statement of the institution is given, and nothing is kept back. The address, which was a very able one, was delivered by Professor Brockman. The number of prizes given away was very large, as some of the students carried off five or six.—Madras Times, July 10.

MR. ELLIS.—The Chief Secretary to Government, Mr. Ellis, left Madras last week for Europe, but hearing at Bombay of the death of his mother, Lady Ellis, he will shortly return to Madras and resume his duties as Chief Secretary to Government. Mr. Carmichael, who was to have taken up the duties of Chief Secretary to Government in the Revenue Department, is laid up with fever, and has not been able to proceed to Ootacamund. There will be no occasion for him to go up now Mr. Ellis is going to return. The Commander-in-Chief is still suffering from a sore eye, and Mr. J. D. Sim has been stopping for some time at Coonoor, on account of the sickness of his youngest child, so that the Government at Ooty is very weak at the present time.—Madras Times, July 10.

THE ARGYLL DESPATCH.—Our readers will see from the opening passage of our London letter that the remonstrance addressed to the Home Government by the public of Madras is meeting with due consideration. The Madras memorial had not at the date of that letter reached the India Office, but the newspaper reports of the proceedings seem to have been sufficient to induce her Majesty's Government to take the matter into their "serious consideration." Our correspondent has interested himself sufficiently in the matter to see the Duke of Argyll on the subject, and though of course he could expect no distinct revelations, the Duke's manner impressed him with the belief that the sting will in some way be taken out of the obnoxious despatch, so far as Europeans are concerned. We believe that our correspondent is shortly to see Mr. Grant Duff and Sir John Kaye on the subject, and it is possible that these gentlemen may then be in a position to speak more definitely as to the operation which it is intended that the despatch should have. It is evident that the hearty indignation expressed in this part of India has met with sympathy and support at home, and that it is likely to have a beneficial effect upon the prospects of Europeans and East Indians in India.—Madras Times.

PEARLS IN THE CHILKA.—Pearl oysters have been found in the Kari Gadda Creek at the entrance of the Chilka Lake in Ganjam.

THE FORGERY OF GOVERNMENT NOTES.—If anything more has been found out with regard to the forged notes it has not become known yet. Notes, coin and jewellery were found on the man arrested at Negapatam to the value of more than two lakhs of rupees, which is rather a good haul. There is a report that the man has made a clean breast of it and named all those who are implicated in the affair, and it is thought that there are a good many thus concerned. It is thought that there are ramifications throughout the whole of India, and that not only are natives mixed up in the matter, but that the names of Europeans will also appear. But this is not the only forgery case on hand. Poona can also boast of the same thing. It appears that there was a regular manufactory of notes at that place and three of the firm went down to Bombay to dispose of their wares, and there fell in with a person whom they took to be a Parsee gentleman, but who turned out to be a Police Inspector. After some negotiations, the Inspector agreed to buy Rupees 14,000 worth of notes. But instead of paying for them, he turned round, and arrested the principal person concerned. The others made their escape and have not yet been caught. The Bombay notes were much better executed than the Madras notes. The Acting Deputy Commissioner of Police went to Poona to catch the heads of the firm, but the telegraph had been put in requisition, and when he arrived everything suspicious had been destroyed or removed. The police were not sharp enough to use the telegraph. They left it free to the forgers and their friends to use as they thought proper, and we fancy the same blunder has been committed by the Madras Police.—Madras Times.

Bombay.

A PERILOUS VOYAGE.

The ship William Fairbairn, which arrived in Bombay harbour on Tuesday evening, experienced most remarkably bad weather on her voyage out from Liverpool. She got so knocked about as to be obliged to put into Mauritius to refit. The bad weather commenced on the 13th February in lat. 19 deg. 2 min. E., long. 64 deg. 40 min. E. On the 13th February the foretop and back stays were carried away. All sail was taken in. A high sea was running, and breaking occasionally over the vessel. The tarpaulin battens of the main hatch were washed overboard. Barometer 29.70. On the 14th the gale had increased considerably, accompanied with a heavy cross sea, the vessel shipping large quantities of water, and labouring and straining heavily. At 11.30 P.M. two tremendous seas came on before a squall. The first passed the ship all right, but the second came straight over her stern, knocking everything before it. It swept the poop, carrying away the poop rails, the steering gear, the wheel and skylight, in fact, everything on the poop deck. The two men at the wheel and the officer of the watch were washed right into the fore part of the vessel. The binnacle and compasses were smashed, and three boats carried away. The same sea entered the cabin, washing away all the ship's stores and all the private effects of the captain and officers, including the navigation implements. The house on the main deck was much damaged, and the oils and paints washed all about the decks. The after hatch was stove in, a large quantity of water going down the after hold. After the confusion had a little subsided and the crew could get aft, the tiller was lashed down, and the ship's yards braced to the wind. An attempt was made to take in sail, but it blew away. The ship was rolling fearfully. Luckily no lives were lost, but several of the crew, including the chief officer, were hurt—not seriously. At 8 A.M. the fore topgallant mast, with all its gear, went over the side. All hands were set to work to pump the water out of the ship, as a good deal of the sea which she had shipped had got down into the hold. At noon the pumps were still hard at work, the ship rolling heavily, causing the foretopmast and foremast and all their gear to go over the side, and the jibboom with them. The wreck was cleared away from the side of the ship to prevent it knocking a hole in her. On the 15th the gale still continued harder than ever, the vessel shipping large quantities of water. The main topgallant mast rolled over the side, and at 4 P.M., the main top mast was cut away, to try and save the main mast, as it was so shaky that it was expected to go by the board every minute. At about 7 P.M., the mast broke clean in two and went over the starboard side, carrying away with it all gear. The wreck was got clear as quickly as possible, during a most terrific gale, with a tremendous sea, the barometer falling suddenly to 28.70. About midnight the mizen mast fell over the stern on to the poop deck; smashing it, and the cross jack yard going clean through it. The wind shifted suddenly round from the S.E. to N.W., which way they could not tell, as they had no compass, no lights, and the weather was very thick. Some sails were nailed over the decks, which were all cut and strained, to prevent the water going down the hold. On the 16th the gale moderated slightly, and at 10 A.M. the barometer had gone up to 28.90. The pumps were all choked. On the 17th a spare top gallant mast was rigged up at the main for a jury mast. The pumps were examined and found to be choked up with coal dust and small coal, and after being cleaned they were set to work. A staysail and square sail were rigged up on the jurmast, the gale continuing to decrease. Lat. 18 deg. 22 S., long. 61 deg. 15' E. On the 18th, Sunday, a spare topmast was got up as a jury foremast, a jib was set and the mast made secure. The water in the hold was pumped out. On the 21st of February the vessel arrived at Mauritius, almost a complete wreck, having lost all her masts and suffered considerably in every respect. After refitting completely, she left there on the 11th of June, and arrived there on Tuesday last, having had favourable weather all the way. The captain reports that several other ships suffered considerably in the same hurricane, and one lost ten hands overboard. Three or four ships arrived from Bourbon to refit during the stay of the William Fairbairn there, all having been in the same hurricane.—Times of India, July 12.

STATION TALK.

JACOBABAD, June 25.—The Khan of Khelat has broken his word of honour given to the British Government and to the Sirdars at Jacobabad. The Sirdars, having handed over to the Khan all their plunder, expected that he should, as agreed upon, return to them their hereditary lands. They were for a good fortnight or more put off from day to day, but last Tuesday or thereabouts they demanded their lands, and the Khan refused giving them up, saying—"They do not belong to you; your grandfathers held them for Nusseer Khan, but I do not want petty rulers and Khans in my territories, I am the paramount authority and I am the Khan." The Sirdars left him quite enraged and sought the advice of the Wuzzeer, and in fact demanded him to ratify the terms of the treaty as he was the responsible representative of the Khan at Jacobabad. The Wuzzeer went and advised the Khan to abide by the terms of the treaty; said that the Sirdars have most faithfully abided by that portion concerning themselves; and pointed out that by not adhering to the treaty he would disgrace Merewether Sahib, who did his best for him and brought about this peace and quietness; and would the Khan now prove ungrateful to every one? The Khan stopped him from saying anything more and ordered his attendants to strike him down. Luckily for the Wuzzeer the attendants refused to obey the Khan and he made his escape from the palace. The Khan has sworn to deprive him of his life within seven days. The Khan will not even listen to the Political Agent. The Sirdars asked the Political Agent to interfere, and said that should he refuse or be unable to see that their demands were settled they would attack his camp. Major Harrison has written to ask that his escort be strengthened, and the Commissioner in Sind has ordered the authorities here to send by double marches one company of Jacob's Rifles under the command of a European officer. The Shikarpoor courtship in-a-grave-yard case was decided on the 17th in favour of the defendant. The love-letter written to him by Mrs. Peters was found to be minus the envelope in the Sessions Court. It appears impossible to say how it made its disappearance. The committing magistrate was called in to prove that there was an envelope, and that envelope was sent with the other exhibits to the Sessions Court. It is necessary that a strict enquiry should be made as to how this envelope took wings, as it was the only evidence to prove that the letter was addressed to the accused.

July 4.—The Khan continues stubborn, and refuses Major Harrison's advice. Major Harrison has been ordered to leave Khelat if the Khan continues intractable. The Wuzzeer is under British protection. It is reported that Moola Mahomed is collecting forces. Anarchy is imminent.—Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

MHOW.—We learn from Mhow, under date July 7, that during the last few days the heat has been very great, and that if the weather continues without change, some injury will be done to the crops.

MARCH OF FEMALE INTELLECT.—Another native lady at Bombay has appeared as an authoress. This time it is a Hindu lady, Bai Mangla Gavri, a pupil of the female normal school. The work is a Gujarathi Catechism of Geography.

NAVAL MOVEMENTS IN THE GULF.—H.M.S. Briton, lately the Admiral's flagship here, left Muscat for Aden on the 20th June, to relieve the Wolverine. The Vulture and Bullfinch have, we understand, proceeded to Bussorah in consequence of the recent outrage upon the Cashmere.

AN OFFICER DROWNED AT SUKKUR.—We regret to learn, by a special telegram from Sukkur, that Lieutenant Pidden, R.E., was drowned in the river Indus, on Wednesday night, between Bukker and Rorre, by the upsetting of a boat. Up to yesterday morning the body had not been recovered.—Times of India, July 12.

THE P. AND O. COMPANY.—The P. and O. Company have now determined to run their steamers to Venice, instead of terminating the voyage at Brindisi, as has hitherto been the case. This will be good news to travellers whose leave is limited, and who would not, under the old arrangement, be able to gratify that longing which all must feel to visit the "glorious City in the Sea."—Times of India.

TIMELY LARGESS.—We are able to announce with much gratification that our worthy citizen Sir Cowasjee Jehangeer, K.C.S.I., has presented Rs. 2,000 to be distributed among certain Christian charities in this city. This, of course, is in addition to and separate from the £200 presented by him to the London Fever Hospital, as a thanksgiving for the recovery of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales.

MUNICIPAL.—Mr. H. B. Viccajee, late collector of taxes to the municipality, whose forced resignation of that office by Mr. Hope for having become security for a loan of Rs. 10,000 to Mr. Arthur Crawford has created a good deal of talk during the past month, has been provided for by Government. He has, we hear, been appointed Deputy Collector of Sattara, where he succeeds the late Mr. Dababhy Cowasjee.—Times of India.

THE SINDH FRONTIER.—The Bombay Argus, writing on the discouraging aspect of affairs on the Sind frontier, has the following:—"The Commissioner in Sind has ordered the authorities at Jacobabad to send, by double marches, one company of Jacob's Rifles under the command of a European officer. This is the end of the fine promises made a few months since to Sir W. Merewether on behalf of the Khan, and which it is much to be regretted Sir William believed for a moment would be performed. What could have induced the Commissioner in Sind, with his extensive experience, to believe in such empty protestations as those made by the Khan of Khelat is at present inexplicable. Perhaps now Sir William will believe that the Jam of Lus Beyla is a better and more important man than he has been hitherto regarded. The cloud is now no bigger than a man's hand on the Sind frontier, but the horizon looks threatening."

NATIVE ENGLISH.—A correspondent of the Indian Statesman says that the following is an exact copy of a petition lately presented to a Government official by a native in want of employment:—"To the Collector of Zillah—B Most Respected Sir.—The humble petition of Krishnarao, Shastree and Pandit, inhabitant of—Most Respectfully Sheweth—The undersigned your poor petitioner most humbly prays to your honour to read this petition by your honour's accustomed patience, and to confer upon the petitioner the place asked for. The petitioner is well educated in these languages as are undermentioned Canarese, Marathi, Hindustani, and English, besides these he can talk and read Persian and Sanscrit in a pretty fair way. It is very wonderful and commendable memory he has, that he commences eight actions at once and takes them to be finished by the master's hand, in order to show his ability to the great people for their satisfaction and entertainment. He can translate from English into vernacular languages very correctly; and from vernacular into English the same. He can serve in any service as he is one of the good servants, and also he can perform the official duty whatever it may be. The certificates which he was received from for his good character and learned being lost them unfortunately in the Krishna river, still he is ready to satisfy in need of what is your honour's favour. The petitioner is waiting with a constant guard for your honour's. The petitioner is appended herewith a specimen of English composition by which your honour will come to know whether he is learned or not."

Official Papers.

THE MADRAS HARBOURS.

The following is the resolution of the Government of Madras on Mr. Robertson's report on the Madras harbours:—

The Government have already expressed to Mr. Robertson, through the Government of India, their appreciation of his valuable report on the harbours of the Madras Presidency, and now proceed to pass the necessary orders thereon.

The only two harbours at which important works are recommended are Mangalore and Cochin, both well known to the Chief Engineer, and the Government fully concur in the recommendations made by him, in the memorandum herewith appended, for carrying into effect Mr. Robertson's views with some slight variation.

A sum of Rs. 7,000 from Port Funds is accordingly placed at the disposal of the superintending engineer of the 7th division for collection of materials during the monsoon, and construction of a training groyne at the Goorpoor gap immediately after it; and he will submit complete estimates of the total probable cost of closing the gap in time to admit of the work being done some months before the monsoon of 1873, so that the deposit between the gap and the harbour mouth shall be acted on by the current of the Goorpoor river, and the danger of monsoon floods caused by the same diminished as much as possible.

As stated in Col. Walker's memorandum, and detailed in papers accompanying G.O. No. 1,125 of May 2, all Mr. Robertson's suggestions as to protective works at Cochin, Vypeen, and Cruz Milagre have already been acted upon by the superintending engineer of the 7th division. Lieut. col. Farewell will in due course proceed to supply the detailed drawings and estimates for the works intended by Mr. Robertson nearly to double the depth of water over Cochin bar. The Government are unable just now to carry out Col. Walker's suggestion of instituting a Cochin and West Coast Canal range, but order the following arrangements to be made, as the best means available for the strengthening the hands of the Palghat and Mangalore range officers, namely, the transfer of Supervisor Vyapoory Pillay, now under orders for Coondapoor range, to the Palghat range, of which he can take charge, freeing Asst. engineer Grime for the Cochin work, and the promotion of Overseer De Mello to rank of supervisor, v. Cowley, dismissed, and his posting to the Coondapoor range, now held by Assistant engineer Pringle in addition to his own.

Of the minor works of improvement suggested by Mr. Robertson for Cannanore and Beypore, the superintending engineer of the 7th division will be good enough to submit plans and estimates.

The attention of the Master Attendant at Madras (administrative department) is called to the requirements of the port of Calicut, to which he will be so good as to attend, reporting when they shall have been met.

The subject of inland water communication along the West Coast will be disposed of separately at a later date, in connection with a scheme now before Government, involving its development by private enterprise.

Looking at the character of the bay into which the Paumben passage opens, as well as the tortuous nature of the channel, Mr. Robertson reports that it would be out of all question to attempt to make the pass fit for large ships; or, indeed, deeper than twelve feet at low water of spring tides. The attention of the superintending engineer of the 8th division is called to Mr. Robertson's remark that the season was being lost for blasting operations for want of a regular supply of powder; and Mr. Dalrymple is requested to report on the character and cost of the lights stated to be required at Point Calimere and the Crocodile Rock.

The remarks in page 53 on one, if not two, safe and commodious anchorages, close to the locality of the new ship canal between India and Ceylon, proposed by Sir James Elphinstone, are full of interest.

The superintending engineer of the 6th division will have plans and estimates prepared for lengthening the pier at Negapatam 150 feet beyond monsoon low water line, for deepening and fixing the south side of the outlet, and for dredging the harbour as recommended at pages 55 and 56 of Mr. Robertson's report. It is observed that he approves generally of the report of the committee of 1860.

The Government have had frequent remonstrances addressed to them on their neglect of Cocanada, which is acquiring considerable importance as a place of trade. Mr. Robertson's report is discouraging, but it is useful as furnishing a reply to the frequent memorials addressed to Government, and as preventing waste of money on the various projects which have been submitted. Copy of this part of his report will therefore be communicated to the memorialists.

The Master Attendant of Madras will carry into effect Mr. Robertson's recommendations, that the whole length of channel from Cocanada to the entrance of Coringa river should be buoyed off; and he will report on the cost of the dredging operations to be undertaken at Coringa and Cocanada Bays, of a lightboat off Hope Island, and of the cost (with maintenance) of a steam tug for the Master Attendant at Cocanada. The superintending engineer of the 1st division will report as to the agency necessary for conducting the proposed survey of the neighbourhood of Hope Island and experiments as to currents; and the Cocanada Harbour works, suggested in page 73, will also be planned and estimated for.

The subject of a breakwater at Madras, on which the chief engineer has reported against the delay considered expedient by Mr. Robertson, has been reported on to the Government of India.

It is observed that Mr. Robertson makes no recommendations for works at Alleppy, Narakal, Quilon, Tuticorin, and Porto-Novo, either because none are practicable, or, if practicable, advisable, on account of disproportionate expense.

THE LOSHAI EXPEDITION.

Report dated Chittagong, March 30, 1872.

My last report was submitted on Jan. 29, from Sylhoo Savoong.

2. It was my intention the following day to have made a forward movement into the Northern Howlong country, and orders had been issued accordingly, when intelligence reached me that Mahomed Azeem, the police subadar, to whom I have already referred, had followed Rutton Pooea to the village of Syypoosa, the brother of Vandoola, the chief of the southern section of the tribe. The subadar, whose instructions were on no account to put himself in the power of the Howlongs, but whose mistaken zeal admitted of much excuse, wrote to say that the whole tribe was most anxious to submit, that the chiefs were ready to come in and give up their captives at Demagiree, but would not approach the advanced portion of the force at Sylhoo Savoong, owing to the disturbed state of the country, and other reasons.

3. On this Capt. Lewin urged upon me very strongly the advisability of remaining stationary still longer, suggesting that the commencement of hostilities with the Howlongs, while the subadar was in their country, might endanger his life or liberty, and pointing out very forcibly the many political advantages to be gained by the success of Rutton Pooea's mission, and the opening of communications with the chiefs, as compared with the results of merely punitive measures, to which we should otherwise be reduced. His arguments, recorded in a memorandum on the subject, appeared to me so unanswerable, that I again delayed the advance, to the confusion of all my commissariat arrangements.

4. Neither the numbers of troops or coolies at my disposal allowed of my continuing the chain of posts which connected my line of communications up to Sylhoo Savoong beyond that point, and my plan was to start with ten days' supplies, sending back for more, according as circumstances might demand or permit. For this purpose the requisite number of coolies had been taken off the posts below and collected at the front in readiness for the move on the 30th. With these additional mouths to feed every day's delay of course helped to reduce the accumulation of stores, and it became necessary to redistribute the coolies on the line, some having to go back three or four stages.

5. On Feb. 5 I heard that the subadar had returned to Demagiree, which left me free to advance, but it was not till the 11th that I felt myself in a position to take advantage of it, having determined not to do so till I had twenty days' supplies in reserve at Sylhoo Savoong, so as to be quite safe in case of any interruption of communications in rear.

6. The Sylhoos had recently fired on two or three convoys, and on the night of the 3rd had made an attempt on the pickets at head quarters, when a Goorkha was severely wounded. It seemed, therefore, highly probable that they would be more active in their attacks when they saw that we were engaged with the Howlongs as well.

Colonel Doran, commanding at Lal Shumab, finding them becoming troublesome, sent out parties of his regiment to make reprisals, one of which surprised an encampment of the enemy, and pursued them with great spirit and success—killing four, wounding three, and making three prisoners. This happened on Feb. 4, and was followed by the best results.

7. The information brought by the subadar was not satisfactory. The Southern Howlongs were prepared to do everything we desired at Demagiree whenever Capt. Lewin and myself returned there, but would not come to the camp. From the Northern Howlongs there was no message whatever, so I determined to attack them.

8. After providing a sufficient garrison for Sylhoo Savoong, I found I was able to advance with the following troops:—300 2nd Goorkhas, half Peshawar mountain battery, and half-company sappers and miners. This small column was barely sufficient for the work before us, and it was all I could afford, and all I could feed.

9. I may take this opportunity of remarking that the force placed at my disposal for the expedition did not exceed what was absolutely required to achieve its objects satisfactorily. A reference to the map will show how it was disposed on the date of my move against the Howlongs, with the troops above detailed. The original advance from Demagiree was necessarily to the N.E., for the reason that the principal villages of the Sylhoos, the first and nearest tribe to be dealt with, were in that direction, as were also those of Sookpilal, and the northern and most important section of the Howlongs, and because I started with the idea of an ultimate junction with General Bourchier's column. The settlement with the Southern Howlongs I determined to leave to the last, but as my chain of posts from Kassaloug upwards was almost parallel with their border, and therefore liable to attack from them along its whole length, as well as by the Sylhoos in their own country, it was necessary to garrison each of these posts with fifty men, so as to allow of sufficient escorts with the coolies daily passing up and down the line of communication. I moreover thought it advisable to keep a wing of a regiment at Demagiree ready to move, when possible, against the Southern Howlongs, and to act as a support not only to the troops in front, but those in rear, for more than once I received intimation from thence of threatened attacks on Burkhul and Kassaloug. I may also point out that in advance of Demagiree we were operating within four or five (Kookie) days' journey of the whole of the Sylhoo, and most of the Howlong villages, some sixty in number; and, considering their raiding propensities, can only ascribe the absence of combination and greater enterprise in their attacks upon convoys to the severe and rapid blows administered at the very commencement of the campaign.

10. I knew that there was no intention to contest the passage of the Dullessurree river, and could see that the nearest villages beyond it were deserted, except by a few men ready to burn them at our approach. On the 11th I moved forward a portion of the 2nd Goorkhas and the sappers under Col. Macpherson to occupy one of these. After a severe march of thirteen miles in a north-easterly direction, he bivouacked within a short distance of Lienrikoom and Choongmama, which were close to each other, and which the Howlongs burnt immediately they saw the troops, though not a shot was fired during the day.

11. On the 12th I followed with the remainder of the column. From Sylhoo Savoong to the Dullessurree is a steep descent of 2,300 feet, the path then ascends 1,500 feet, runs along a ridge for a short way, and again descends 1,100 feet into the bed of a stream, which it follows for a couple of miles; another spur of 1,200 feet is crossed, and a final ascent of 1,600 feet on to a rolling upland, the drainage of which flows into the Dullessurree on the west, and Kolodyne to the east, and on which the two villages were situated, finishes a day's journey that took the greater part of the coolies twelve hours to accomplish.

12. On the 13th the force halted, and the whole of the coolies were sent back to Sylhoo Savoong for more supplies. The same day two reconnoitring parties had proceeded a short distance out of camp, when they were hailed by some villagers. Capt. Lewin happened to be with one of these, and, after some trouble, induced the Howlongs to approach and converse, and, finally, to return with him. They said that they did not wish to oppose us, and that their chiefs were ready to come and make their submission. On being informed that until the latter presented themselves we should continue our advance, one or two among them who appeared to be Karbarees or head-men, replied that they would take the message to Lalboorah and Benkœa, and started at once.

13. On the 14th I moved the force to Choongmama, and resolved to modify my plans so far as to establish a post there. To the east of it, and beyond the deep valley of the Kolodyne, at a distance of one and two days' march, were the villages of Benkœa, Sangboonga, and their mother, the widow of Lalpitang, consisting of three or four hundred houses each. On the Mowee Klang, and about as far to the north, were four others belonging to the brothers Lalboorah and Jatoma, containing altogether about a thousand houses. The ranges on which these two great groups of villages stood were between four and five thousand feet high, and had been so well cleared for cultivation that they could be ascended through a succession of jooms and open ground likely to afford full scope for both our artillery and rifle fire, and inviting attack under the most favourable circumstances. The weak point of our position was that in moving against one we should be exposed both in flank and rear to the other. I counted though on the chiefs remaining at home to defend their own hill sides, as the Sylhoos had done, and hoped that a post at Choongmama (where the roads to the two points of attack met almost at a right angle), sufficiently strong to allow of a sortie, if necessary, would check any serious attempt to annoy our rear; a rough stockade was accordingly constructed.

14. On the 15th I sent out reconnoitring parties of the 2nd Goorkhas in both directions, one under Major Macintyre, accompanied by Major Macdonald, of the survey, towards the north, and the other under Capt. Battye, accompanied by Capt. East, assistant quartermaster-general, to the east. The former returned in a couple of hours, with all the information required. The latter, on reaching a stream just below camp, came upon a small body of the enemy, who said that their chiefs were then on their way to make their submission, and that, if they were met by a large armed party, they would probably get alarmed and go back; Capt. East halted, and sent for instructions, on which I directed him to return to camp.

15. On the 16th Sangboonga and Benkœa arrived, preceded by their Karbarees, who said that under Rutton Pooea's assurances, the chiefs were anxious to make their submission, and comply with our demands. On discussing with Captain Lewin what those demands should be, he expressed his opinion that the restoration of the captives, and an oath of friendship towards the British Government, with the pledge to commit no more raids, and to allow us free access to their country now and always, were the only terms we should insist on. He thought that to demand hostages for future good behaviour, or to propose any conditions that might not be complied with, or be evaded hereafter, would be impolitic. Though both these chiefs were concerned in the Cachar raids of last year, he deprecated the imposition of any special penalty on that account, as likely to alarm them, and put them to flight. They were represented to be in the most abject fear of treachery on our part. The old story of Lall Chokla, the chief who is said to have given himself up at Sylhet or Cachar many years ago, on a promise or expectation of pardon, and to have been afterwards transported for life, was revived, and it was quite clear that no considerations whatever would have any weight against those of personal safety, of which they said they could not be sure until Captain Lewin had sworn friendship. Before taking the oaths, our ultimatum had to be given, and on this depended whether they remained or absconded. If they absconded, there would of course be no further hope of seeing them, or any other of the Howlong chiefs, and, together with the captives, we should lose the opportunity of showing that our object was not retaliation, but security against future raids, and to instil into them some ideas of our policy in addition to our power, which had been amply demonstrated. In a congratulatory telegram, dated only a few days before his death, the late lamented Viceroy, while doing me the honour to express his pleasure at the recovery of Mary Winchester, had referred to the liberation of the captives as one of the main objects of the expedition. This object would certainly be sacrificed by a persistence in punitive measures. The Howlongs had removed all their grain and property out of our reach, and, with the example of the Sylhoos before them, as well as the most exaggerated ideas of our guns and rifles, it could not reasonably be supposed that they would stand and take any punishment by fighting. We might burn their empty villages, or they would probably do so themselves immediately we advanced, but then our present ability to hurt them would end. After a careful consideration of all the circumstances of the case, I determined to accept their submission on the terms proposed by Captain Lewin, and the next day that officer, to whom I left all personal communications with the chiefs, went through the required ceremonies with Sangboonga, Benkœa, and Choongmama, each of whom, in addition to the usual peace offerings of elephants' tusks, gongs, and gyal, presented him with either his gun, dao, or plume of bhimraj feathers (worn only by chiefs), as tokens of allegiance and friendship. They expressed a wish that Captain Lewin should settle on the Sirthay or Demagirer range, where they might come and see him, which they could not do while he lived at such a distance as Kassalong or Rangamatten.

16. On the 18th Lalboorah, Jatoma, and Lienrikoom, who, together with those already named, represent the whole of the Northern Howlong villages, came in and made their submission on similar conditions. The same day the first instalment of captives was sent in. From the evidence of the latter, Capt. Lewin was satisfied we should get all that survived of those that were taken from Alexandrapore and the adjacent garden, the only places on the Cachar side that the Howlongs are known to have raided. They, the captives, in describing their adventures subsequent to being carried off, said that some days before reaching the limits of the latter tribe, the Kookies broke into three or four parties, and that of these one only, to which Mary Winchester and some twenty of their number belonged, came as far south as Sangboongas. It may, therefore, very fairly be assumed that the others went to more northern villages, and that Sookpial or his sons, through whose country the raiders must have passed, which they could not have done without invitation or consent, shared in the expedition, as well as its results. Each tribe, I believe, has its own raiding ground, which is very jealously preserved. As a rule, the Shendoo prey on Arracau and the southern portion of the Chittagong Hill Tracts, the Howlongs on the country to the south and east of the Kurnafuolee, while the Sylhoos attack Hill Tipperah. The more northern tribes resort to the Sylhet and Cachar districts, and having the credit of doing so, would naturally object to incur suspicion, and the chances of a visitation for raids in which they did not participate, and would certainly prevent them.

17. On the 19th Major Macdonald, deputy surveyor-general, escorted by a detachment of the 2nd Goorkhas, under Capt. Battye, started for Benkœa's village, from which he returned on the 21st. The day after he proceeded with another party of the same regiment, under Lieut. Hill, to the villages of Lalboorah and Jatoma, on the Mowee Fan Klang, one of the peaks of which, 5,200 feet high, and known as Silam, had long been a conspicuous object in our front, and on which it was important to erect a survey station.

18. On the 23rd, leaving Col. Macpherson and the greater part of his regiment at Choongmama to wait the return of Major Macdonald, I marched with the remainder of the force to Sylhoos Savoong, intending to hasten back to Demagiree to bring matters to a conclusion with the Southern Howlongs.

19. Immediately after the submission of the chiefs, and during the remainder of the time that the force was at Choongmama, the camp was crowded with Howlongs (men, women, and children), and a brisk trade in every kind of local produce was carried on. The impression left on our minds was, I think, that the Loshuis could bear comparison with most Eastern races in physique, natural intelligence, and character. Their thighs and sinews and well-turned limbs indicated health and freedom from want or toil; their faces showed a happy genial disposition, without any expression of cruelty, and very little of courage. They were all clad in home-spun cotton; the sheets or plaids worn by the men being often a dark tartan, and the highland sporran a frequent article of apparel among them.

20. On the 24th Capt. Lewin received intimation that all the Sylhoos chiefs were assembled at Lal Jeeka, and that there was some division in their councils as to whether they should submit or make a combined attack when we commenced to retire. In either case, I thought it better to halt till Col. Macpherson rejoined me, which he did on the 26th.

21. On the 27th, Lal Gnoora and Lal Jeeka, the sons of Savoonga, Vanooyah, Vanloolah, and three other chiefs, representing the whole of the Sylhoos tribe, made their submission, under the same forms and conditions as the Howlongs. Savoonga excused his absence on the grounds of old age and illness, arising from his recent troubles and wanderings, but his sons said he too would come if we insisted on it, which I did not think it necessary to do. Having suffered all the punishment we could inflict, the giving in of the Sylhoos at this stage of the expedition was most satisfactory evidence of a real desire for friendly relations with us. The chiefs said that their followers were completely scattered, and it would take time to collect and make over their captives, of whom they acknowledged to a very few. In reply to Capt. Lewin's inquiries as to why they had so persistently opposed us, and shut their ears to the repeated messages of peace conveyed to them, they said that their young men would fight in spite of their elders, that Lemshilong had told them the most alarming stories of our intentions, and that they, the chiefs, were afraid to put themselves in our power.

22. On the 28th, Major Macdonald, with an escort of the 2nd Goorkhas, under Capt. Battye, and accompanied by Sylhoos Karbarees, who undertook to see them beyond their own border, started towards Byparee Bazaar. They were provisioned for thirteen days, and were, if possible, to reach a peak called "Rick," in Sookpial's country, and from thence return by the Lysrah Klang, completing, it was hoped, the communication between the Cachar and Chittagong districts. The same day I resumed the march towards Demagiree with the head-quarters of the brigade, the two guns Peshawur mountain battery, and two companies of the 2nd Goorkhas, leaving Col. Macpherson, with the remainder of his regiment, to withdraw along the line, according as the stores at the different posts were removed or consumed, until he reached the Rai Jan Klang range, where he was to wait for Major Macdonald's party, or until further orders, which would depend on the arrangements for the embarkation of his corps for India.

23. I pushed on with my staff by forced marches to Demagiree, on arrival at which place I learnt from Capt. Lewin, who had preceded me by a day, that the Southern Howlongs had sent a certain number of captives, but that the chiefs hesitated about coming in to make their submission personally. He recommended a show of force in the direction of Sypooea and Vandoola, whose villages were said to be three and five marches respectively to the east of Rutton Pooea, and expressed his opinion that immediately we advanced they would present themselves.

24. Leaving the officer commanding at Demagiree in communication with Capt. East, assistant quartermaster-general, who was to proceed to Chittagong for the purpose, to carry out the gradual withdrawal and embarkation of the rest of the force, I started on the 7th with the following troops:—One gun Peshawur mountain battery, under Lieut. colonel Hills, v.c.; two companies 4th Goorkhas, under Capt. Hay and Hinde; two companies 27th regiment P.I., under Col. Irvine and Major Ogilvie.

The column marched forty miles over as bad a country as we had yet encountered, and on the third day, after a final ascent of more than four thousand feet, reached Sypooea's village, the chief himself coming out to meet Capt. Lewin, and at once doing all that was required of him.

THE INDIAN FINANCES.

The Select Committee appointed to "inquire into the finance and financial administration of India" have considered the matters to them referred, and have agreed to the following report:—

"Your committee, having in the last session reported the evidence taken by them respecting the revenues of India, have now to report the evidence they have received respecting the expenditure. Your committee have prosecuted a careful and detailed inquiry into the expenditure in England under the direct supervision of the Secretary of State for India in Council. Your committee have also inquired, with equal care and detail, into the expenditure in India for Civil Services, which, including the interest on the public debt and other obligations of the British Government of India, but including the public works' expenditure, amounted to the sum of £23,271,082 for the year 1870-71. This has been compared with the expenditure for the year 1856-57, which amounted to £14,964,872. This year has been selected for comparison as being the year before the great events occurred which distracted India, and before the direct administration by the Minister of the Crown was introduced. The circumstances connected with the first growth of expenditure on some heads, and the increase on others, have been inquired into. General evidence respecting the final administration has also been laid before your committee. Witnesses who have long resided in India, and have there engaged in private enterprise, have stated the views they entertained and believed to be shared by others in India. Mr. Laing and Mr. Massey, who have filled the important office of Financial Member of the Governor-General's Council in India, have given valuable evidence respecting the state of Indian credit, the condition of the Indian finances, and the best mode of administering them in future. Sir Charles Trevelyan, who held the same office, being unable to attend, his evidence has been deferred. The Secretary of State for India has not yet been able to lay before your committee a complete exposition of the military expenditure in India and of the questions connected with it, which will require the most serious consideration. Your committee are of opinion that it is better to allow full time for this than to embark in any partial investigation. In the course of the inquiry it has become apparent that, in order to obtain a clear view of the present financial condition of India, it is necessary to examine into the system which has recently commenced, and is now growing up, of local finance and local taxation. Your committee have requested that they may be furnished with an explanation of the operation of this system, and all the details of the local taxation, but the Secretary of State, not being in a position to furnish the requisite information, their request has been referred to India. It is also desirable to invite those Ministers of the Crown who have held the office of Secretary of State and other officers who have held responsible positions in Indian administration to give evidence, but your committee have deemed it better to defer this until they are in possession of that relating to the military expenditure and local taxation. In the meantime, the searching inquiry your committee have been carrying on will not, they trust, have failed to bring home to the Secretary of State for India and to the Governor-General in India the necessity for having a most complete and accurate registration of facts necessary to enable responsible Ministers to form a just judgment on the financial administration of India. No just opinion should be expressed or can be formed on allegations which have been made before your committee respecting important financial affairs until the requisite explanations have been afforded, and the evidence relating to them is complete. They, therefore, recommend that the committee be re-appointed in the next session in order that their labours may be brought to a satisfactory close."

THE EUPHRATES VALLEY RAILWAY.

The report of the Select Committee appointed to examine and report upon the whole subject of railway communication between the Mediterranean, the Black Sea, and the Persian Gulf was issued on Friday. The committee state that the evidence which they have taken has satisfied them that there is no insuperable obstacle in the way of the construction of a railway from some suitable port in the Mediterranean to some other suitable port at or near the head of the Persian Gulf; that there is more than one port which might be selected at either end of the line; that there are several practicable routes; that there would be no difficulty in procuring the necessary supply of labour and of materials for constructing a railway; and that there need be no apprehension of its being exposed to injury by natives, either during the process of its construction or after it shall have been completed. They find, too, that there is reason to expect the sanction, if not the active concurrence, of the Turkish Government in any well-conceived project that may be presented to them. The committee have arrived at the conclusion that there is no probability of any line being constructed by unassisted private enterprise, but, they observe, "There can be no doubt that if the Government of England were to give its support, in the form of an adequate guarantee, the Turkish Government would give its general countenance to the undertaking, whatever might be the route that was chosen. It is the opinion of many very competent witnesses that it would be worth the while of this country to give such a guarantee, even though it should involve a considerable pecuniary sacrifice. Others are of a different opinion, and, though admitting that England would derive certain advantages from the opening of a railway through Mesopotamia, do not consider that those advantages would be of sufficient importance to justify a serious national expenditure." The committee quote a correspondence laid before them by Sir George Jenkinson, which took place between that hon. gentleman and Musurus Pasha, from which they infer that the Turkish Government would be disposed to entertain favourably any proposal which her Majesty's Government might make for the construction of a railway under the control of a mixed committee appointed jointly by the two Governments, with funds to be raised by a loan contracted by the Turkish Government, and partially guaranteed by the Government of England. The committee are decidedly of opinion that, if any steps are to be taken towards the construction of a line, the best course will be for her Majesty's Government to place themselves in communication with the Government of Turkey, with a view to some arrangement of the nature proposed. They think that £10,000,000 would cover the expenses of the shortest route proposed. In conclusion the report says:—

"Speaking generally, your Committee are of opinion that the two routes, by the Red Sea and by the Persian Gulf, might be maintained and used simultaneously; that at certain seasons and for certain purposes the advantage would lie with the one, and at other seasons and for other purposes it would lie with the other; that it may fairly be expected that in process of time traffic enough for the support of both would develop itself, but that this result must not be expected too soon; that the political and commercial advantages of establishing a second route would at any time be considerable, and might, under possible circumstances be exceedingly great; and that it would be worth the while of the English Government to make an effort to secure them, considering the moderate pecuniary risk which they would incur. They believe that this may best be done by opening communications with the Government of Turkey in the sense indicated by the semi-official correspondence to which they have already drawn attention."

AN INDIAN DIVORCE CASE.—LORD WILLIAM HAY AND COLONEL GORDON.

This was an appeal from the Chief Court of the Punjab in a divorce suit brought by Colonel Gordon against Lord William Hay for alleged adultery with his wife Louisa Elizabeth Gordon, now deceased. Both the District Court and the Chief Court held the adultery to have been proved, and condemned the co-respondent, Lord William Hay, in costs. He denied the alleged adultery, and had appealed to the Judicial Committee.

Mr. Deane, in opening the case, said it was the first appeal under the Indian Divorce Act which had come before their lordships, and involved some important considerations as to the mode of procedure, and he had to submit that there had been a miscarriage of justice in the courts below which called for their lordships' interference.

The appeal was from the Chief Court confirming a decree made by Mr. Macnabb, the Additional Commissioner of the Umballa Division, for the dissolution of the marriage of Colonel Gordon and his wife, Louisa Elizabeth Gordon. On June 25, 1869, a plaint was filed in the District Court, and it was alleged that Mrs. Gordon had committed adultery with Lieutenant Watson, now dead, and that, in 1859 and 1860, at Simla, Lord William Hay, then Deputy Commissioner at Simla, now of Cleveland-row, St. James's, London, had committed adultery on divers occasions, the dates of which were not known. It is alleged that she had also committed adultery with other persons. The appellant was served in London, and an answer was filed denying the adultery. On the 18th of November, 1869, the case was heard before the Additional Commissioner, when witnesses were heard in support of the petition, and a decree nisi was made for the dissolution of the marriage, the Court condemning Lord William Hay in costs. The decree was remitted to the Chief Court for confirmation, and the appellant filed a petition praying to be heard on the ground that the suit was barred by limitation and unreasonable delay; that the evidence was not trustworthy and insufficient; that he was taken by surprise by the speedy action of the Court; and, further, that he was willing to be examined, and prayed that his evidence might be taken by commission. On the 23rd of July, 1870, the cause was heard, and the Chief Court confirmed the decree nisi of the Additional Commissioner, and ordered the appellant to pay costs. Against the decrees the present appeal was brought, and it was complained that a grievous injury had been inflicted on him by the Chief Court refusing to grant time for further inquiry. The suit was instituted nine or ten years after the date when the adultery was alleged to have been committed, more than seven years after the appellant had finally quitted India, and seven years after Colonel Gordon (according to his own statement) had become aware of the alleged adultery. On the hearing before the Chief Court the appellant's counsel tendered his affidavit and it was read. In it he denied any act of adultery, and prayed to be examined on oath. The judges refused to permit further inquiry, and confirmed the decree of the Additional Commissioner. The appellant now alleged that such refusal and the reasons assigned were erroneous and unjust to him.

Dr. Deane and Mr. Leath replied in support of the appeal on the refusal of the Chief Court to allow time for further inquiry.

Mr. C. Pollock proceeded to address their lordships on the part of Colonel Gordon, submitting that there was no bar by any statute of limitation or by unreasonable delay. The principal point discussed was whether the proceedings in the Courts below were regular. The appellant had been represented by counsel; witnesses were examined before the district judge, who was well qualified to decide on the testimony; and his decision was well founded. The learned counsel urged that the judges of the Chief Court had considered the matter and the application made on the part of the appellant.

Dr. Pritchard followed on the same side. The co-respondent in the divorce suit had ample opportunity to defend himself, and if the case was remitted to India no more material evidence could be obtained. Great stress has been laid on the absence of "particulars." Colonel Gordon could not tell when the adultery had been committed, save that it occurred in the autumn of 1859 and the spring of 1860.

Sir R. Collier thought that the charges could have been more specific as to the dates.

When Dr. Deane had replied, Sir R. Collier gave judgment after a conference in private between their lordships. The first question was as to the Statute of Limitations, and their lordships were of opinion that the statute would not apply to suits for divorce, and they were confirmed in that view by the statute passed in 1871, that it was not to apply to suits under the Indian Divorce Act. The appellant had relied on two grounds—in the first place, that justice had not been done him by the Chief Court refusing his application for further inquiry, and denying him an opportunity of being examined; and, in the second place, that on the general merits of the case the decree was wrong. After reviewing the facts as disclosed in evidence and the proceedings in both Courts, with the means taken by Lord William Hay to be represented by legal advisers in India, Sir R. Collier said their lordships thought it would have been desirable had the Chief Court acceded to the request of Lord William Hay that he might be examined, if they had not allowed other witnesses to give evidence. But their lordships did not rest their decision on that ground. After considering all the circumstances of the case, and the observations made upon the evidence, their lordships had arrived at the conclusion that there was not sufficient evidence on which the decree made against Lord William Hay could be supported. The evidence given on which the Courts below founded acts of adultery was by native witnesses, and as Dr. Deane had forcibly put it, one of the principal witnesses had contradicted himself in the evidence he had given. Then again, the supposed admissions of adultery in a letter written by Mrs. Gordon could not be allowed, as the letter against Lord William Hay was inadmissible. After contrasting the evidence of the native witnesses, his lordship concluded a lucid exposition of the evidence by saying that their lordships, under the peculiar circumstances of the case, were of opinion that the decree could not be maintained. It was stated that the general rule of their lordships' board was not to disturb the finding of two Courts. That was undoubtedly true, but in this case there was in effect only one decree, as the Chief Court in the Indian Divorce Act had to confirm the decree of the District Court before it was binding. It was the first case of the kind, and, under all the peculiar circumstances, their lordships would humbly advise her Majesty that the appeal be allowed with costs, and that Lord William Hay be dismissed from the suit against him in India, and that he be allowed his costs in the Courts in India, and also the costs of this appeal.

Miscellaneous.

LORD NORTHBROOK AND THE ATHANASIAN CREED.—The Governor-General of India has written to the Earl of Shaftesbury as follows:—"Please attach my name, if it is not too late, to the Declaration about the Athanasian Creed. I entirely agree with it, and think it now quite time for the laity to make themselves heard."

MILITARY.—The question transmitted to the India Office last week from the Horse Guards has resulted in an increase in the number of majors retiring under the new scheme by two. Pensions are to be provided for thirty instead of twenty-eight. The lists of the rank are not yet complete.—Army and Navy Gazette.

THE INDIAN BUDGET.—To the Editor. Sir,—A friend has just directed my attention to the fact that Sir C. Wingfield had a question on the paper on Monday last addressed to me in reference to my resolution with regard to the Indian Budget. If I had known that the question was to be put I would have taken care to be in my place. You will, therefore, perhaps allow me to state that I shall certainly bring forward the resolution of which I gave notice many weeks since, on the motion that the Speaker do leave the chair to consider the Indian Budget.—I beg to remain yours faithfully, HENRY FAWCETT, Cambridge, Aug. 1.

THE ROYAL ARTILLERY.—The report of the Adjutant-General upon the organisation of the Royal Artillery has just been published. It is the result of an inquiry into the working of the present system of brigades, and contains the evidence upon that point given by officers of all ranks. The general, if not unanimous opinion of the service seems to be that it is undesirable to abandon the present system, in spite of its various anomalies in point of detail. But Sir Richard Airy himself considers that difficulties have been experienced in administering it by reason of the unequal number of batteries in brigades, owing to the frequent changes in the number of batteries required for India, and from the circumstances of many brigades in that country having been mixed or composed of field and garrison batteries. Any difficulties, however, on this score might easily be remedied without any radical change. The whole force consists of 229 batteries, amounting to 33,562 men and 13,177 horses. It is proposed to divide these into six brigades of horse artillery, of five batteries each, and twelve brigades of field and thirteen of garrison artillery, of seven batteries each, with the senior lieutenant-colonel in command at head quarters. It has throughout been admitted that there should be some division beyond the battery, which is the tactical unit. Both the adjutant-general and the commander-in-chief are strongly opposed to the appointment of a general officer of artillery, as likely to interfere with the present policy of assimilating the artillery to the rest of the army in all points of administration and discipline.

INDIAN APPEALS.—On July 27 the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council had before them the appeal case of Mollwo, March, and Co. v. the Court of Wards. This case, previously argued and reported, was now decided. The appellants, merchants in Great Tower-street, City, were creditors to the amount of nearly £30,000 of the house of W. N. Watson and Co., of Calcutta, who had become bankrupts, and the question raised was whether Rajah Pulab Chunder Singh was a partner in the firm. The interest of 12 per cent. the Indian rate, exceeded £20,000, so that the amount involved in the litigation was more than £50,000. The Rajah had died since the suit was commenced, and the Court of Wards at Bengal represented his children. The appellants sued the Rajah in the Court of First Instance, and obtained a judgment, from which there was an appeal to the High Court, and the decision was reversed. An appeal followed to her Majesty, and the question was whether there was a partnership between Messrs. Watson and the Rajah, who had made very large advances under an agreement between them. Sir Montague Smith delivered judgment, and reviewed at some length the question of partnership. Their lordships were of opinion that the agreement did not constitute a partnership, and the only relationship between the Rajah and the house of Watson was one of debtor and creditor. Their lordships would advise her Majesty to affirm the decision of the High Court, and to dismiss the appeal, with costs.—On July 28, the case of Rajah Raj Kishen Sing v. Ranjoy Mazoomdar came before the Court. This case, which was an appeal from Bengal, had been before the committee for four days. The suit was brought to establish the appellant's rights as a Rajah to an estate which he claimed to be indivisible, and which it was contended by the respondent was divisible among all the members of the family, according to the ordinary rules of Hindoo succession. The High Court held it not to be a Raj, and against the decision the plaintiff appealed. Their lordships, on the conclusion of the lengthened arguments, reserved judgment.

FORESTER V. THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA.—This case "the Arms Suit," came before the committee on July 31, on which occasion the Lord Chancellor and Lord Westbury specially attended, in reference to the minutes made when judgment was given. The appeal related to the Dyce Sombre property, and General Forester, M.P., who had married Mrs. Dyce Sombre, was the principal claimant. Some thirty-six years ago the Indian Government had taken possession of the military stores belonging to the Begum Sombre, the mother of Mr. Dyce Sombre, and their lordships held that the appellants were entitled to the value of the arms seized, with interest at 12 per cent. The parties had not been able to agree as to the value of the property, and the matter again came before the Court. Since the judgment had been given an offer had been made on the part of the Government, but declined by General Forester. The interest on the sum to be paid was very large, extending over a period of about thirty-six years. Mr. Forsyth now applied, as the parties had been unable to agree as to the value of the military stores, that the matter should be remitted to India for the value to be ascertained. Lord Westbury suggested that a sum should be agreed upon on which interest could be paid, without sending the case back to India. The Lord Chancellor expressed a similar opinion. Mr. Forsyth, after conferring with his clients, said his instructions were positive and peremptory, although his own views might be in favour of the suggestion. A discussion ensued, and Lord Westbury said that to remit the case to India to ascertain the value of the arms would be to occasion further delay, and, added his lordship, "five years' more interest at 12 per cent. to pay." Their lordships had, he remarked, power to get at the value; they could arrive at the value of the property seized, and exercise the functions of a jury or the powers of the Court of Chancery, and award a particular sum to be paid, and interest on that sum, from the time of the seizure. Their lordships conferred together in private. The Lord Chancellor said their lordships would inquire into the matter by affidavits to be filed on both sides, and thereupon determine the value. The value will not be determined until after the long vacation.

RAJAH SALIG, RAM AND OTHERS V. THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA.—JUDGMENT.—This appeal from the Chief Court of the Punjab involved an important question respecting the property of the ex-King of Delhi, which had been seized by the Government for his participation in the Indian Mutiny of 1857. The decree affirmed a decree of the Commissioner of Delhi, confirming an order of the Assistant Commissioner made on the 24th of July, 1865, dismissing a claim of the appellants for 68,853 rupees principal and interest on four mortgage bonds granted by Mahomed Bahadoor Shah, the late King of Delhi, who had obtained advances from the appellants, who were bankers in the city of Delhi. The Government, after the Indian Mutiny, confiscated all the property belonging to the King, including the villages outside the palace, which had been mortgaged to the appellants several years before the mutiny. The seizure was justified as an act of war, consequent on the capture of the King, which occurred in September, 1857, he being made a prisoner of war. The appellants, Salig Ram and Dari Sing, were concerned in the rebellion, and were convicted and fined 10,000 rupees each. The Governor-General had after the seizure of the property of the rebels issued circulars, stating that the claims of the loyal creditors were to be considered and to be paid; and in another circular he expressed an opinion that the claim of a creditor convicted of rebellion should not be admitted for payment out of the revenue of the Crown lands. Further, it was alleged on the part of the Government that the seizure was an act of war over which, by an established principle of law, no Municipal Court could claim jurisdiction. And as the appellants were convicted as rebels in 1861, they were excluded from the operation of any act of favour towards other creditors of the King of Delhi. It was also alleged that the claim of the appellants was barred by the lapse of time. Mr. Kay, Q.C., and Mr. Bush Cooper were for the appellants; Mr. Foster, Q.C., and Mr. H. C. Merivale for the Indian Government. Sir Barnes Peacock read a long judgment, recapitulating the facts of the cases and the reasons alleged on both sides. In conclusion Sir Barnes Peacock said their Lordships would advise her Majesty that the judgments in the Courts below should be affirmed, as they were of opinion that the appellants, for the reasons stated, were excluded from the operation of any act of favour granted to the other creditors of the King of Delhi. The recommendation would be that the appeal be dismissed, with costs.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, August 1.—HALF-PAY OFFICERS.—In answer to Lord GARLIES, Mr. CARDWELL said, The Act of last Session gave to every officer full indemnity in respect of every saleable commission he then held, and made the commissioners sole judges in every case of claim. I am not prepared to apply to Parliament for power to give over-regulation money in any case not provided for by the Act of last Session.

THE INDIAN BUDGET.—In answer to Mr. W. M. TORRENS, Mr. GLADSTONE said he very much regretted that it had not been possible this session to carry out the arrangements that were made last year for introducing the Indian Budget at an earlier period of the Session. It would not be postponed beyond Tuesday, but it might be taken on Monday; in the interval a more definite announcement should be made.

HOUSE OF LORDS, THURSDAY, August 1.—THE ORDNANCE CORPS.—Lord STRATHNAIRN, in moving for returns, dilated once more upon the injustice inflicted upon officers of the Line by the promotion of captains of the Royal Artillery and Engineers to the rank of Major.—Lord LANSDOWNE had no objection to the returns if the War Office were allowed to add a column showing the extent to which the officers of the Scientific Corps had been superseded under the old system by officers of the Line.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, SATURDAY, August 3.—THE INDIAN BUDGET.—Mr. GRANT DUFF said, in reply to Mr. R. N. FOWLER, that the day on which the Indian Budget would be taken depended on the progress made on Monday next with the Licensing Bill.

A petition was presented, by Mr. M'CULLAGH TORRENS, from 4,878 landowners and traders of Bengal and Central Provinces of India, complaining that in the last twelve years many changes have been made in the government of their country, tending to worsen its condition; that in the Legislative Councils the native nominees of the Executive serve no representative purpose, while in the municipalities they are wholly overborne by the officials who preside; that new laws rashly made fill the community with dismay and alarm; that the police though multiplied are ineffective, and, while feared for their oppression, they are hated for their venality that the cost of the army is vastly increased, while its strength has diminished; that a loss of £200,000 a year on railways is made up by taxation; and that the traffic in many places is reverting to the river, yet Government design to spend £28,000,000 more on new lines and £39,000,000 on canals; that a large deficit is found almost every year in the Indian Exchequer, to meet which new taxes and local cesses have been reverted to in vain, &c.; the petition, in conclusion, prayed that a full and searching inquiry should be made into these grievances by a Royal Commission in India.

India-Office, 31st July, 1872.

BY ORDER OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL.

FIVE YOUNG MEN will be SELECTED in NOVEMBER next to be TRAINED and EDUCATED for the FOREST SERVICE of INDIA.

The course of Training and Instruction in Forestry and Cognate Sciences in France or Germany lasts for two years and a-half, previous to the departure of the Students for India at the end of 1875, and the Secretary of State will contribute, at the rate of £50 half-yearly, towards the Expenses of the Training of such Candidates as are favourably reported on by their Instructors. In addition to this, some weeks must be passed under a Forester in Scotland.

The Salary will be at first £300 a-year, and the Salaries of the Appointments in the three Presidencies range between that sum and £1,900 a-year.

Applicants must be natural British subjects, above Seventeen and under Twenty-three Years of Age, and unmarried.

Persons intending to become Candidates should at once apply for the particulars of these Appointments to the Assistant Secretary, Revenue Department, India Office, Westminster, as the Testimonials and Certificates required must be sent to the India Office before the 14th of October next.

DOVER COLLEGE.

PRESIDENT.

The Right Hon. Earl GRANVILLE, K.G.

HEAD MASTER.

Rev. WM. BELL, M.A., Chr. College, Cambridge.

TERMS:—

Tuition Fees, from Ten to Fifteen Guineas per annum, according to age.

Charge for Boarders in Head Master's House, £40, in addition to School Fees.

BROOKE HOUSE SCHOOL, BURY ST. EDMUND'S.

PRINCIPAL—MR. ROBERT CRASKE.

PROSPECTUS.

Mr. CRASKE desires to receive Boys at an early age—as soon as they can read well—in order that he may have charge of their Education from the very commencement of their studies.

Great care is taken that the elementary subjects are first thoroughly mastered, and that each Boy writes a good legible hand.

The next two or three years are devoted to Classical* and Mathematical work; and Mr. CRASKE is confident that the best of his Boys will be found able, at the age of Thirteen, to compete successfully for the various Scholarships now open to competition at Eton, Harrow, Winchester, and other great Public Schools.

The Classical and English Department is under the direction of the Rev. W. A. OSBORNE, B.A., Graduate in Classical Honours of Brasenose College, Oxford.

Mr. CRASKE himself takes charge of Arithmetic, Euclid, Algebra, and the higher Mathematics. Each Boy, in these subjects, is under his own personal instruction.

The French and German Languages are taught by competent Masters.

TERMS:

For each Boarder ... 60 Guineas.

Those who remain after Thirteen

Years of Age ... 80 Guineas.

Day Boys and Weekly Boarders by Special Agreement.

These Terms include Drawing and Drilling. The charge for Laundry is also included. The only extra subject is German, the charge for which is Two Guineas per Quarter.

Mr. CRASKE considers it an essential part of a Boy's Education that he should be taught to Swim. He has, therefore, constructed a Bath twenty-five feet in length, with warming apparatus, to carry out this object effectually.

There are three Vacations in the year—a fortnight at Easter, seven weeks at Midsummer, and five weeks at Christmas.

The Right Rev. Lord ARTHUR HERVEY, Lord Bishop of Bath and Wells.

WILLIAM EDWARDS, Esq., H.M. Bengal Civil Service, late Puisne Judge of H.M. High Court of Agra; Craigton, Inverness.

FROM THE
APPOINTMENT OF LORD HARDINGE

TO THE
COMPANY.

BY
LIONEL JAMES TROTTER,

Late of the 2nd Bengal Fusiliers.

The first volume of this History embraces the period from Lord Hardinge's appointment in 1844 to the retirement of the Marquis of Dalhousie in 1856.

The second volume commences with the arrival of Lord Canning in India in 1856, and closes with his lordship's death in 1862. This being the most eventful period in the annals of the East India Company, including the Mutiny, great pains have been taken in its narration.

"Captain Trotter has done good service in providing the public with a sequel to a standard work. And in every way his performance is worthy to take rank with that of his predecessor. The thoroughly satisfactory manner in which the task has been performed is greatly to the author's credit. . . . We take our leave of the work, congratulating its author upon having produced an addition to the 'History of India' at once permanent in purpose and popular in execution; acceptable in every way to the wants of the public, and especially adapted for the enlightenment of young members of the local service, to whom the modern annals of the country which they help to administer are of far more importance than the history of remote periods having little or no relation to the present day."—Standard.

"Both the plan and execution of the work are deserving of high praise. Full of interest and animation, and narrates with clearness and brevity all that took place during the period of which it treats. . . . The second volume of Mr. Trotter's history possesses the same merits by which the first was distinguished. . . . It is written with great animation, and often with considerable graphic power. It tells its story with perspicuity and without needless or tiresome digressions. It avoids as far as possible that controversial vein into which Indian politicians and historians are alike prone to fall, and it is as impartial as any work is likely to be which deals with times so near our own. . . . The narrative of the spirit-stirring events of the mutiny will of course have the greatest attraction for most readers, and it is in truth the best, as it is the principal part of the present volume. . . . It appears to us that Mr. Trotter has been eminently successful in his treatment of a very exciting and interesting period of recent history."—London Review.

"The volume is full of interesting matter, comprising every event of importance during the exciting period of the rebellion, told in a concise, straightforward, and impartial manner, unincumbered by those copious extracts from documentary evidence which often serve no other purpose than increasing the bulk without adding to the usefulness of a work of this description."—Observer.

"Captain Trotter's reflections are few. . . . He has his own views, though he does not force them upon us in detail. . . . All this proves him to be far above the narrowness of the average Anglo-Indian. He speaks out boldly, too, in defence of Lord Gough. . . . A word as to our author's descriptive powers; they are such as his lighter writings would lead us to expect. . . . Whatever he has to tell Captain Trotter tells it in an animated and picturesque style. The night on the field at Ferozeshuhur . . . is admirably painted; so is the grand success of Goojat. The disarming of the veterans of the Khalsa . . . is a striking scene. Captain Trotter's book opens up many other interesting questions; it is full of notices of social changes; it points out the specially unfortunate way in which the annexation of Oudh was managed."—Fortnightly Review.

"Here we have before us the first volume of an eminently readable history. . . . The arrangement of the matter, the style, and, above all, the spirit which pervades his pages, are worthy of great commendation. Mr. Trotter is singularly free from the faults of a partisan writer. . . . The volume concludes with a masterly criticism on Lord Dalhousie's character and services."—Calcutta Englishman.

"We cannot say that he has dealt unjustly by Lord Canning's memory. . . . A well-considered volume, in which the heartiest acknowledgments are paid to Lord Canning for his temperate wisdom at a time when there was no man more abused than he. . . . He writes thoughtfully, yet with a soldier's sense of the stir of a brisk military narrative. His history of this great struggle is full and impartial. . . . We need not follow him through his vigorous rehearsal of the well-known incidents. It forms a very lucid history, the several parts being well planned and well grouped, and no important point being omitted or misrepresented."—Examiner.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER

TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great
Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 500 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer,

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S (Ex. Army Med. Staff)

CHLORODYNE

IS THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. P. WOOD stated that Dr. COLLIS BROWNE was undoubtedly the Inventor of CHLORODYNE: that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, being the Inventor was deliberately untrue, which he regretted had been sworn to. Eminent Hospital Physicians of London stated that Dr. J. Collis Browne was the discoverer of Chlorodyne; that they prescribe it largely, and mean no other than Dr. Browne's.—See Times, July 12, 1864.

The Public, therefore, are cautioned against using any other than

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

Remedial Uses and Action.

This INVALUABLE REMEDY produces quiet, refreshing sleep, relieves pain, calms the system, restores the deranged functions, and stimulates healthy action of the secretions of the body, without creating any of those unpleasant results attending the use of opium. Old and young may take it at all hours and times when requisite. Thousands of persons testify to its marvellous good effects and wonderful cures, while medical men extol its virtues most extensively, using it in great quantities in the following diseases:—

Diseases in which it is found eminently useful—Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Colics, Coughs, Asthma, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Whooping Cough, Cramp, Hysteria, &c.

Extracts from Medical Opinions.

The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, Dec. 31, 1864.

From A. Montgomery, Esq., late Inspector of Hospitals, Bombay.—“Chlorodyne is a most valuable remedy in Neuralgia, Asthma, and Dysentery. To it I fairly owe my restoration to health, after eighteen months' severe suffering, and when other remedies had failed.”

Dr. Lowe, Medical Missionary in India, reports (Dec. 1865) that in nearly every case of Cholera in which Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered the patient recovered.

Extract from Medical Times, Jan. 12, 1866.—“Chlorodyne is prescribed by scores of orthodox medical practitioners. Of course it would not thus be singularly popular did it not ‘supply a want and fill a place.’”

Extract from the General Board of Health, London, as to its efficacy in Cholera.—“So strongly are we convinced of the immense value of this remedy, that we cannot too forcibly urge the necessity of adopting it in all cases.”

Beware of spurious and dangerous compounds sold as CHLORODYNE, from which frequent fatal results have followed.

See leading article, Pharmaceutical Journal, Aug. 1, 1869, which states that Dr. J. Collis Browne was the Inventor of Chlorodyne; that it is always right to use his preparation when Chlorodyne is ordered.

CAUTION.—None genuine without the words “Dr. J. Collis Browne” on the Government stamp. Overwhelming medical testimony accompanies each bottle.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail, are—from Bombay, July 19; Agra and Madras, July 17; Calcutta, July 16.

THE Bombay Chamber of Commerce have resolved, almost unanimously, to petition the Duke of Argyll to make further inquiries before sanctioning the Carwar Railway. The Chairman held that it mattered nothing personally to the trading classes of Bombay whether the cotton from inland went to Bombay or Carwar, because it would always be financed by Bombay merchants. He urged that a direct trade with Europe via Carwar was to the last degree unlikely, both from the slowness of Indian trade to forsake its old channels, and from the fact that shipping for the ports that receive the Dharwar cotton could only be supplied in Bombay; the Carwar trade being adequate to furnish freight for no more than three months in the year. Mr. McIlwraith, on the other hand, declaimed against the injustice of barring the ryots of Dharwar from the shortest and cheapest road to the sea. Only one other merchant, however, supported the latter speaker. A Simlah correspondent of the Bombay Gazette confirms the rumour mentioned at the Bombay meeting, that the Indian Government has already begun to reconsider the question of carrying out the line so warmly deprecated by the merchants of Bombay.

ACCORDING to the Bombay Gazette's Simlah informant, it is certain that Sir Richard Temple will not leave India until his term of office comes to an end in April next. We are also assured that the rumours flying about as to his destined successor are mere inventions of idle minds.

THE Secretary of State has written to congratulate the Indian Government on the prosperous issue of the Loshai Expedition, on "results which are not less creditable to the wisdom and moderation of the Government which sanctioned the expedition, than to the military authorities which conducted the enterprise to a successful issue." Much of the success is very properly attributed to the thoughtful and unremitting interest taken by the Commander-in-Chief in the planning and conducting of the campaign. Her Majesty's Government of course fully concur in the opinions expressed by the Indian Government touching the services of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal and his subordinates, of Generals Bourchier and Brownlow, and all the officers employed under them, of whom special mention has been made. In the letter as published nothing is said about batta, an oversight which we hope to see repaired ere long, nor is any amend offered to General Nuthall for the omission of his name from the Order of the Indian Government.

THE Indian papers bring us news of two little rebellions, one in Jodhpore, the other in Bundelkhund. The second son of the Jodhpore Rajah, during his father's absence at Mount Abu, seized the fort of Nagore and hoisted his flag on the ramparts. His father hurried home to the scene of danger, and it was hoped that the rebel would soon be brought to terms. The other rebel is the Chief of Pulhairs, in Bundelkhund, who with his Thakoors has risen against his liege lord and alleged oppressor, the Rajah of Tehree.

WE are sorry to see that cholera has been raging in many parts of India. At Umballa, thirty-two cases, mostly fatal, occurred in three or four days, after which however the disease began to subside. Cholera has broken out at Sabathu and Kussowlie. At Agra out of sixty-two seizures, chiefly among the boys of St. Peter's College, thirty-five died. Many fatal cases are still reported from Darjeeling. The disease had also shown itself among the 17th Foot and 21st Hussars at Jabal-pore, and in the 13th Bengal Cavalry at Lucknow.

SIR John Strachey has relieved Lord Northbrook of the work which had hitherto devolved upon him in the Telegraph Department. His Lordship has given Rs. 1,000 to the Bardwan Fever Fund. It is said that, among other work, he is engaged in revising the tables of precedence, and in reforming the system on which the Viceroy's patronage has hitherto been dispensed.

THE cyclone in Balasor has not after all done so much harm to the crops as might have been expected. Rain has fallen generally throughout Bengal, but more is still wanted in some districts. In the Punjab the floods are playing havoc with the bridges. The railway bridge over the Sutlej has fallen in, the temporary bridge over the Ravi has been carried away, and the bridges over the Beas and Rāmādi were thought likely to follow suit. In Central India on the other hand cattle were still dying for want of fodder. The crops however promised well, and the health of the people was generally good.

It is said that only two lakhs of rupees—£20,000—have been sanctioned for the coming Camp of Exercise in the Punjab. This would seem to account for the reduced number of troops told off, according to the Times telegram quoted in our last issue, for the gathering in question.

WE have to record some new instances of public spirit on the part of Native Princes and gentlemen. The Maharajah Sindia talks of constructing an irrigational canal from the Sind river, near Narwar, through the capital to the Chumbul river, a distance of 110 miles. The Maharajah of Cashmere has just given a sum of money for the founding of a Medical College at Srinagar. Baboo Gopal Chund, sub-assistant surgeon, and a native hakim, are in charge of it, and give lectures and demonstrations. Sir Cowasji Jehangir has just presented Rs. 2,000 to the Christian charities of Bombay.

THE young Mysore Rajah's native Tutor, Jairám Ráo, has been dismissed by the Prince's Guardian, Mr. Gordon, for uttering rude or indiscreet things against European officials.

CAPTAIN LIDDELL of the 10th Hussars has been made Military Secretary to the Commander-in-Chief of Bombay. Mr. A. Scoble is the new Advocate-General for that Presidency.

THE captured forger, Vencatachallum, appears to have given his captors the slip; whether by suicide or in some other way, is not yet certain. His native guards declare that he suddenly drowned himself in the Tripathi Lake, but his body could not be found, and he may have got off by bribing his guards.

From the Englishman we learn that the 20th Hussars will embark from Bombay for England on the 15th November, the Artillery on the 22nd November, the 24th Regiment on the 11th of December, and the 21st Fusiliers on the 15th of March.

It seems that after all Lord Napier is mainly answerable for the state of things which enables a crazed or revengeful soldier in India to put a bullet into a comrade or an officer. It was he who rescinded the order issued by Sir W. Mansfield, that the ball ammunition of the troops in India should be kept in store when it was not required for immediate use. That order applied only to English troops, and Lord Napier amended the inequality, not by extending the rule to native soldiers, but by abolishing it altogether. The result has been a marked revival of the class of outrages which provoked the change introduced by Sir W. Mansfield, in accordance with a like measure previously adopted in this country. Lord Napier seems to have dreaded the risk of reducing the Sepoys to the same level of harmlessness as their white comrades, while he saw the impolicy of keeping English soldiers in a comparatively crippled state amidst two or three times their number of fully-armed native troops. The result, so far, has proved unfortunate, and we hope that his Lordship may yet see the way to reconcile the demands of justice and sound policy with the absolute need of removing all temptation to outrages like that which lately happened at Mhow.

It is hard to see on what principle the Quarter-master General of the Indian Army has been appointed to act as Resident at Hyderabad during Mr. C. Saunders's absence on leave. To take Colonel Lumsden away from a department in which he has risen by merit of former services as a soldier, and place him in a high civil post for which he has had no preliminary training, was a step sufficient in itself to provoke hostile criticism. But when he has been thus promoted over the heads of several officers who have been serving with distinction for years in the Political Department, his good fortune was almost certain to be ascribed to influences which have nothing whatever to do with personal deserts. To say nothing of Politicals like Colonels Nixon and Hutchinson, who have served for thirteen years, there is Colonel Willoughby Osborne, the Political Agent at Bhopal, whose fifteen years of special service date from the stirring days of the Indian Mutiny, and embrace some of the most brilliant work which it has ever fallen to the lot of an Indian Political to accomplish. As Political Agent for Rewah, he was the only one of his class who maintained his post in Central India, at a time of fiery trial for all Englishmen who had to stand alone among a multitude of indifferent or disaffected natives. His military services during the same period were unsurpassed for brilliancy by the most distinguished officers of that day. At the head of a force of all arms raised by himself he defeated the rebels in nineteen engagements, captured forty-two guns, several hundred stand of arms, and six stone forts, besides opening the great Dakhan Road and conquering the Bijayanagar territory. All this was done without the aid of a single British bayonet. Since then Colonel Osborne has for the last ten years been Political Agent at Bhopal, so that his acquaintance with Mohammedan Courts would seem to have specially marked him out for the temporary management of affairs at Hyderabad. And yet this is not the first time that so deserving an officer has been passed over.

MR. LOGIN is said to feel very confident as to the success of his cotton experiments in the Punjab. He has already three farms at work, one of fifty acres near Kalka, a smaller one at Kurnál, and a third twenty miles north of Delhi, which yielded 500 lbs. of clean cotton last year. The yield for this year promises to be yet greater, and the success he has already attained has done much to induce the neighbouring zamindars to think favourably of the Egyptian mode of growing cotton. It appears however that the Hindus have taken alarm at a process which enables them to pluck two crops of cotton from the same plants. They have a notion that such an interference with the natural course of things will bring bad luck, in the form either of a pestilence among the husbandmen or of a murrain among their cattle.

THE Pioneer contradicts the rumour of Mr. Forsyth's intention to resign the service. Those who know him well declare that he "has shown no sign of an intention to give permanence to the slight he has suffered by quitting the service. . . . Mr. Forsyth has seen too much of the high official world not to know that the disfavour of one Government is no reason to a man of proved capacity why he should not be among the most favoured confidants of the next."

THE Hindoo Patriot offers an able and temperate defence of the Native Press against the strictures of the Englishman. It does not think that its native contemporaries in Bengal are fairly open, as a rule, to the charge of "violence and rancour." The limited resources of the Bengali language, which has not yet formed itself for political controversy, and the want among its writers of that literary skill which distinguishes their English brethren, the skill which "makes language mean more than meets the ear," have led their critics to mistake bluntness for violence, undisguised feeling for rancour, and independence for impertinence. Few Englishmen again read the Bengali papers in the original. They trust to translations neither full nor accurate. The Government Translator gives mere abstracts of the papers reviewed, and these of necessity are imperfect and often misleading. It is a mistake also, we are assured, to charge the vernacular press with pandering to the taste of its readers. "On two subjects only, we may say, the political opinion or feeling of the native community is strong—we mean justice and taxation." Their faith in our sense of justice makes them the more aggrieved when they see individual Englishmen depart from their professed principle. The growing burden of taxation in a poor country, among an ignorant people, naturally produces a violent outcry, and so far the Native Press reflects the popular feeling. In other respects it simply tries to mould the opinions and sympathies of those whom it addresses. Its defects in short are not those of the heart but of the head. Its writers "may be indiscreet in their language,—that is a defect of the head—but they are undoubtedly loyal—their heart is sound." It is a pity indeed that so few University men enter the ranks of Bengali journalists, but that, says the Patriot, is not the fault of University education.

ON Friday last an interesting paper on the Contrast between Hindu and English Life, was read before the Social Science Association by Dr. Gopal Chandar Rai. What he said of English home life may easily be imagined. Of course it was everything beautiful and good, especially by contrast with his description of home life among the Hindus. In the latter there are few, if any provisions for the poor and suffering. Women are kept apart and shut out from all society. There is no moral training of infants, and no instruction in the fine arts. The only education consists in training boys as clerks for the public service. We are told that India is a nation of paupers interspersed with a few millionaire Rajahs, and that every little necessary of life has to be bought from foreign countries. India compared with England is a land of indolence and stagnation, and the life of the people tends to demoralise instead of elevating them. All this would be very sad if it were quite as true as it seems to this worthy doctor of Bengal. But is it anything like the truth? To anyone who thinks at all on such subjects it must seem absurdly wide of the truth, to suppose that moral training of some kind for instance is a thing unknown among Indian children. As for instruction in the fine arts, another Hindu gentleman, Mr. D. H. Thakur, very pertinently asked how many persons in England were educated in the fine arts. Provision for the poor and suffering is hardly needed in a country where every household and every caste contributes cheerfully to the support of needy and sick relatives and fellow castemen. Mr. Thakur did not deny that Hindu children might be better educated, but the same may be said of a great many English children and adults also. Strikes have not yet become a social institution in India. The charitable institutions founded and maintained by natives in Bombay and Calcutta hardly prove the justice of Dr. Rai's indictment against his countrymen. Sayid Mahmud stood up in defence of his Mohammedan countrywomen, many of whom, he said, composed well in Persian and the classical languages of India, and reminded his hearers that the Mohammedan rulers of India had preferred Hindus to offices which their English successors had not yet dreamt of giving them. Mr. Thakur avowed his dislike to the system of early marriages, but thought that there was much to consider before his countrymen adopted the customs of foreign nations. We for our part can see little use in discussions which only tend to puff up the Briton's natural self-conceit and to lead him further than ever from a just appreciation of the people for whose well-being he professes to care. Comparisons of the kind here started are always misleading from the difficulty of getting at trustworthy data, and the yet greater difficulty of putting ourselves in other men's places.

THE serious charge brought by General Forester last week against Mr. Denis Fitzpatrick and the India-office, with regard to the abstraction of certain documents bearing on the recent suit between the Sombre family and the Indian Government, appears to have been successfully rebutted by Mr. Grant Duff's explanatory answer on Friday last. According to General Forester, some letters which were deemed important to the interests of the claimants in the aforesaid suit were not forthcoming, when certain records, which Mr. Fitzpatrick as agent for the defendants had got into his possession, were returned to the Magistrate of Meerut. Instead of being punished for what he had done, Mr. Fitzpatrick, complained the General, had not only continued in the service of the Government, but for the last three years had been drawing a handsome salary in England for his services in conducting the defence of the Indian Government. Mr. Grant Duff's reply however to General Forester's motion for papers on the subject blows away the cloud of misunderstanding which had hitherto obscured a few plain facts. Mr. Fitzpatrick himself has supported his denial of the charge brought against him by a simple statement of what took place. From these two sources it appears that the papers in question were official correspondence belonging to the Indian Government, that Mr. Fitzpatrick by order of the Government removed those papers from the Meerut office and forwarded them to Calcutta, that this was done with the knowledge and consent of the acting Collector of Meerut, and that the charge thereon founded against Mr. Fitzpatrick had not only been ignored by the two lower Courts in the Punjab, but was expressly withdrawn by General Forester's counsel in the course of the subsequent pleadings before the High Court.

WE are glad to learn that Major Burne, C.S.I., lately Private Secretary to Lord Mayo, has been attached to the Political Department of the India Office, in the capacity of what is called "Mehmendar" in the East. He will be a sort of Political A.D.C. to the Secretary of State. His business will be to attend to the Native Princes and Missions which come to England in communication with the Political Secretary. Such an appointment will be sure to give general satisfaction.

DEPOTS.—Under instructions from his Royal Highness the Field Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, the annual relief of officers at the depot of a British regiment will be suspended during the last two years of its service in India. Should actual vacancies exist, officers will be sent for duty as heretofore.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

THE INDIAN BUDGET.

THE Government has very soon repented of the change it made last year in the time for laying the accounts of our Indian Empire before Parliament. In the very last week of the Session just concluded, Mr. Grant Duff proceeded to unfold his Indian Budget to an audience of about thirty members, very few of whom cared half as much for his detailed review of India's financial position as they did for discussing the wrongs of Dr. Hooker or the designs of Mr. Lowe on the ground reclaimed at their own cost by the ratepayers of London. Mr. Fawcett's notice of a motion against the Indian Income-tax had doubtless something to do with the postponement of the Budget statement, as it certainly accounted for the unusual practice of making a speech, as Mr. Grant Duff did, on the Indian Budget, before the House had resolved itself into a Committee. In so doing, the Under-Secretary for India took the wind out of Mr. Fawcett's sails, and prepared his hearers by a series of rather highly-coloured pictures to withstand the depressing effect of his opponent's coming Jeremiad. The first part of his statement dealt with the figures furnished by the Indian estimates for the last few years, figures with which our readers are already acquainted. We may note however Mr. Grant Duff's explanation, such as it was, of the enormous cash balances of April last. Of the 25 millions then in hand about £1,300,000 was money due to public creditors who had elected to reinvest it elsewhere. Another 2½ millions represented the balance of sums borrowed for laying out on extraordinary public works. This would still leave more than five millions in excess of the fifteen usually held in reserve; but a large part of that excess represents the surplus income of the last two years. If so, we are all the less able to discover any just grounds for retaining an income-tax which is reckoned to bring in little more than half-a-million for the current year. Was it worth while to maintain an impost so widely detested, and in its present shape so clearly unfruitful, when some four millions of former surplus lay unspent in the public coffers? It is very well to say that the existence of so large a sum precludes recourse to borrowing for this year at least; but it is rather hard upon the Indian taxpayer that money raised for the year's ordinary needs should be diverted to extraordinary uses. Nor is the matter mended by deducting from this large surplus, as Mr. Grant Duff seems to do, the sum of former deficits. We, at least, had always imagined that those deficits had long since been covered by increased taxation or diminished outlay.

It is more to the purpose to learn that between 1861 and 1873 India will have spent only £7,384,780 in excess of her actual income, and that against this excess may be set as much as 37½ millions of tangible property, in the shape of public works, the result of her past outlay. Of that sum however eleven millions are written down for barracks and other military buildings, whose real value is in many instances open to serious question. At the lowest reckoning, however, we may admit that India has already something to show in return for money spent. Mr. Grant Duff also made a fair defence of Indian Finance Ministers, whose budget estimates, he declared, were after all less inaccurate on the whole than those presented by English Chancellors of the Exchequer. The latter, moreover, are working a system established ages ago, while the Indian system is barely ten years old. In India also the enormous distances lend a new uncertainty to the financier's view. With regard to the alleged evils of a heavy local taxation, Mr. Grant Duff assured his hearers that the whole of it amounted only to about five millions, of which about a million and a-half was levied by municipalities for municipal purposes. As for the foreign trade of India, that has nearly doubled since the American War, the yearly average now being 102 millions, against 52½ millions for the five years before the War.

Turning from figures to general politics, Mr. Grant Duff ventured to offer a flat denial of the statement that India was just now "exceptionally discontented or unprosperous." What grounds he had for asserting that "nine hundred and ninety-nine alarmist statements out of a thousand were the mere exaggerations or fabrications of persons who were disgusted at not seeing their own particular views adopted, or their own particular interests forwarded, by the local authorities," we are at a loss to know. It may be true that high officials in Calcutta and Simla know nothing of the alleged grounds for anxiety; but their ignorance is not shared by a large section of the ruling classes, and a great many people who have no personal motive for sounding an alarm have borne witness to the recent prevalence of discontent and disquietude. Mr. Grant Duff himself admits that we have been improving India a little faster than sound policy would have desired. At the same time we may allow with him that the great experiment of governing India is going on as well as can be expected, and that no good cause exists for immediate anxiety. With regard again to Lord Mayo's opinion on the income-tax, as quoted by Mr. Fawcett, it is only fair to remember that the words in question were uttered in 1870 when the burden of the tax was most severely felt; and it is possible that if Lord Mayo were now alive, he might see fit to modify his former opinion. But even Mr. Grant Duff confesses that in his last days Lord Mayo "inclined against" the income-tax as a permanent impost. We shall be curious to see how far the host of witnesses whom he expects to bring next year before the Finance Committee will succeed in proving that the income-tax is a proper and desirable impost, to which none but the Europeans in India have decidedly objected.

The Under-Secretary for India had some reason to complain of Mr. Fawcett's motion, as forestalling the verdict of the Finance Committee. But in avowing his belief that the House "could derive no advantage from any of the remarks which the honourable member for Brighton was about to make," he did small justice to Mr. Fawcett, whose subsequent speech served at any rate to impress upon his hearers the fact that some of the questions so confidently settled by Mr. Grant Duff were regarded by many competent persons from a much less cheerful point of view. In contrasting the stationary income with the elastic expenditure of India, Mr. Fawcett merely enlarged on the text provided for him by Sir R. Temple. When he inveighed against the growing expenditure on a smaller army, he was only following the lead of eminent critics both in the Indian Government and the India Office. His objections to the system of railway guarantees have already been answered by the introduction of State Railways; and if the new system pleases him little better than the old, it must be remembered that past experience of the Public Works Department justifies a certain amount of scepticism as to its future. In reply to General Barrow's evidence in favour of the income-tax, the member for Brighton could quote against it the recorded opinions of three successive Finance Ministers for India, as well as those of several other authorities at least equal to General Barrow in rank and special information. And whatever may be pleaded as to the elasticity of our Indian revenues, it is worth remembering that of late years the only means of meeting a threatened deficit has been to curtail outlay on public works, to reduce the working strength of establishments, and to double a tax which causes more general discontent than all the other sources of Indian income. Mr. Grant Duff may say what he will regarding the light and partial incidence of the income-tax in its present shape; but the fact remains that for the sake of half a million or so a year, the Indian Government retains an impost which puts into the pockets of native underlings some two rupees for every one that finds its way into the public treasury.

Spirit of the Indian Press.

THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVANTS OF THE PRESENT DAY.

The Englishman observes that, as a rule, they begin their career with a better knowledge of law than a barrister has at setting out, and in both cases subsequent progress can only be the result of practice and private study. The increase of judicial efficiency is due almost entirely to the two years' professional training which the selected candidates now receive in England before they are finally admitted to the service. But it is purchased at a considerable price. We will allow that the young men of the Service are as active and efficient administrators as they ever were, and a glance at the Cricket Elevens throughout the country shows that they start life with well-made athletic bodies, as well as with fairly-trained minds. But there can be little doubt that the present system, while raising the average professional efficiency of the service, tends to shut out the exceptionally talented men who came from the Universities in the early competition days. It operates in this direction from two reasons. In the first place, by making young men enter at an earlier age, it debars them from the chance of a University education; and in the second, by subjecting them to a strict professional training for two years before coming out, it prevents the few who have been at the University from carrying their College career to its proper conclusion. The result is two-fold; the area from which the Service might draw its recruits is limited by the practical exclusion of the University youth; and the University youth finds a lucrative and honourable profession, which many of them adopted twelve years ago, now closed. These considerations are beginning to tell both upon those who direct the examinations, and upon public opinion at the Universities. We should be heartily glad if some compromise could be arrived at that should give us from time to time the exceptionally brilliant men which the competitive system formerly attracted from the Universities, and at the same time maintain the higher average of professional training which the present method produces. On the one hand, it is now very important that the internal administration of the districts should be conducted by men who have had a sound legal education. On the other, it is equally important that a body of men should exist within the Service who possess the high culture and that talent for the wider spheres of political action which a University training gives. It is from this body that the Government of India and the Local Secretariats have obtained their best recruits during the past fifteen years. Indeed, without a single exception that we remember of at the moment, every young Civilian who has during that period made an unusual success is a man who had distinguished himself at his University, English, Scotch, or Irish.

CONTROL OF MILITARY EXPENDITURE.

The Englishman, whilst it would not imperil the life and efficiency of the army by subordinating the Military Member of Council or Secretary of War, which in point of fact he is, to the crotchets of some crazed economist, would tighten the Government Control, and raise, if necessary, the responsibility. A member of Government who so grossly neglects his duty, be he soldier or civilian, as to squander, or permit to be squandered, the public revenues, is clearly unfit for the high post entrusted to him. Let such an one be removed from the Viceregal Council, that is, punish the offending official, but not the public service, as you must inevitably do under the system proposed by the India House. The course pursued in India in pre-sanctioning an estimate of the proposed military disbursements for the incoming year, with a view to obtain the Government sanction to such expenditure, is in strict accordance with the form observed at home. Adopting our view of the absolute necessity of leaving the action of the Military Member of Council untrammelled by the theoretical views of an irresponsible Controller-General of Military Finance, provided always that the minimum amounts voted on the army estimates be not exceeded, the Military Accountant General ceases to be a departmental officer, attached to the Military Secretariat, and becomes, de facto, the confidential adviser of Government in all matters relating to the monetary effects, present and prospective, of such military changes as may arise from time to time. His connection with the Military Department, necessary to place at his command information not otherwise obtainable, should be purely nominal. Free from all departmental pressure and prejudice, holding his appointment directly from the Viceroy, loyal to the Military Member of Council as to the Supreme Government, relieved of the dangerous attitude of antagonism which the India House would give to a Controller-General, the Military Accountant-General should stand midway between the Military Department and the army expenditure—a useful and not a dead and unreasoning drag on efficiency. Practically, these are very much the position and functions of the present Accountant-General, whilst, theoretically, he is simply in charge of the account branch of the Military Secretariat—subordination, real or implied, the wisdom of which is evidently questioned at the India House. Hence it appears to us that a very trifling change, having the effect of relieving the Military Accountant General of all official connection with the Military Department, would probably suffice to satisfy the Secretary of State, correct the present alarm at the India House, and save India from the infliction of another General Balfour. With the utmost respect for military economists, we scarcely approve of empty arsenals, insufficient means of transport, and ill-armed soldiers.

CRIMINAL PROCEDURE IN INDIA.

The Indian Daily News observes that it is the attitude of the law towards the criminal which Mr. Campbell wishes to see altered; and the grounds on which he would urge the change recommend themselves to our reason. We have no doubt that, if this change were once effected, the practical experience and common sense of our judicial and police officers, who have been thrown off the scent by the red-herrings in the form of scientific English maxims which have been freely dragged across the trail, would speedily enough detect a criminal procedure, suited to the people of India, by which the criminal of the average type might almost invariably be run to earth, in spite of the numerous defects of oral testimony. The common sense and experience of Indian judicial officers stand baffled on the track, not because they are unequal to the task of administering justice, but because the procedure that has been forced on the country, instead of being constructed on an Indian model, weakly reflects the theoretical refinements of a foreign jurisprudence, which is utterly unsuited to the people of India. Scientific Government has now progressed so far that it is hopeless to look for any general reversion to the simpler rule that is better adapted for the people of India—and perhaps the changes that have been brought about in the people themselves, by our steady persistence in introducing scientific government, has made such a general reversion impracticable—but we are sure that the majority of experienced judicial and police officers, whose minds have not been entirely poisoned by the draughts which they have drunk of scientific administration, will concur with Mr. Campbell in thinking that the Government is bound to adopt every possible means, short of actual torture, for the purpose of getting at the truth in criminal cases. And we hope to hear more from Mr. Campbell on this important subject before he lays down the reins of Government.

OFFICE ESTABLISHMENTS.—It is said that circulars have been sent through the various departments at Simla, to ascertain whether departmental heads cannot manage, whilst at Calcutta, with small office establishments. We hear there is some talk of reducing the rates of compensation at present allowed to clerks on duty at Simla, where they are saved all punkah charges, and not a few others absolutely indispensable in a tropical climate. A permanent arrangement of plain and hill offices, thereby rendering unnecessary the temporary separation of families, will prove a real economy in the case of married clerks, and render possible a reconsideration of the whole subject of compensation.

EAST INDIAN CIVIL, MILITARY AND COMMERCIAL AGENCY.—The Civil and Military, Covenanted and Uncovenanted, Servants of the Indian Government are now a very large body, and the different Members of the Government Services in that country are in receipt of liberal incomes. Many of these gentlemen frequently require temporary accommodation, which they have difficulty in obtaining, unless at usurious rates; and to make such advances, when covered by adequate collateral security, will be one of the principal objects of a new Banking Company whose prospectus appears in our advertising columns; in the different Presidencies there are a large number of gentlemen, European and native, in receipt of moderate allowances, which are paid with the greatest punctuality, and who might be advantageously assisted under the careful system of management which will characterise the business to be conducted by this company.

Bengal.

ANOTHER CASE OF SUICIDE AT UMBALLA.—A private of the 20th Hussars committed suicide by shooting himself with a loaded carbine on Thursday, July 11.

BANK OF BENGAL.—The Jubbulpore Chronicle hears that Mr. A. F. Carr, now at Nynee Tal on sick leave, in consequence of an accident by which he broke his arm, will resume charge of the Bank of Bengal at Jubbulpore, of which branch he was formerly acting agent. Mr. R. T. Horsford, according to the same report, will assume charge of the Mirzapore branch.

MEDICAL CERTIFICATES.—The Governor General in Council has been pleased to rule that no person shall be appointed to the public service in India in a grade eligible to pension without a certificate by a commissioned medical officer, or by a medical officer in charge of a civil station, that he has no disease, constitutional affection, or bodily infirmity, unfitting him, or likely to unfit him, for the public service.

THE JUDGE ADVOCATE'S DEPARTMENT.—The Judge Advocate General's Department in India, says the Indian Daily News, will probably be cut down to limits more in harmony with army requirements. The local duties and responsibilities of Assistant Advocate Generals have been so lightened by the appointment of Mr. Romaine that some doubling-up of appointments is contemplated.

COTTON.—Messrs. Colvin, Cowie and Co. have, it is said, addressed a letter to the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, calling attention to the falling off in the consumption of Bengal cotton in the English market. This falling-off is attributed to the practice of full-pressing, which prevents the purchaser from examining the article before taking it over, and prevents him, therefore, from discovering, before purchasing, any frauds that have been committed.

CABUL.—The last idea of the Ameer of Cabul appears to be to encourage watchmaking in his kingdom, as the correspondent of the Agra paper says that he has ordered a native watchmaker to instruct some men in making and repairing watches, who are to be sent to different towns in Afghanistan to open shops when proficient. Four thousand rupees a year are to be given to the watchmaker for his trouble.

SENTENCE ON PRIVATE BUTLER.—Private Butler, of the 36th Regiment, who shot his comrade Harvey, has been tried by the Chief Court of Punjab, and sentenced to rigorous imprisonment for ten years, on the charge of "doing an act, knowing it to be so immediately dangerous that it must, in all probability, cause the death of a human being, such act having been committed without any excuse for incurring such risk of death."

CASHMERE.—It appears that Cashmere has proved a centre of considerable attraction to visitors this season. We see it stated that 270 Europeans have already visited the place. Two hundred and twenty-four are gentlemen and forty-six ladies. Of these seventy-seven are in Siri Nagar, 154 out in the interior; thirty-nine have already left the valley. The Maharajah was expected at an early date; but his winter capital, Jummoo, having been visited by cholera, he did not wish to leave his subjects in that state, and will not start till the disease is altogether gone from the place.

THE FERAZIS.—We hear that the Ferazi ryots on Mr. Wise's estates at Noyanabad are still in a very unsettled state, and that a breach of the peace may be apprehended. Mr. Broadley, C.S., has been deputed to the spot, to remain there till further orders, and has been invested with power to try cases arising in the Narainungo and Ruppung Thanahs. We trust he will be able to keep both sides quiet, and thus avoid a recurrence of the late riot and consequent loss of life. The Ferazis should be very narrowly watched.—Bengal Times, July 10.

DESTITUTE WIDOWS.—We have been informed that, with the charitable object of relieving the great distress existing amongst the European and Eurasian widows, of whom there are many living in the serais and bazaars of Lahore, a society has been established, which provides needlework (coarse and fine) at remunerative prices for those able to do it. On Wednesday morning last twelve poor women attended at the Free School, where the work is given out by the ladies forming the Committee, and many others are anxious for employment.—Indian Public Opinion.

TYPHOID FEVER AT CHERAT.—We are sorry to hear from a correspondent that during the present season there have been a few fatal cases of typhoid fever amongst the troops at Cherat in the Peshawur district, and as the greatest medical authorities say that this kind of fever arises from the neglect of simple sanitary laws, we hope that every care will be taken not to crowd the men too much and to render the precincts of the huts and tents savoury to the utmost extent. All agree that the climate of Cherat is very salubrious, owing chiefly to the genial breezes which seem always to prevail and to the absence of any rank vegetation; the water, moreover, being excellent, it is evident that we must look elsewhere than to climatic influences for the causes of typhoid fever.—Indian Public Opinion.

ACCIDENT TO A SOMNAMBULIST.—A Delhi correspondent of the Delhi Gazette writes:—"A serious accident happened a couple of nights ago to a man belonging to the regiment in garrison. It appears he got out of bed in his sleep, and, walking into the verandah, climbed on to the railings which surround it, and fell to the ground, a distance of between thirty and forty feet. When picked up it was found that he had broken his wrist, and had also received a severe injury in his spine. He lies in a precarious state at present; should he recover I think it will effectually cure him of sleep-walking."

THE HURDUI AND SHAHJAHANPUR RAILWAY.—Colonel Beadle, the Agent of the Oudh and Rohilkund Railway, has written to the secretary of the Jalsa Tehzib in Lucknow that he hopes to open the forty miles of line from Hurdui to Shahjehanpur before the end of the year, provided the rails arrive from England. He adds that he sees no reason why the lines to Bairamghat and Faizabad should not be opened by October 15, 1872. The Government Engineer, Captain de Bourbel, has postponed the opening of the line to Hurdui for fifteen days.—Englishman.

COURT-MARTIAL.—A court-martial, of which Colonel Gowan, of the 23rd Native Infantry, is president, assembled at Allahabad, on Monday, July 5, for the trial of Lieutenant E. E. Gibson, on the charge of conduct unbecoming the character of a British officer for agreeing to accept from the Minister of the Rajah of Rewah illegal gratification while engaged in the settlement of boundary questions between the States of Rewah and Sohawul. Mr. Warner (aided by Mr. Howard) appeared as counsel for the accused; Captain Clementi, of the 1st Bengal Cavalry, as prosecutor; and Major Seagrim as judge-advocate.

NATIVE FEELING.—"A Mussulman of Agra," writing to the Allypore Institute Gazette on the minute of Lord Napier of Magdala on native princes and their armies, concludes a long vindication from the suspicion of disloyalty of those from whom his Excellency apprehends possible danger with the following words:—"The English authorities may depend upon it, that unless they will undertake to govern India more in correspondence with the wishes and feelings of the people, and unless they infuse into the administration some element which may serve as a connecting link between the Government and the people, a serious complication is not far off."

SCINDIA'S IRRIGATION CANAL.—The Maharajah Scindia contemplates utilising the water of the Scind river for the benefit of his people and the enrichment of his country, by constructing an irrigation canal to extend from near Nurwur through the capital, to Bhind, and thence to the Chumbul river, a distance on the whole of 110 miles. His Highness has applied to Government for the services of an Engineer officer to survey the line and take the levels. It is only necessary to read the Gwalior reports to know that the Maharajah is a prince of strongly marked character and great shrewdness. It is very satisfactory to find that year by year his energy and intelligence are turned more and more towards efforts to improve the condition of his subjects and the resources of his country.—Pioneer.

THE BURDWAN FEVER FUND.—His Excellency the Viceroy has given Rs. 1,000 to the Burdwan Fever Fund. It is to be hoped that so liberal a contribution from a nobleman new to the country may have the effect of arousing the wealthy and inactive zemindars of the Burdwan district to a sense of the duties which their elevated position entails on them. The Burdwan Rajah is about the only one of the indigenous aristocracy who has, up to now, shown any sense of the deep and widespread distress around him, and the obligation incumbent on all the wealthy and influential men to aid in the work of alleviating a distress which may be partly attributed to defective sanitary arrangements, in a great measure to flooded paddy-fields, and still more to the steaming and rotting uncut crops which yield so splendid manure for the next cultivation.

SIR WILLIAM GREY.—The Indian Observer states, and we wish sincerely it may be correct, that Sir William Grey is to succeed Sir Richard Temple as Finance Minister. We are only afraid that Sir William would not accept the office, but if he should the appointment would be excellent. His experience could not easily be matched, could scarcely by possibility be excelled. He is calm, thoughtful, careful, and, we have heard people say, "over-conscientious," whatever that may be. He has a kindly feeling towards the people, and he is a man who would neither introduce play-acting nor suffer it to be introduced into the finances. We wish, both for the sake of England and India, that Sir William Grey could be had as Finance Minister, and that the Finance Department could be cleared out for the introduction of a truer and more statesmanlike system of finance than India has seen for many a long day. We believe there are few Englishmen and few natives who know the real facts who would not rejoice to see the financial affairs of India placed in the hands of Sir William Grey.—Friend of India.

THE SUTLEJ BRIDGE.—A correspondent of a contemporary writes from Phillour on the 10th July:—"The smash of the Sutlej Bridge is now, I regret to say, complete. Yesterday afternoon the pier sank, and the girders whose ends rested upon it fell with a crash into the river, from whence their ends now stick up above the water, reminding one by their appearance of the wreck of some large ship. The mail bags by the up mail train had just passed over before the girders fell, and it must be considered as a fortunate circumstance that throughout this lamentable accident no loss of life has occurred. What a fearful thing it would have been had the pier given way at the moment a train was passing over it; and, when we recollect that it is scarcely forty-eight hours since trains were passing over it, there is every cause to be thankful. Of course nothing can now be done towards repairs, or even to erect a temporary bridge for an engine to pass over. Everything, as in the case of the Beas last year, will have to remain in statu quo till after the rains, and passengers and mails will have to be conveyed across by boat."

FINANCIAL.—Mofussilite, writing to the Pioneer, says:—"I see that Lord Northbrook has taken finance as his special province, and is not going in for railway works. There are many things which are needful to be done. There is Public Works Department expenditure to be cut down, and there are a hundred minor things to be done. I hear that the transfer of the Elphinstone property to Government has given rise to a great deal of discussion in Council. Amongst minor items, the Government thinks that the Money Order-office, under Mr. Tudor Trevor, at the Bombay Presidency, has not been looked after; then there is Colonel Kennedy's Carwar Railway business, which is discussed, and the question of making Simla headquarters for next year or not is a subject which is likely to become a vexed question very soon."

SUPPOSED CURE FOR CHOLERA.—A Benares correspondent of the Indian Mirror asserts that a Bengalee Baboo at that city has discovered a certain cure for cholera. It is said by the correspondent that he applied to the Government of India, claiming the promised reward of a lac of rupees for having found out the specific, and that the Government of India, on receipt of this, referred the petition to the Commissioner of the 5th Division, N.W.P., for necessary inquiries, who in due course of business forwarded the same to the magistrate of the district to do the needful. But it was remarked by the magistrate "that the numbers cured by him last year were not sufficient to prove its efficacy in proportion to his claim. In the event, however, of an outbreak of cholera in any of our large cities, it would be easy to afford to him an opportunity of demonstrating the efficacy of his specific;" and an order from his Honour the Lieutenant-governor, N.W.P., has also been issued that his medicine would be duly tested on the occurrence of any outbreak of the disease.

THE PUNJAB BRIDGE DISASTERS.—While the bridges on the Punjab and Delhi Railway have given way both this season and last, the new piers for the great bridges on the New Punjab Northern State Railway have not wholly escaped. At the Jhelum, one pier, consisting of three wells, has wholly fallen, and one of the wells of another pier is so far out of perpendicular as to be in a hopeless condition. The main current which the protecting spurs were intended to guide square down through the piers went over to the other side above the site of the bridge, from which it turned back, slanting across the bed of the river and catching the piers in flank, the weakest point, when three wells are used. The floods on the Jhelum were this year much higher than even the great floods of last year, and have done much damage. A barge containing a steam-hoist was swept from its moorings and speedily foundered, the hoist being lost nobody knows where, and fragments of the boat picked up far down the river. The Ravee pile bridge is completely broken, about twenty or thirty spans being wanting. Most of the timbers however were recovered, as arrangements had been made to watch the progress of its breaking up. We have not heard whether the Grand Trunk Road has suffered materially, or any part of the State line besides the bridges. The Jhelum piers were not fully sunk, a bed of hard material having been arrived at in which progress was slow.—Indian Public Opinion.

THE MEMORIAL CHURCH AT CAWNPORE.—An urgent appeal is being made for funds to complete the interior embellishment of the Cawnpore Memorial Church, which will be consecrated soon after Christmas, 1872. It is proposed to order an organ, at a probable cost of Rs. 4,000, and a peal of bells and other requirements will be bought as funds are subscribed. The church is in the Lombard style, and is built of brick relieved with stone, with a campanile twelve feet high. It stands in the north-east corner of General Wheeler's entrenchment, the place of refuge in 1857 for nearly 1,100 of our countrymen and countrywomen, and defended by less than 300 fighting men, against 30,000 rebels, from June 7th to June 27th, in 1857. When the survivors were forced to capitulate, they were all, excepting two officers and two men who made good their escape, treacherously murdered by order of Nana Sahib. The tablets to the memory of some of these, and particularly of forty-three soldiers' wives and fifty-three children of H.M.'s 32nd Regiment, now in St. John's Church, will be reverently removed to the Memorial Church. The many objects of interest also in the compound of All Souls are to be carefully preserved. The Church Committee hope that "a liberal response will be made in all stations in India to this request for aid to render All Souls Memorial Church in all respects complete. Subscriptions will be thankfully received by the Chaplains of Cawnpore and Lucknow, or can be paid to the credit of the Memorial Church Fund in the Cawnpore Branch of the Bank of Bengal."—Friend of India.

SERIOUS OUTBREAK OF CHOLERA AT AGRA.—The rains in our locality are not all we would wish perhaps, but the place is comparatively healthy. All but two companies of the 65th have returned.

to barracks from camp, and no doubt very glad they are to occupy their comfortable quarters again. The other two companies also were preparing to return, but a case of cholera occurring a day or two ago keeps them at Rambag for a time. The case was not fatal; the patient is progressing favourably, but the camp must stand a little longer in consequence of it. We were very sorry to hear that there had been a severe outbreak of the scourge in St. Peter's College a few days ago. Many of the poor lads were prostrated by, it and several, we regret to say, have died. The institution was closed at once, and the boys dispersed. The College buildings were immediately abandoned. The boys who had no friends or relatives in the station or its vicinity were taken to Secundra, the buildings in which were promptly placed at the service of the College authorities. As there have not been any cases lately, we are justified in hoping that the spread of the disease has been effectually checked. We learn that cholera broke out with great severity on the morning of the 5th July among these boys—twenty-one being attacked that day, and eighty-two altogether in five days, of whom thirty-five have died. The rest of them were removed as soon as possible to Secundra, and there eight of the cases of cholera occurred; but they have had no cases at all for three days, and the boys enjoy the change very much.—Delhi Gazette, July 13.

OFFICIAL CHANGES IN THE PUNJAB.—The Lahore correspondent of a contemporary says:—"It is reported that a change is about to take place in the Registrarship of the Chief Court on the expiration of the privilege leave of the present officiating incumbent, who is to revert to his substantive appointment of Secretary to the Financial Commissioner. Mr. Miller is now away on leave, being recommended instant change and rest from labour by his medical advisers. It is hoped that after all this arrangement may be altered, and that Mr. Millar, as he has been very useful in his officiating appointment, and has been most popular with those who have had business with him, while being very highly thought of by the Judges of the Chief Court, will return to his acting appointment. Should he not, however, return to the appointment, Mr. F. D'O. Bullock, Q.S., Assistant Commissioner of Mooltan, is spoken of as amongst those likely to be appointed to act. The railway reductions that I alluded to in my last have taken place, four of the Engineering Staff having been served with the usual six months' notice of termination of their engagements. For the future the Engineering Staff is to consist of one Chief Engineer with a subordinate staff of seven engineers, the line from Mooltan to Delhi being divided into three divisions, with a District Engineer and assistant to each division. The scale of pay is as follows:—Three Engineers on Rs. 1,000 per mensem, two on Rs. 600, and two Juniors on Rs. 400 per month; the last two are to be at once imported from England. This will exactly cover the Rs. 5,000, which is the maximum the Government of India have determined to sanction. This restriction falls very hard on some of those who have been dispensed with. In one case the officer whose engagement has been terminated can boast of twelve years' steady and faithful service, and in the other cases none have been less than eight years in the Railway Company's employ."

DISTURBANCES IN BUNDELKUND.—The Jhansie correspondent of the Delhi Gazette writes:—"The Thakoors of Pulheira are in open revolt against their liege lord, the Rajah of Tehree; the true cause is not yet known, but it is supposed that tyranny and oppression are at the bottom. It is also said that before revolting the Chief of Pulheira had laid his grievances before the Political Agent, who refused to interfere. The Rajah of Tehree (or rather his Prime Minister, for the Rajah is only about 20 years old) sent an armed force and six guns against the rebel Thakoors, who it seems routed this valiant army, composed of a miserable rabble, paid wretchedly, and captured two of the six guns. The account given by a Bundela Chief of the contending parties will enable you to decide who are likely to be the victors. Sahib, said he, the Rajah's sepoys are paid three kucha rupees monthly, are a year or over in arrears, have their bullets tied in the corner of their ungochas (waistbands), and their shoes tied on to their feet with suttee; on the opposite side are some of the picked Thakoors of Bundelkund (mustering about 5,000 strong) fighting for their rights. The sympathy of the country is with the Pulheira Chief and his followers. During a spirited battle, which was fought the other day, from 50 to 100 men of the Rajah it is reported bit the dust, the loss of the Pulheira men being comparatively small. Prem Narain, Meer Munshee of the Agent G. G. Central India, is the Prime Minister; he is very unpopular, and on his return from Delhi the other day, where he had proceeded, enlisted and brought 150 men for his body guard, so much does he seem to be in dread of the Thakoors. The brave and would be wise of this station already suggest the necessity of a flying column to guard our frontier, but they always apprehend danger when there is none, while the officials at Lullutpore, with a military detachment at their disposal, are quaking in their shoes in consequence of a threat sent to them by Dulleep Sing, an escaped convict, to attack the station and burn the houses of the Deputy Commissioner and Civil Surgeon."

FLOODS IN THE PUNJAB RIVERS.—The rains continue throughout the Punjab, and all the rivers are high in flood. Yesterday the Jhelum was reported as remarkably high, and Mr. Grant, the Chief Engineer, Punjab Northern State Railway, at once left to see how the works were standing. On the Ravee the floods for the last five or six days have been very heavy, and fears were entertained for the temporary railway bridge. It was, however, expected that it would not stand the rain, and was built this year in sections, so that if pressure was strong on one section, it might go and leave the others unharmed. It was also, we believe, determined to partially dismantle the bridge by taking off the rails and heavy material so as to make the loss by breakage as light as possible. The first sign of weakness was the starting of one of the cross beams and the twisting of the bridge a foot out of the general line. Now it has quite given way, and portions of it have floated down the stream. For the most part the beams, posts, and trusses of the bridge had been well secured before the floods, but still a portion have gone down. We are glad to say a word in praise of the old favourite, the Ravee bridge of boats. It is true that the Ravee is not such a heavy river as the Chenab, or Sutlej, or Indus, or the Jhelum, but in its own channel the current is as fierce and the weight as heavy as anywhere in the Punjab. But the Ravee boat bridge is never taken up, but stands firm and solid when the Gazette announces the break up of bridges on every other river in the province. It has this last week been most severely tried, but has not given a foot. The anchors have been renewed, great new cables have been placed to link the boats together both at stem and stern, the superstructure has been strengthened, and all made snug for the strongest flood that can come. The ordinary traffic and Government dak have continued as before, and there is every hope of there being no interruption during the summer. The establishment of the bridge and the Executive Engineer have been exerting themselves day and night at the work of watching and strengthening the bridge works.—Indian Public Opinion, July 5.

STATION TALK.

NEGAPATAM, June 30.—Of course you have heard that Master Vencatachellummyah, the man who is so much wanted at the present moment by a paternal Government, and on whose precious self a price far above the value of other mortals has been set—is caught, and is now fast in the clutches of the law, or at all events of the police. A few particulars of his capture may not be without interest, so I will give you them. It appears Vencatachellummyah has been starting it in no less a place than Negapatam for the last three days. On Friday, and again on Saturday, he honoured the Madras Bank with a visit, on the latter day (yesterday) cashing no fewer than twenty 1,000 rupee notes at the same place! The extraordinary part of it is that on the man stating his business at the Bank, and presenting the notes to the agent himself, the forgery business flashed through the latter's mind (as no doubt it would have to anyone with a thousand rupee note before him just now), and the man after conversing in Telugu took a remark made in English by the agent. The notes, however, were genuine, and Vencatachellummyah walked off unmolested, the agent little thinking he was allowing the nice little sum of Rs. 10,000 to slip through his fingers. This morning a native while conversing with our Inspector of Police, Kistnasawmy Moodelly, mentioned casually that a man was at a certain chuttrum who appeared to be very flush of cash. The latter had only a few hours previously received a descriptive roll of Vencatachellummyah, and his suspicions being raised he made off "instantly" for the chuttrum. On arriving there, however, he was told that his man had left to proceed by the 8.30 train to Trivellore. There was yet time, and the inspector made for the station sharp. Here Vencatachellummyah was pointed out, and he proceeded in the most cool manner possible to enter into a conversation with him. Vencatachellummyah was not in the slightest degree disconcerted, and appeared as anxious to impart as the other was to obtain information. Presently Kistnasawmy said he was anxious to purchase certain jewellery; Vencatachellummyah hereupon pulled a heap from out the folds of his clothes, displaying at the same time a number of currency notes. This was the crisis, and Vencatachellummyah was marched off a prisoner. I hear, but I give it for what it is worth, that jewellery and notes to the value of more than two lacs of rupees have been found, so that Government will recover a great part of the value of the forged notes. Of Kistnasawmy's good fortune, and the chagrin of the Madras Bank agents, I need not talk. "Nothing venture nothing have" will probably be a motto the latter will not easily forget during the remainder of his life.

TREVANDRUM, June 27.—In your issue of the 6th inst., there appeared an article headed "Our Southern Collectories," in which it is stated that the "Protectorate of Travancore," among other portions of the extreme southern part of this Presidency, very urgently needs improvement, if not renovation, more especially with regard to the opening out of the country towards Madura and Tinnevely. Now, if you look at the last published Administration Report of Travancore, you will see it stated therein that several important lines of road have been in rapid progress, particularly those intended to connect Trevandrum and Quilon with Tinnevely on the Courtallum side; but, in alluding to the "Peermade Ghaut Road," the extension of which to the plains of Madura has long been contemplated, the writer of that report proceeds to question whether such extension is still necessary or desirable. He does not take it for granted that opening out the country in the direction indicated by you will necessarily be an improvement, and a benefit to the State. He wants to know first something about the description and quantity of produce grown in these portions of Madura that adjoin the Cardamom Hills—the cost of transit between that part and any port on the sea coast of the Coromandel side, whence such produce is now exported abroad—the distinction of that produce, &c. In short, whether there is any produce which, with the advantage of the proposed extension, Travancore can supply to Madura, or which Madura can export to or through Travancore more cheaply than at present. Well, it seems rather late in the day to want to know all this, you know. What has the head of the late Administration been about all the time that this very necessary scheme has been "so long contemplated"? Merely "contemplating," it would appear; and this wanting to know so much at last seems only too like an intention to postpone or shelve the question for a still further or indefinite period. Such a thing as a railway does not as yet appear to have been desired or even thought of by the Government of Travancore, though the Madras Government has lately had before it a scheme for a railway to pass near or through Travancore, among other railway schemes; but this scheme has not been sanctioned.

However, with regard to canals, endeavours are being made to establish unbroken communication between Trevandrum and Cochin, by cutting into and tunneling through that most objectionable natural obstacle the "Vurkally barrier," and carrying a canal through it. This work was commenced in 1870, and may be completed in a few years, if it does not in the meantime swallow up all the available resources of the State in cutting, boring, and blasting. But the "Southern Canal," which has been for years under construction, and regarding the real possibility of completing which in a satisfactory manner opinions have been much divided, appears to be still languishing.—Madras Times Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

MRS. BREEKS, the eldest daughter of the late Major-General Sir William Denison, K.C.B., and widow of the late Mr. J. W. Brecks, C.S., Commissioner of the Neilgherries, bid farewell to Madras yesterday, and proceeded to Europe in the Pekin s.s., accompanied by the kindest wishes of her many friends in this Presidency.—Madras Mail, July 10.

TRAVANCORE.—A vakeel of Travancore has presented a petition to the British President of Travancore and Cochin, praying that he will recommend the Travancore Government to frame an act regarding the admissibility of widow marriage similar to the Act 15 of 1856 obtaining in the British territories, and thus facilitate the progress of civilisation and humanity in Travancore.

THE WEATHER AT OOTACAMUND.—Just now the South-west monsoon is holding high revel at Ootacamund. Cold winds, dense clouds, and heavy rains, make up the weather. It is seasonable, and it is healthy; but it is not universally agreeable. Those who can go out of doors, protected by thick boots, waterproofs and umbrellas, have very much the best of it. Those who are compelled to remain indoors are not to be envied, especially if they have a leaky roof, damp firewood, and a smoky chimney.—South of India Observer, July 11.

VISIT OF LORD HOBART TO THE LAWRENCE ASYLUM.—Lord and Lady Hobart, accompanied by Captains Awdry and Willoughby, visited the Lawrence Asylum on Monday afternoon, where they were received by Colonels Walker and Farewell and Capt. Morant, superintending and executive engineers, and the Principal. After a two hours' inspection of the buildings and domestic arrangements of both the male and female branches, and having seen the children paraded before them, his Excellency and Lady Hobart expressed themselves extremely interested and pleased with all that they had seen, adding that the buildings and the management of the institution were all that could be desired.—South of India Observer, July 11.

THE DEPUTY REGISTRAR OF THE MADRAS HIGH COURT.—The following vague notification appears in the last Gazette:—"Certificate of Assumption of Charge.—Under the orders of the Chief Justice, Mr. Walter Morgan assumed charge of the office of Deputy Registrar of the High Court, Appellate Side, on the forenoon of the 25th inst." This would seem to imply that the Chief Justice's son has assumed charge only, and that the Government have not yet sanctioned the appointment. A reference has probably been made to the Duke of Argyll, who, in that case, will, we trust, set his face against a little arrangement that Sir Walter Morgan has set his heart upon, regardless of public opinion.—Madras Mail.

SUICIDE OF THE NOTE FORGER.—Vencatachellummyah, the person implicated in the great note forgery, who was arrested at Negapatam and his servant, have given the police the slip in an unexpected manner. The "revelations" hitherto made by the chief prisoner had proved delusive, but on Saturday he said that if he were taken to the Tripetty Hill he would then point out his correspondents and stock of forged notes. On Saturday evening the prisoners arrived at the railway station some fifteen miles distant from the sacred hill, and they were at once marched towards the hill under the charge of a native escort, the European officers not accompanying the party, in order not to offend the prejudices of the Brahmins by ascending their holy hill. Passing a deep pagoda tank on the way, the two prisoners, who were handcuffed together, suddenly plunged into the water and were lost to view. Such is the story that comes from Tripetty. The bodies have not been recovered. This will greatly diminish the chance of getting to the bottom of the conspiracy, and may lose the Negapatam inspector his reward.—Madras Times, July 17.

THE BANK OF MADRAS.—The following memoranda on the position of the Bank has been supplied to us in anticipation of the issue of the report:—"The net earnings of the Bank for the past six months, together with the balance of Rs. 1,922-10-5 brought forward from the previous half year, amount to Rs. 297,193-1-7 equal to a dividend on the Bank's capital at the rate of 10½ per cent. per annum. From this sum a deduction of Rs. 34,649-11-10 has been made for ascertained losses on past due bills, and a further sum of Rs. 113,552-0-1 together with Rs. 150,000 from the 'Reserve Fund,' making altogether Rs. 263,552-0-1 has been carried to credit of 'doubtful bill account,' and this amount will, it is believed, be amply sufficient to provide for all debts of a doubtful character either at Head Office or Branches. It may be mentioned that the necessity for this provision arises almost entirely from the unfortunate transactions of 1869 and 1870 at the Cochin and Alleppey branches. From the remainder of the profits the Directors have appropriated Rs. 140,625 to the payment of a dividend at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, leaving a balance of Rs. 8,366 5-8 to be carried forward to next half-year. The 'Reserve Fund' which stood at Rs. 550,000 on December 31 last, is now reduced to Rs. 400,000, being equal to a little more than 7 per cent. on the Bank's capital, or about the same proportion that the 'Reserve' of the Bank of Bengal bears to the capital of that institution according to the last returns. The annual report which will shortly be issued will give the proprietors full information in regard to the large amount transferred to doubtful bill account."—Madras Times, July 6.

PASSED IN PERSIAN.—Lieut. A. C. Talbot, Hydrabad Cavalry Contingent, is reported to have passed the examination for a Degree of Honour in Persian, and to be, in consequence, entitled to a gold medal. This is the first instance, we believe, on this side of India, in which any officer has passed so successful an examination in Persian.

A MUNIFICENT GIFT.—Sir Cowasjee Jehanghier has, we learn, with his usual munificence, given Rs. 2,000 to be devoted to Christian charities in this city, as a "thank offering," in addition to the £200 which he gave to the London Fever Hospital, on the occasion of the recovery of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales. The sum has been distributed as follows:—To the Cathedral Parish, Rs. 500; to the Scotch Orphanage, Mahim, Rs. 500; to the Indo-British Institution, Rs. 500; to Colaba Parish, Rs. 250; to the Pensioner's Home, Rs. 250; total, Rs. 2,000.

EXPORT OF COTTON FROM SIND.—From a statement submitted to Government by Mr. W. F. Carry, Acting Collector of Customs, Kurrachee, we see that during the last month 14,36,512 lbs., (3,659 bales), of the aggregate value of Rs. 3,90,800, were shipped from ports in Sind, in the Bombay Presidency, to foreign or external ports. Of these 1,382,416 lbs., valued at Rs. 3,72,300, were shipped to London; and 54,096 lbs., valued at Rs. 18,500, to Hong Kong. In addition to the above, 1,274 pressed bales of cotton, weighing 4,97,164 lbs., of the value of Rs. 1,58,800, were shipped to Bombay for transhipment to foreign ports.

THE DAKHAM COLLEGE.—It is rumoured that Mr. G. B. Reid, C.S., who had been appointed to fill the chair of English Literature in the absence of Professor Oxenham, declines taking on himself an onerous appointment.

ACCIDENT TO H. M. S. "BRITON."—On Thursday night last week H. M. S. Briton entered the harbour under sail. She left Muscat on the 20th June, shortly before the Cashmere left for Bombay. She encountered very bad weather, and when near Socotra her screw broke in consequence. She brings no news, except that parties near Muscat are still quarrelling. Shortly after leaving Rasal Head she passed a Turkish steamer which had left Muscat four or five days before her, and it was supposed that the weather had disabled the steamer and was making her put back to Muscat. The Briton, after her accident, found it would be impossible to get into Aden, where she was bound for, and so she took the direction of the wind and came to Bombay. She will go into dock to-day.—Bombay Gazette, July 19.

DEATH OF MISS RICHMOND.—When we mentioned the name of Miss Richmond in our issue of Tuesday in connection with Mrs. Cama's book, we little thought we should have to announce her death two days afterwards. Miss Jane Stuart Richmond, the Lady Superintendent of the Female Normal School here, died yesterday morning at eight o'clock, at Breach Candy, at the early age of twenty-nine. She came out to Bombay about three years ago to work in the cause of female education; and during the short period over which her labours extended she made herself beloved and respected by the large circle of pupils and friends whom she has now left to mourn her loss. Miss Richmond had been ailing for some weeks, but it was only within the past few days that a fatal termination of her sickness was apprehended. Her remains were interred at the Sewree Cemetery last evening.—Times of India, July 19.

COTTON EXPORTS FROM BOMBAY.—From a statement submitted to Government by Mr. L. Reid, C.S., Commissioner of Customs, we see that during June last 37,519,076 lbs., 96,112½ bales, of the aggregate value of Rs. 1,25,45,654, were shipped from the port of Bombay to foreign external ports and foreign Indian ports. Of these 29,332,084 lbs., of the aggregate value of Rs. 1,00,24,948, were shipped to Liverpool; 2,371,600 lbs., valued at Rs. 8,32,125, to Bremerhafen; 932,176 lbs., valued at Rs. 3,15,425, to Trieste; 58,800 lbs., of the value of Rs. 21,000, to Genoa; 1,303,568 lbs., valued at Rs. 4,63,490, to Havre; 78,400 lbs., valued at Rs. 28,000, to Marseilles; 480,200 lbs.; of the aggregate value of Rs. 4,64,000 to Venice; 801,904 lb., valued at Rs. 2,53,085, to Odessa, and 1,562,344 lbs., valued at Rs. 4,64,551, to Hong Kong.

ADDRESS TO DR. SIDNEY SMITH, GRANT MEDICAL COLLEGE.—"To Dr. Sidney Smith, M.D., late Professor of Hygiene, Grant Medical College.—Dear Sir,—We the undersigned students and student apprentices of Grant Medical College, beg leave to express our gratitude towards you for the innumerable benefits we derived from your valuable instruction, which we have had the fortune to receive from you during your tenure of different professorial duties in this College. In your sudden removal, Sir, from the chair of Hygiene, a removal which we do not for a moment hesitate to declare as at once undeserved and uncalled for, we not only lost the chance of gaining in future the valuable lectures which, being addressed in a familiar tone, did not fail to impress and enrich our minds, but a man who added grace to the professorial staff. Permit us, Sir, to say that you never spared any labours on your part to give us the benefit of your vast experience and high abilities as a scholar and medical man; and your genial spirits and complacent and thorough gentlemanly habits have won our hearts. We cherish the hope that although your direct connection with the College has ceased by your sudden separation you will always look back upon us with feelings of kindness, and should this our expression of gratitude go a little way to console your mind, troubled as it is with the harsh treatment you received, we, once your pupils, shall have achieved our aim.—We beg to remain, Sir, your most obedient pupils. Signed by nearly fifty Students.—Bombay, 12th July, 1872."

THE LOSHAI EXPEDITION.

Report dated Chittagong, March 30, 1872.

25. Vandoola, the brother of Sypooes, and their cousin, Vantonga, who together represent the whole of the Southern Howlongs, were said to be hourly expected, and their further hesitation to come in seemed so unlikely that I halted during the 10th and 11th. As they did not appear in that time, I made another forward movement on the 12th, and was met at the Kloong or Dullesurree River by Vantonga, whose captives were brought into camp at midnight, weeping bitterly at parting with their captors. The next morning Sangliena, the eldest son of Vandoola, presented himself, with excuses from his father, who was said to be ill. Rutton Pooea and Sypooes declared that such was really the case, and that they would vouch for the father fulfilling the engagements of the son, whatever they might be. I felt that the most satisfactory settlement of the doubt would be to continue my advance, but Vandoola's villages were still two if not three, long marches to the east—much further than I had anticipated; the heat was becoming excessive, and the coolies were quite exhausted by five months' continuous labour. My supplies, moreover, were barely sufficient, and hasty retirement under any circumstances was to be avoided. I therefore decided on accepting the young chief's submission on behalf of his father, and, accompanied by him, returned to Sypooes's. He took the oaths next day, and agreed to give up thirty captives, which Captain Lewin is confident will be made over in due time. The relationship of Rutton Pooea to Sypooes and Vandoola (he is married to their sister) will, I hope, now that our power has been demonstrated, prove the means of bringing the two last within the same pale of civilisation as the first. Sypooes is a very distinguished looking and intelligent Loshai, who so far succumbed to the animal magnetism of Captain Lewin, as to express a desire to accompany him and Rutton Pooea on a visit to Calcutta, which the latter chief is quite prepared for.

26. During the 14th and 15th, Captain Tanner, of the Survey, by dint of very hard walking, reached a peak to our south, 5,300 feet high, and added considerably to the valuable work he had already accomplished. On the 16th I commenced the return march to Demagiree, which the troops reached on the 19th, the two companies 4th Goorkhas and the Artillery proceeding down the river the same day. The head-quarters and six companies of the 4th Goorkhas, the whole of the 2nd Goorkhas, the company of Sappers, and all the ordnance stores had already been despatched towards Chittagong, where the head-quarters, 4th Goorkhas and six companies embarked for Calcutta on the 18th. Captain East, assistant quartermaster general, had proceeded to Chittagong, where, by means of the telegraph, he arranged for the downward despatch of troops and coolies, so that they should reach that place as required for embarkation, and that no crowding, which at this season of the year is specially to be avoided, should take place at any of the posts along the line. The same system will be pursued until the last coolie has been embarked, and there will not at any time be collected at Chittagong more than six hundred men of the coolie corps. On arrival at Demagiree I found that all that remained for me to do was to establish a small stockaded post, to hold one hundred men, near Rutton Pooea's village, and to provision it for seven months. Having satisfactorily arranged this matter, I started on the 20th from Demagiree, and arrived at Chittagong on the 24th.

27. The force under my command had now accomplished its task, and I may sum up briefly the results of the four months' campaign as being—the complete subjection of two powerful tribes, inhabiting upwards of sixty villages, of which twenty that resisted were attacked and destroyed; the personal submission of fifteen chiefs, and their solemn engagement on behalf of themselves and tributaries for future good behaviour; the recovery of Mary Winchester, and the liberation of upwards of one hundred British subjects who had from time to time been made captives. In addition, the operations of the column, which, by frequent departures from the main line of advance, as shown by the red lines on the map, covered a large area, and enabled the officers of the survey to triangulate three thousand square miles of country, more than half of which was surveyed in detail, and also to complete the connection between the Cachar and Chittagong districts.

28. Political and military considerations have been so mixed up in the conduct of this expedition, that, though I have been compelled to refer a good deal to the former, the very able civil officer with whom I have been associated, in endeavouring to carry out the objects of Government will submit in his own department a full report, showing the important part he has so successfully played. It is due to Capt. Lewin's strong personal influence over these tribes, his knowledge of their language and habits, added to his patience and sagacity in dealing with them, that a single chief submitted or a single captive was recovered. In expressing my thanks and acknowledgments for the assistance I have received from him, I am bound to record my belief that, if he were located with two or three hundred men for the next year, or even a few months, on the Demagiree range, while the impressions of our power and the friendliness of our intentions are still fresh, he would bring the Sylhoos and Howlongs into the same relations with us as Rutton Pooea and his men, to the permanent pacification of at least a portion of this frontier. Such a measure would be quite feasible without any increase to the local police force, as the nature of the position in question, apart from political considerations, would render unnecessary so many of the present small posts, which seem only to invite attack. It would also, in addition to its other recommendations, insure the health and efficiency of a certain number of men who are now every year prostrated by fever at a time when their services are most wanted.

29. As my periodical reports of the progress of the campaign will have shown the difficulties, privations, exposure, and sickness which the force has had to contend with in fighting its way through an unknown country, which presented unexampled physical obstacles to military operations, and which offered no resources whatever that could be turned to account, I have only now to commend to the notice of H.E. the C. in C. the admirable spirit and devotion with which those difficulties were overcome, and for which my thanks are due to every corps and department, and to every officer and man under my command.

I. The three fine regiments composing the infantry of the column, viz., the 2nd Goorkhas, under Col. Macpherson, c.s., v.c.; the 27th Regiment P.I., under Lieut. col. J. Doran; and the 4th Goorkhas, under Lieut. col. J. A. Tytler, v.c., were pushed to the front in the order of their arrival, and, though the submission of the Southern Howlongs deprived the two last of the same opportunities as the first, their posts and patrols were always liable to attack, and all shared equally in the cheerful performance of the most harassing duties for a period of nearly five months.

II. The (half) Peshawur mountain battery, under Lieut. colonel J. Hills, v.c., with coolie carriage, accompanied the head-quarters of the brigade throughout the expedition, and kept up with the infantry over the worst description of ground, coming into action whenever required, with a certainty, celerity, and effect which induces me to venture the opinion that for mountain warfare the 7-pounder steel gun is unequalled.

III. The third company sappers and miners, under Lieut. R. Maxwell Hyslop, R.E., worked all through the campaign with a willingness and intelligence worthy of the distinguished regiment to which they belong.

IV. The police of Chittagong Hill Tracts, under Mr. C. P. Crouch, rendered very valuable services, which have been referred to in my former reports.

V. The medical department, of which the duties were necessarily very severe, was most ably administered by the senior medical officer, Surg. major F. F. Allen, of the 2nd Goorkhas, who, in addition to his own work, as well as that of the headquarter camp, performed the office of Deputy inspector general with a care and foresight which relieved me of all anxiety, and for which I cannot sufficiently thank him. Surgs. W. C. Smith and G. C. Chesney, in medical charge of the 27th P.I. and 4th Goorkhas respectively, and Asst. surg. R. T. Lyons, who acted as medical storekeeper at Kassalong to Dr. Allen's complete satisfaction, and who displayed much energy and judgment during the prevalence of cholera at that place; and Staff asst. surg. E. R. Johnson and C. J. W. Meadows also rendered excellent services.

VI. The Commissariat Department, under Major A. Mackenzie, assisted by Captain C. Case and Lieut. C. Hallett, maintained its high character in the face of difficulties which, I believe, to be without precedent in the annals of Indian expeditions. The staff at his disposal was insufficient for the long line of communication, and a great deal of the work of the department had to be done by officers commanding posts, yet little was left to be desired, and Major Mackenzie is entitled to my hearty acknowledgments for the untiring energy and the cordiality with which he carried out my plans and wishes.

VII. The Survey Department, under Major J. Macdonald, deputy surveyor general, with whom was associated Captain H. C. B. Tanner, assistant surveyor general, achieved results which I have already referred to, and which Major Macdonald's report more fully describes. These officers were almost invariably present with the head-quarters of the brigade, and, in addition to their other duties, afforded me much valuable advice and assistance. Major Macdonald attached himself to the 2nd Goorkhas throughout the campaign, and took part with them in all their encounters with the enemy.

VIII. The Coolie Corps, under Major G. A. Brown, on which so much depended, surpassed my highest expectation. Notwithstanding sickness and the continued strain on their powers, the men, particularly the Punjabees, laboured to the end with a spirit and discipline that reflected the greatest credit on Major Brown, who was ably assisted by Captain C. H. Palmer.

IX. The Hill Coolie Corps, employed on the canoe service between Burkhul and Demagiree, which at one time threatened to break down, owing to the desertion of the men, was brought into perfect working order by Captain F. H. Hood, and I am much indebted to him, and to Mr. Cochran, the deputy commissioner hill tracts, who, under great difficulties, kept up the coolies to the required strength, for their exertions in a matter of vital importance to the force.

X. The telegraph line to Demagiree was rapidly erected under the orders of Mr. Flindell, superintendent, assisted by Mr. Hare. It proved of the greatest service, and has throughout been most efficiently worked.

30. In addition to Capt. Lewin, whose political services I have before acknowledged, and Mr. H. Hankey, the commissioner, to whose energetic measures of assistance and unflagging interest in its welfare the expedition owes so much, I would beg specially to recommend to the notice of H.E. the Commander-in-Chief and the Government of India the following officers:—

Col. H. T. Macpherson, c.b., v.c., 2nd Goorkhas, whose services, and those of the officers and men of the distinguished regiment he commands, are recorded in almost every page of my reports, and to whose high character and reputation I feel I can add nothing. Lieut. col. J. Doran, commanding 27th Punjab Infantry, and Lieut. col. J. A. Tyler, v.c., commanding 4th Goorkhas, who, in addition to the charge of their own corps, exercised important commands on the line of operations, and who gave me the most active support throughout. Lieut. col. J. Hills, v.c., commanding Peshawar Mountain Battery, who with his guns played a prominent part in the campaign. Major A. Mackenzie, assistant commissary general, Major G. A. Brown, commanding Coolie Corps, Major J. Macdonald, deputy surveyor general, and Surg. major F. F. Allen, senior medical officer, all of whose names are mentioned in the preceding paragraphs, acknowledging the services and efficiency of their respective corps and departments. Major D. Macintyre and Capt. A. Battye, 2nd Goorkha regiment, and Lieut. R. M. Hyslop, R.E., who have been so frequently mentioned in my periodical despatches.

Finally, I would beg to commend to H.E.'s protection my own staff, whose labours and anxieties for the last six months have been incessant, viz.:—Captain C. J. East, assistant quartermaster general, whose services have been second to those of no other officer under my command. I need only refer to the nature of the expedition, and the constant movements of troops and coolies up and down a long line of communication by road, river, and sea, to show what the duties of his department have been; to the clearness, promptness, and tact with which those duties were carried out, as well as to the active assistance in the field rendered me by this able and accomplished officer, I am indebted for any measure of success that may have attended the operations of the column.

Captain C. E. Bates, brigade major, to whose energy, ability, and official experience as such I can bear the highest testimony, and who also rendered valuable service in the quartermaster general's department in the Southern Howlong Expedition, where he was the only staff officer present with me, and when detached from head-quarters both at the beginning and close of the campaign, for the purpose of facilitating the movements of troops.

Captain J. G. Cockburn, my A.D.C., who, in addition to his own duties, which he discharged with a zeal and intelligence worthy of a higher post, made himself most useful in signalling, and by his previous experience on the Brigade Staff, both in quarters and in the field, added materially to my assistance in every department of the command.

CHARTERED BANK OF INDIA, AUSTRALIA, AND CHINA.—Mr. Emile Levita (of Messrs. Levita and Hudson, of London and Manchester) has joined the Direction of the Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China.

BILLS ON INDIA.—Tenders for £600,000 in bills on India were received on Wednesday, the 7th inst., at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta, £436,400; to Bombay, £160,000; and to Madras, £3,600. The minimum price was fixed, as before, at 1s. 10½d. on all the Presidencies. Tenders on Calcutta and Madras at 1s. 10½d. will receive about 71 per cent., and on Bombay at that price in full. The average rate on Calcutta was 1s. 10½d.; and on Bombay and Madras, 1s. 10¾d.

A. N. SHAW, ESQ., INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE.—The sudden death of this gentleman is announced, which took place at York-place, Regent's-park, on August 4. Mr. Shaw was one of the representatives of Marylebone at the Metropolitan Board of Works, and formerly held a very high position in the Indian Civil Service at Bombay. He was chairman of Sir Thomas Chambers's committee at both his elections for the borough, and was highly respected. The cause of Mr. Shaw's sudden death was heart disease.

MILITARY.—It is not easy for us in England to conjecture how the vacant Indian Brigades will be bestowed, but should they be filled, as they more than probably will, from the British List, Colonel Hankey, recently selected for the command of the 62nd Regiment from a Majority in the 9th, would appear likely to get one; and Colonel Knox, 18th Hussars, another. Colonel Fitz Wygram will, we doubt not, be offered a change before very long; and Colonels Hume, of the 55th, and Boyle, 89th, are both of them certain of appointment, sooner or later, if they continue serving as we have reason to believe it is their intention to do.—Army and Navy Gazette.

GENERAL GRIFFITH, R.A.—We have to announce the death of this veteran officer, of the Royal (late Bombay) Artillery, which took place on July 31, at Boulogne. The late General Griffith, who was in his 81st year at the time of his death, obtained his first commission in the East India Company's service as first lieutenant in 1810, and was senior officer on the Bombay list, and was appointed colonel commandant of the 21st Brigade of the Royal Artillery in July, 1845. He was present with Colonel East's force on the 20th of April, 1811, at the storm and capture of the forts of Chyah, in Kattywar, and the capitulation of the forts of Possitra and Okhamundel in August the same year; also at the siege of Nowannuggur, under the command of Colonel Lionel Smith, on 24th February, 1812. He served with the first troop of Horse Artillery throughout the Deccan campaign of 1814 to 1817, under the command of Brigadier-General Sir Lionel Smith; at the capture of the city of Poona, for which he received a medal and clasp; was present on the 11th February, 1818, at the siege of Sattara, the taking of the hill forts of Singhur, Foorundhur, and at the capitulation of the hill forts of Chundea, Wunder, Kenzighur, Jooneer, Chowan, and Jodhun, in the Deccan, in May and June, 1818; and also at the taking of Hurrichunderghur, by the force under Major Eldridge. For his services in the Deccan he received the thanks of the Government.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, MONDAY, August 5.—AN OBJECTIONABLE QUESTION.—Mr. LOWTHER, in the absence of General Forester, asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether Mr. Denis Fitzpatrick, who in 1864 was Judge of the Small Cause Court at Delhi, and agent to the Government of India in defending two suits brought against them in the Deputy Commissioner's Court at Delhi, by the representative of the Begum Sombre, and who, as it appeared by evidence in that court, in the same year was found to have obtained possession of papers from the public records in the Government collector's office at Meerut, was the same Denis Fitzpatrick who, for upwards of three years, had been, according to the Indian Official Civil List, receiving a salary of £1,600 a year for superintending the said suits in this country on the part of the Government of India.—Mr. GRANT DUFF: The hon. and gallant member's question has taken me by surprise. No one who I have been able to see ever heard a whisper of such a story, and I am told that the gentleman in question, whom I never saw, and about whom I know nothing personally, has the highest reputation for honour. It is a pity that the hon. and gallant member, before he asked a question reflecting on private character, did not think it desirable to give the representative of India in this House a somewhat longer notice, especially as Mr. Fitzpatrick has been employed to watch a case adverse to the hon. and gallant gentleman's private interests.—After several interpellations, the subject was dropped as being out of order.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, TUESDAY, August 6.—THE INDIAN BUDGET.—Mr. FAWCETT had given notice of a Resolution condemning the Income-tax, to be moved by way of amendment to the ordinary motion for going into Committee on the East India Accounts; but Mr. GRANT DUFF, instead of waiting until the House was in Committee, made his statement in moving the Speaker out of the Chair.—Mr. FAWCETT protested against this course, but the SPEAKER decided it was quite regular, and Mr. GRANT DUFF, after a few preliminary observations, proceeded to lay before the House some of the principal facts of the financial position of India, dividing his statement, as usual, into three epochs—the “actual year,” ending March, 1871, the “regular Estimate” year, ending March, 1872, and the “Budget Estimate” year, ending next March. With regard to the first period, while the actual Revenue had exceeded the Estimate by £1,088,000, the expenditure had fallen short of the Estimate by £1,482,000, showing an increase of Revenue over the preceding year of £512,000, and a diminution of Expenditure of £851,000. For the regular Estimate year 1871-72 the Revenue was £50,018,686, and the Expenditure £47,282,356, and the Budget Estimate for the coming year put the Revenue at £48,771,000, and the Expenditure £48,534,000, leaving a surplus of about a quarter of a million. The decrease in the Revenue was due chiefly to opium and assessed taxes. After some explanation with regard to the Cash Balances, Mr. Duff took a wider survey of the financial condition of the country, comparing the Revenue and Expenditure with former epochs. For instance, since the year 1861 the income drawn from India amounted to £569,000,000, and we had spent there £576,500,000. But for this excess of Expenditure over income of seven millions, India had obtained thirty-seven millions and a half in public property—viz.,—seven millions and a-half in public roads, eight millions in canals, a million and a-half in harbours, six-and-a-half millions in Civil buildings, eleven millions in Military buildings, and two millions and three-quarters in State railways. Next he mentioned several circumstances illustrating the progress of the country, such as the increase of the Exports and Imports, the success of the Suez Canal, the high price of the Indian Funds, &c., and speaking generally, though not blind to all elements of future danger, he gave a categorical denial to the assertion that India is discontented and unprosperous. Finally, he replied by anticipation to Mr. Fawcett's Resolution, pointing out that the opinion of Lord Mayo, on which it rested, was given in 1870, and asserting from his own knowledge that the late Viceroy would not have repeated that opinion now. He denied, too, that the natives were discontented with the Income-tax. He expected no kind of good from Mr. Fawcett's speech, which was in direct defiance of the Resolution of the Select Committee and if only half-a-dozen members followed the same course, all business would be brought to a stop.—Mr. FAWCETT then moved his resolution, which, reciting an opinion of the late Lord Mayo, that a feeling of discontent exists in every class in India in consequence of the constant increase of taxation, condemns the Income-tax, and declares the necessity of care and economy for the reduction of other taxes. After complaining bitterly of the delay of the Budget until the last days of the Session, Mr. Fawcett reviewed at considerable length the finances of India, contending that while the revenue is inelastic the expenses of administration were constantly increasing, and must increase, owing to the gradual and inevitable rise in prices, and to the large expenditure on Public Works to which we were committed. We governed India, he insisted, far too expensively; and to illustrate the careless extravagance which marked our administration, he cited many facts connected with the construction of the railways and other public works. In condemnation of the principle of an Income-tax as applied to India, he quoted the opinions of many leading Indian authorities, and the obstinacy in retaining such an unpopular tax showed to what a desperate point Indian finances had been brought. But in order to dispense with the necessity for the tax, increased vigilance and economy were needed; our military expenditure must be cut down, and public works, which could only be executed by loans and by the mischievous system of guarantees, must be given up. On these points Mr. Fawcett expatiated at great length, and had not concluded his speech when the debate stood adjourned at ten minutes to seven o'clock. The debate on the Indian Budget was then resumed by Mr. FAWCETT, who recapitulated the principal heads of his morning's arguments, and concluded by calling on the House, in a glowing peroration, to enforce on the Indian Government the sound and economical financial policy embodied in his Resolution.—Mr. M'CULLAGH TORRENS seconded the Resolution, urging a reduction in the Military Expenditure, and objecting to so much dependance being placed on the opium and salt revenues. He was for making the discussion of the Indian Budget more of a reality, and generally took a gloomy view of the financial condition of India.—The discussion was continued in a very thin House by Mr. R. FOWLER, who strongly condemned the opium traffic; by Mr. E. SMITH, who described the impressions derived from a recent visit to India, discussed the opium traffic, and recommended an equalisation of the Salt Duties; by Sir D. WEDDERBURN, who made various suggestions for reducing expenditure,—such as a consolidation of the three Presidencies, and more frequent employment of natives in the public service; and by Mr. EASTWICK, who discussed and replied to the objections taken to the Income-tax. He was interrupted by an attempt to count out the House, which proved unsuccessful, and he went on to express his opinion that this was the best Budget we had seen for many years, attributing the credit of the chief features of it to Lord Mayo.—Sir JOHN LUBBOCK took the same view of the Income-tax, as an essential part of a sound system of Indian finance; and, after some remarks from Mr. DICKINSON, Mr. KINNAIRD, Mr. MAGNIAC, Mr. WHALLEY, and Mr. EYKYN, Mr. Fawcett's amendment was withdrawn. The House then went into Committee, and Mr. GRANT DUFF having replied on various points raised in the debate, the usual resolution was agreed to.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, WEDNESDAY, August 7.—SUEZ CANAL DUES.—In reply to Mr. GOURLEY, Viscount ENFIELD said that, in consequence of communications from the Italian Government, and other quarters, on the subject of the intended imposition by the Suez Canal Company of tonnage dues of ten francs on the gross tonnage, Sir Henry Elliot was instructed to ascertain the views of the Turkish Government upon the matter, and he reported that the Porte was at first disposed to think that the company were not justified under the terms of the concession, in considering the total capacity as gross tonnage; but, according to a further despatch, that the Porte had come to the conclusion that the company might charge gross tonnage dues, making some allowance for engine and coaling space. That was also the view of the law officers of this country. He thought there was no doubt that the international neutrality of the canal was provided for in one of the stipulations of the treaty.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, August 8.—COURT OF INQUIRY AT MADRAS.—Mr. GRAVES asked the President of the Board of Trade if his attention had been called to the decisions of the Madras Court of Inquiry suspending the certificates of the commanders of several ships lost at that port during the late cyclone, and if the same had received the approval of the Board of Trade; and if the said Court of Inquiry was duly constituted.—Mr. CHICHESTER FORTESCUE was unable to give the hon. member any information at the present moment on the subject of his questions. The report of the Court of Inquiry was expected by the next mail.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, FRIDAY, August 9.—INDIAN REGIMENTS.—Colonel BARTELOT gave notice that on the bringing in of the Army Estimates next Session he would call attention to the time that regiments served in India, believing that the period of service might be much shortened.

THE INDIAN BUDGET.—Mr. R. N. FOWLER gave notice that next session he would move that in the opinion of this House it was desirable that the annual statement as to the financial affairs of India should be made at a period of the session when it could be fully discussed.

MR. DENIS FITZPATRICK.—General FORESTER moved for papers relating to the former conduct of Mr. Denis Fitzpatrick.—Mr. GRANT DUFF, in agreeing to the motion with an addition, read a long letter fully explaining Mr. Fitzpatrick's conduct, and declared that there were no grounds for impeaching his character.—Mr. R. GURNEY and Mr. NEWDEGATE also expressed an opinion that the imputation ought never to have been made.

Spirit of the Home Journals.

THE INDIAN BUDGET.

The Times holds that Mr. Fawcett's own arguments supply an answer to his worst conclusions. He insists on the elasticity of expenditure and the inelasticity of revenue in India, and he arrives at the conclusion that the amount of expenditure must not be increased—or, rather, that having been increased, it must be reduced—because it is impossible to augment the revenue of the Empire. But why is the expenditure elastic? The expenditure has risen simply because of the rise in prices all over the world—a rise which has been aggravated in India by the fact that £172,500,000 in coin and bullion has been poured into the country in the course of the last eleven years to balance the course of trade. The cost of living has thus increased, and wages have increased, and the expenditure of the Government has increased. All this is true, but there is another side. Suppose, for the sake of clearness of ideas, that wages and the price of commodities have each risen 40 per cent. The expenditure of the Government will not have risen in this proportion, because part of this expenditure—interest on debt and subventions in the shape of guaranteed interest on railway stock—is fixed and independent of prices; but the means of the taxpayer will have risen in the full proportion of the rise of wages. Mr. Fawcett will, of course, answer that the most important branch of the revenue—the land tax—is fixed; but this reply evades the point. The particular items which have hitherto made up the Indian revenue may be incapable of considerable increase; some of them, as the opium profit, may be precarious; but if the increase of expenditure does not exceed, and, in fact, falls short of the increase in prices, it must be possible to increase the revenue commensurately without adding to the burden of the Indian taxpayer. What is wanted is a financier who shall tap the means of the people proportionally to their increase. We do not disparage any demand for economy in expenditure, but a cry for economy in expenditure because prices are rising condemns the expenditure that existed before prices rose. If the expenditure was at first no more than good government required, any increase in it due to a rise in prices, especially in a country like India, where fixed incomes are unknown outside the governing class, ought to be met by a proportionate increase of taxation. We believe the truth to be that we are not yet sufficiently informed in England to pronounce judgment on the financial condition of India. This was the conclusion of the select committee which adjourned the other day after sitting through a second session, and simply reported to the House the evidence it had received, and recommended that it be appointed next year. Mr. Grant Duff quoted this conclusion with great complacency at the close of his speech, as a refutation in advance of what Mr. Fawcett was about to say, and as a justification of what he had himself said; but those who have followed in any degree the proceedings of the select committee know that the judgment was a severe reflection on the ignorance of India at the India Office. The committee declared that no just opinion could be formed on Indian finance, because necessary explanations on many obscure points could not be furnished by the India Office, and had not been obtained from India, though in some cases twelve months had elapsed since information had been applied for. The select committee resolved that it was advisable to wait another year to see whether the Government in India can supply the knowledge the Indian Government at home requires; and we are bound to admit the prudence and justice of their delay.

The Daily News observes that the Indian financial statement was made by Mr. Grant Duff in the circumstances which may almost be called inseparable from such a proceeding. The House was three parts empty. The front bench on the Ministerial side was almost a solitude, the front bench of Opposition was in a somewhat similar condition. A few members were scattered at either side of the House. Except the indefatigable men who, like Mr. Henley, for instance, attend to everything, there were hardly any of those present who had not some special and obvious interest in the affairs of India. There were the members who once lived in India, or have travelled there; the members who once held office connected with the Indian Empire; the two or three members who have written books about it; the handful of men who have a philanthropic interest in the general subject, or have made a political study of it, or cherish a crotchets about it. For the great bulk of the members of the House the affairs of India have evidently no interest. Mr. Grant Duff might have seemed to be entrusted with the task which Handel, according to the story, could not accomplish—that of playing the people out of the building. What Mr. Fawcett yesterday sought was to direct the public attention to the general administration of the finances of India. In this object he fairly succeeded. Late as the period is, and great as the impatience of members anxious for release, it was felt to be impossible that so important a subject, so serious an arraignment of a whole policy, could be allowed to pass away without a full and exhaustive discussion.

The Morning Post considers that Mr. Fawcett's contention with regard to the Income-tax cuts both ways. "If it contributes little to the revenue it cannot press severely on the population; and it is a fact which deserves to be considered in connection with this question that Lord Mayo, on whose opinions on Indian finances Mr. Fawcett mainly founded his resolution, not only restored the income-tax, but largely increased it, in the first year and a-half of his administration. In point of fact this tax is paid by only one out of every four hundred of the population; and the most representative of the native Indian journals has confessed that there is no substantive ground of complaint against this source of revenue. But, putting all these matters aside, Mr. Fawcett's resolution has this palpable defect, that it invited the House to express its opinion on a subject which is under the consideration of a select committee whose labours cannot be completed during the present session. As a member of that committee it was especially unbecoming in Mr. Fawcett to attempt to forestall its decision. The House has entrusted it to the task of investigating the whole subject of Indian finance, and it is bound to wait until the committee has made its report before it prefers Mr. Fawcett's crotchets to the well-considered statement of the Government."

The Right Hon. Earl GRANVILLE, K.G.

HEAD MASTER.

Rev. WM. BELL, M.A., Chr. College, Cambridge.

TERMS:—

Tuition Fees, from Ten to Fifteen Guineas per annum, according to age.

Charge for Boarders in Head Master's House, £40, in addition to School Fees.

INDIAN LANGUAGES.—INSTRUCTIONS given on exceedingly Moderate Terms in SANSKRIT, Arabic, Hindustani, Bengali, and Persian, by the Rev. G. SMALL, M.A., long Missionary in Bengal and the N.W. Provinces of India (Author of "Hand Book of Sanskrit Literature," &c.), 24, Wellington-street, Strand.

BROOKE HOUSE SCHOOL,
BURY ST. EDMUND'S.

PRINCIPAL—MR. ROBERT CRASKE.

PROSPECTUS.

Mr. CRASKE desires to receive Boys at an early age—as soon as they can read well—in order that he may have charge of their Education from the very commencement of their studies.

Great care is taken that the elementary subjects are first thoroughly mastered, and that each Boy writes a good legible hand.

The next two or three years are devoted to Classical and Mathematical work; and Mr. CRASKE is confident that the best of his Boys will be found able, at the age of Thirteen, to compete successfully for the various Scholarships now open to competition at Eton, Harrow, Winchester, and other great Public Schools.

The Classical and English Department is under the direction of the Rev. W. A. OSBORNE, B.A., Graduate in Classical Honours of Brasenose College, Oxford.

Mr. CRASKE himself takes charge of Arithmetic, Euclid, Algebra, and the higher Mathematics. Each Boy, in these subjects, is under his own personal instruction.

The French and German Languages are taught by competent Masters.

TERMS:

For each Boarder ... 60 Guineas.

Those who remain after Thirteen

Years of Age ... 80 Guineas.

Day Boys and Weekly Boarders by Special Agreement.

These Terms include Drawing and Drilling. The charge for Laundress is also included. The only extra subject is German, the charge for which is Two Guineas per Quarter.

Mr. CRASKE considers it an essential part of a Boy's Education that he should be taught to Swim. He has, therefore, constructed a Bath twenty-five feet in length, with warming apparatus, to carry out this object effectually.

There are three Vacations in the year—a fortnight at Easter, seven weeks at Midsummer, and five weeks at Christmas.

ROWLANDS' MACASSAR OIL

Is the best and safest Restorer and Beautifier of the Human Hair.

Perfectly free from any poisonous or mineral admixture, its certain good effects are lasting, even to the latest period of life, it prevents hair from falling off or turning grey, strengthens weak hair, cleanses it from scurf and dandruff, making it beautifully soft, pliable, and glossy. Great caution is necessary to ask for ROWLANDS' MACASSAR OIL, and avoid all others, this being the only genuine. Price 3s. 6d., 7s., 10s. 6d., equal to four small, and 21s. per bottle. Sold by all Chemists, Perfumers, and all at Bazaars.

DINNEFORD'S FLUID MAGNESIA.

The Medical Profession for thirty years have approved of this pure Solution of Magnesia as the best remedy for Acidity of the STOMACH, HEARTBURN, HEAD-ACHE, GOUT, and INDIGESTION; and as the best mild aperient for delicate constitutions, for Ladies, Children, and Infants; and for REGULAR USE in Warm Climates.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS

Thousands of instances might be cited in which general debility, low spirits, and nervous irritations, the consequence of dyspepsia or indigestion, have yielded to a short course of this alternative medicine. These Pills soon give tone to the stomach, renovate the digestive powers, purify the blood, and give strength to the whole system. Sluggishness of the body and depression of the mind are succeeded by a cheerful activity of the physical and mental functions. Indigestion is the parent of so many evils, and is so common, so universal a complaint that it is a great blessing such a remedy as this invaluable medicine should have been discovered. No one need long suffer from indigestion with these Pills at hand.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER

TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 500 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often baneful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer.

Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 36s. 6d., and 31s. 6d., postage, free. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, free. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, free.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS, &c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s., to 16s. each; postage, free.

This Association has been formed for the purpose of supplying what has been long and painfully felt as a want by all Departments of the Indian Services, as well as the Anglo-Indian public generally. The Business it will undertake will consist of Banking and Agency in all its Branches connected with the East, at adequate Commissions. Success will depend more on the Credit and Character of the Company than upon a large Capital; and, as the business will be at once safe and comprehensive, the profits ought to admit of handsome dividends being realised for the shareholders.

The Banking operations of the Company will be conducted with the view principally of attracting the more profitable Agency business of the Civil and Military Services, and the accounts of professional and other persons who are not engaged in large commercial transactions, coupled with the Insurance Accounts, and other Agencies, which must follow such a line of Business.

The Civil and Military, Covenanted and Uncovenanted, Servants of the Indian Government are now a very large body, and the different Members of the Government Services in that country are in receipt of liberal Incomes. Many of these gentlemen frequently require temporary accommodation, which they have difficulty in obtaining, unless at exorbitant rates; and to make such advances, when covered by adequate collateral security, will be one of the principal objects of this Company; in the different Presidencies there are a large number of gentlemen, European and native, in receipt of moderate allowances, which are paid with the greatest punctuality, and who might be advantageously assisted under the careful system of management which will characterise the Business to be conducted by this Company.

A moderate Commission on the collection of Furlough Pay, and Pensions of the Indian Government Constituents will, in itself, afford a good income.

The following classes of Business will also be undertaken by this Agency:—

- 1.—To receive and remit Pay, Salaries, Pensions, Dividends, Fund Allowances, and every other description of Income.
- 2.—To undertake the Agency of H.M.'s Service (Army and Navy), and others, both in India and England.
- 3.—To make remittances to and from India at the Exchange of the day.
- 4.—To keep Current Accounts on the principle adopted by London Bankers, with or without Commission, and with or without an allowance of Interest, according to Agreement, and to receive Fixed Deposits at agreed Rates.
- 5.—To secure Passages by the Steamers of the Peninsular and Oriental Company, the Austrian Lloyd's, the Messageries Maritimes, and the Societa d'Adriatico Italiano, and by all other Vessels running to and from India.

- 6.—To execute orders of every kind, both at home and in the East, including the Transport and Warehousing of Furniture and Baggage, taking houses and apartments and similar services.

The completion and opening up of the Railways throughout India, and the large increase of through traffic between the two countries since the opening of the Suez Canal, show clearly the wide field for this part of the Company's operations.

Co-operative Store Departments, under the direction of this Agency, will be established in India. As this is a field, up to the present time undeveloped and much required, it is only reasonable to anticipate that a success equal to that achieved by such establishments in England will result, and a large connection will in consequence be secured for the Company. Many Indian families in this country reside in the West-end of London; it is therefore proposed to open a Branch there also, and to secure accommodation for the especial reception and warehousing of Baggage, &c., &c.

A portion of the Shares will be reserved for Subscribers in India.

No promotion money is payable, but 1,500 fully paid up Shares have been appropriated for the benefit of the Founders of the Company, as provided in the Articles of Association.

Copies of the Memorandum and Articles of Association to be seen on application to the Solicitors or at the Company's Offices.

Applications for Shares addressed to the Directors in the enclosed Form will be received by Messrs. BARCLAY, BEVAN, TRITTON, TWELLS, and Co., 54, Lombard-street, London, Bankers to the Company; by JOHN DAVIES, Esq., Secretary to the Company; and by I. H. DUDGEON, Esq., at 6½, Austin Friars, Old Broad-street, E.C., where the offices of the Company are (pro tem.), of whom Prospectuses may be obtained.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR SHARES.

To be Retained by the Bankers.

To the Directors of THE EAST INDIAN CIVIL, MILITARY, AND COMMERCIAL AGENCY (Limited).

Gentlemen,—Having paid to your Bankers the sum of £ being a Deposit of £1 per Share, I hereby request you will allot me

NOTICE.

Owing to the frequent irregularity of late in the arrival of the Indian Mails, our readers will no doubt excuse us for reverting from our recent rule of publishing this Journal every Monday, to the older system of publication on the arrival of every Overland Mail.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail, which came in more than two days after time, owing we believe to stormy weather somewhere, are—from Bombay, July 26; Agra and Madras, July 24; Calcutta, July 23.

Nothing of much general importance appears to be going on anywhere. Liakat Ali, the "Moolvie" of Allahabad in 1857, has been tried before the Sessions Judge of Allahabad, and sentenced to transportation for life. Instead of being thankful for his escape from hanging, the Moolvie has resolved to appeal against his sentence.

FROM Jacobabad in Sindh come tidings of destructive floods, which have buried half the cantonments, and caused a breach in the Makanwai Canal. The destruction of railway-bridges in the Punjab is said to have raised a serious question, as to the expediency of being for the time content with pontoon bridges over rivers which, in any heavy monsoon, rush down with a force that nothing solid can withstand. A good deal of expense will have to be incurred in repairing the damages of the present season, unless the State makes up its mind to substitute pontoons for works of a costlier nature but less adapted to the strain of a Punjab flood.

AT the last meeting of the Legislative Council at Simlah the whole of the business, consisting chiefly of the last touches given to the Christian Marriage Bill, was got over in a few minutes. The Bill, as amended in Committee, provides special safeguards against the practice of polygamy by British subjects, under the cloak of religious conversions like that of Mr. Green at Madras, who turned Mohammedan in order to get rid of one wife and marry another.

RUMOURS are busy about the Viceroy's future movements, but the truth appears to be that nobody as yet knows anything about them. It is not unlikely however that Lord Northbrook will take a long journey in the cold weather through Upper India, reaching Calcutta in time to meet some members of his family on their arrival from England.

LORD HOBART has been inspecting schools and charitable institutions on the Nilgherries. Sir Philip Wodehouse was to hold a meeting of his Council at Ganesh Kind, on the 27th July, when Mr. Tucker would ask for a further postponement of the Bombay Municipal Bill. Mr. Campbell, Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, has started on a tour to the Hazaribagh districts after inspecting some of the Calcutta schools. He has ordered a new arrangement of the districts of Bengal, which is to be followed in the Census Reports and in all future departmental reports and statements.

WE are glad to hear that Generals Goldsmid and Pollock are making steady progress with the negotiations relating to the Seistan Boundary Commission. Unless unforeseen difficulties arise, the Indian Foreign Office may in a week or two be able to publish some definite results of these negotiations.

THE cholera appears to have so far abated in Sabathu and Kussowlie, that no fresh seizures were reported thence, nor had any more persons died by latest accounts. One imported case had occurred at Simlah.

BISHOP MILMAN is to leave Calcutta on the 9th September on a visitation tour through the Punjab. His journey will occupy about four months.

THE new Bank of Bombay is said to have secured for the next twelve months the contract hitherto held by the Bank of Bengal for the supplies required by the Government Treasury at Indore.

It is generally believed that Mr. Dampier, now acting as Home Secretary to the Indian Government, will not return to the Bengal Secretariat.

THE Dengue Fever has been so prevalent among the sepoy on garrison duty in Madras, that two companies of the 13th N.I. had been ordered from Palaveram to help the regiments stationed at Madras in furnishing the needful number of garrison guards.

CAPTAIN FISHER of the 22nd Madras N.I. had a narrow escape from death at Palamcottah. He was bitten in the finger by a very poisonous snake, of the "carpet" kind; but with happy presence of mind, he put the finger to his mouth and sucked out all the poison. The doctor afterwards "applied the usual remedies," and Captain Fisher has since got over his bite; but we may question whether all the doctor's remedies would have been of any good, if the poison had not been promptly sucked out of the wound.

A RECENT number of the Friend of India gave an interesting account of what happened at the last Festival of Jagannáth.

at Serampore. On the day when the great car was drawn in state in the presence of several English officials, all went well. But a second and smaller car, which was moved the next evening, succeeded in killing one man on the spot and crushing another man's thigh. Both events are described as "purely accidental." The wounded man moreover could hardly, it was thought, have been a regular devotee, bent on a glorious suicide, for he asked for half a quart of Old Tom, and reproached his God for being so hard on him. In a letter to the Times of last Saturday however, a writer of long experience as a manager of estates in Bengal affirms his belief that the so-called accident was a true case of self-immolation. His reasons for so believing are thus enforced. In the chief village of an estate which he was managing twenty-five years ago, there was one of these sacrificial cars which refused to move, for the priests, he afterwards learnt, had locked the wheels. It began to be whispered that a human sacrifice was needed to set it moving, for which purpose, says the writer, a leper offered himself for six pounds. At last the car moved, and the leper was crushed under the wheels. As a matter of course the Darogah or head policeman reported an accidental death; but before the accident the writer had heard from a bazaar woman that the Darogah had been bribed to conceal the real fact. That the man who drank gin at Serampore was a Pariah or a low-caste man, need not therefore go to prove that his crushing was accidental; especially if it be true, as the same writer declares, that "all those who swing at the Churruk Poojah are persons of the very lowest caste, or rather no caste at all, who are paid by wealthy Hindoos to do this penance in their stead." It is no uncommon thing, we believe, in China, for hired substitutes to take the place of criminals condemned to death, and it is quite possible that like methods of vicarious suffering may exist in India, our countrymen remaining in happy ignorance thereof. If so, we hope our contemporary will push his inquiries a little further. There is no need of course to attach too much importance to the gossip of a bazaar-woman, or even the popular belief of her country-people in these preconceived accidents. But it seems curious that so many of these cases of rumoured suicide take place in the absence of Europeans.

"PRINCE GHOLAM MOHAMMED died yesterday." Such were the few words of a Calcutta telegram dated August 13. Not many readers of the Times were probably aware that the prince so briefly mentioned was the last surviving son of Tippoo, the fierce Sultan of Mysore, who, after years of plotting or fighting against the hated Feringhi, fell at the storming of Seringapatam in the last year of the eighteenth century. On Tippoo's death the kingdom which his father had founded was broken up, but the province of Mysore was given back to the old line of Hindu Rajahs whom Hyder Ali had dispossessed. Tippoo's children were removed to the fort of Vellore, until the mutiny and massacre of our soldiers at that place in 1806, a disaster mainly due to the intrigues of the young princes and their partisans, brought about their removal to Calcutta. There the princes lived and grew old on the handsome pensions allowed them by the East India Company, and there in succession they died. Gholam Mohammed's years were more than eighty when he too passed away, after seeing the Power which his father had defied and his grandfather placed in imminent peril carry its arms over all India, and weather a mutiny far wider-spread than that of Vellore. The last mention made of him in an Indian paper was about eighteen months ago, when the old man figured at one of Lord Mayo's durbars, and received from the late Viceroy a full measure of the courtesy due to his years and antecedents.

THE Madras Athenæum opens the eyes of astonishment at Lord Denbigh's unfortunate proposal to substitute rice for wheat as the food of our English farm-labourers. In arguing from the use of rice in some countries to its fitness for English needs also, his Lordship, as our contemporary points out, overlooks such trifling considerations as differences of climate and hereditary habit. The native of Bengal or Burmah may manage to live on rice, the food that grows best in a moist hot climate; but we should be sorry to see our stalwart peasantry reduced to so unsatisfying a substitute for good or even adulterated wheaten bread. There is very little nourishment in rice alone, and the Bengallies are not very fine specimens of Indian manhood. The Burmese are rice-eaters, but they eat flesh also whenever they can get it. It is or was a popular delusion that rice is the staple food all over India, but nothing could be wider of the truth. All the strongest and finest looking races in India, from the Sikh and the Mohammedan of whatever race to the Mahratta and the Hindustani of the North-West Provinces, live either on wheat, milk, and ghee, or on those same things mixed with some kind of flesh, using rice merely as an accompaniment to their curry or pillau. These are the races which furnish our best soldiers, and even the Madras Sepoy lives on something better than rice alone.

THE Calcutta correspondent of the Pall Mall Gazette tries hard to combat the prevalent belief in the unhealthiness of Peshawar as compared with most other Indian stations. Appealing from medical stories to actual statistics, he makes out an average death rate—exclusive of cholera—of 16·85 per thousand for Peshawar, while that for all Bengal stands at 20·74. The daily sick-rate for Peshawar is stated at 66·20 as compared with 67·10 for all Bengal. For the correctness of these figures we cannot vouch, but it seems to us that the comparison, to be worth anything, should be made not with the whole of the Bengal Presidency, but with stations in nearly the same latitude as Peshawar. It is hardly possible that so general an outcry should have been raised without good cause against one particular station, and there certainly have been years and seasons in which the troops of Peshawar have suffered more heavily than those in any other station of the Punjab. Even from the figures quoted by the same writer we learn that the deaths from fever at this place averaged 4·77 per thousand, whereas the rate for all Bengal was no more than 3·58 per thousand. The death-rate at Peshawar, including deaths from cholera, amounted to 41·60 as compared with 29·98 for all Bengal. According to the Broad Arrow the 2nd Battalion 60th Rifles lost, in the unusually healthy year 1871, no fewer than sixteen men out of an average strength of 662, or about 24·16 per thousand, nine of whom, or 13·59 per thousand, died of fever alone. So high an average of fever cases hardly favours a belief in the healthiness of the station where it occurred.

WE cannot see our way to congratulate the India Office on its recent decree abolishing the study of any other Indian vernacular than Hindustani, among the selected candidates for the Civil Service. For Madras indeed the study of Telugu is still required, but candidates for the other Presidencies are to take up Hindustani only. Such an order would be intelligible if that were the spoken language all over Upper and Western India, but in point of fact it is the language neither of Bengal Proper, nor of Bombay, nor yet of the Punjab; and the young civilian sent out to any of those provinces will find himself as much at sea, as if he went to live in Germany or Sweden armed with a knowledge of English only. The result will be that, after landing in India, he will in many cases have to lose much time in mastering the language of his particular province. This is no worse perhaps than the system which prevailed in the old Haileybury days, but it is hardly in keeping with our professions of a desire to improve on the training-processes of other times.

To our former notice, necessarily brief, of the appointment bestowed on Major Burne, we may now append the testimony borne to his great worth by Sir John Strachey in a minute penned by him as Acting Governor-General after Lord Mayo's death. "He was not only the best private secretary that I ever saw or heard of"—no slight praise from a man of Sir John's experience—"but during the last three years he has performed with great ability and rare discretion, as confidential assistant of the Viceroy, a greater amount of public business, of a most difficult and delicate kind, than has fallen to many men in India." That such praise was no more than Major Burne's due may be inferred from the unanimity with which the Calcutta journals have always spoken in his favour, and the anxiety they have shown for some fitting acknowledgment of his recent services. No worthier choice indeed could well have been made for an appointment, the need for which has long been recognised at the India Office, in view of the growing influx of distinguished visitors from the East into England. Few people, we think, will begrudge the small additional outlay, which serves at once to reward a deserving officer and to secure the display of all becoming courtesies towards that class of foreigners whose relations with the India Office cannot be overlooked.

Now that Mr. Punch has turned his inquiring mind to one of the most prominent grievances of Indian Officers, it seems almost possible that his new studies may yet bear fruit for the benefit of that long-suffering and little regarded class. In the number of Punch for last Saturday there is quite a large picture representing an unemployed colonel standing before a desk where sits an India Office secretary, pondering a bit of advice given him by the colonel's old friend, Mr. Punch. The letter-press tells us that the colonel declines after all to take the pension he had applied for. He prefers remaining in the service. "Coals have gone up from twenty to thirty-six shillings since I wrote,"—he adds: "You see, we don't want coals in Bengal." "Dear me!" murmurs the Secretary; "This will upset all our retirement schemes." Whereupon Mr. P. blandly suggests that "his Grace might raise the pensions of these gentlemen. Name it to him from me, Mr. Secretary, will you please?" Very good advice indeed, Mr. Punch; and his Grace can do no better than follow it. Having got so far in his Indian studies, perhaps our comic contemporary may yet succeed in venturing on some playful allusion to the hard case of those Indian officers, who have been trying for ten years past to get decent compensation for the loss of those retiring-bonuses with which in former days they could have eked out their scanty pensions.

THE only reference to India in the Queen's Speech on Monday last was the passage announcing that her Government "has taken steps intended to prepare the way for dealing more effectually with the slave trade on the east coast of Africa." This is a rather a roundabout way of expressing her Majesty's meaning, but it is idle, we suppose, to protest against the curiously worded paragraphs which do duty for a Prorogation Speech. It is enough to know that something is at length being done towards putting down the cruel traffic, of whose effects we have lately heard so much from Dr. Livingstone. M. Thiers, it seems, has been invited to join our Government in concerting measures for that end. Why France, which has never been remarkable for zeal in that direction, should be asked to help us in a movement which we are quite able to carry through by ourselves, is a question which naturally suggests itself to the Saturday Review. We should have thought that England and India between them could have taken all needful steps to suppress a traffic which flourishes mainly with the connivance of the Sultan of Zanzibar and the traders who make use of his ports. It would not take many weeks or much money to make the Sultan understand that we mean to put a stop to the slave trade in Eastern Africa, and are willing to compensate him for some probable loss of revenue by relieving him of his obligation to pay yearly tribute to the Sultan of Muscat. But it seems that England in these days must do nothing by herself. Not content with taking France into her counsels, she appears from a recent telegram to have invited Hamburg also to come and help her, on the plea that "commercial relations with Zanzibar are almost exclusively in the hands of Hamburg firms."

COMMISSIONERS OF REVENUE.—Under the authority conveyed by Section 43 of Act VIII. of 1872, the Honourable the Governor in Council is pleased to appoint each of the undermentioned officers in the Rutnagiri District, to exercise and perform the powers and duties conferred and imposed on a Commissioner of Revenue by the aforesaid Act:—Mr. A. K. Nairne, first assistant collector; Mr. G. W. Vidal, second assistant collector; Mr. F. A. H. Elliot, supernumerary assistant collector. Under the authority conveyed by Section 43 of Act VIII. of 1872, the Hon. the Governor in Council is pleased to appoint each of the undermentioned officers in the Dharwar district, to exercise and perform the powers and duties conferred and imposed on a Commissioner of Revenue by the aforesaid Act:—Mr. G. Waddington, first assistant collector; Mr. J. R. Middleton, second assistant collector; Mr. H. T. Ommannay, supernumerary assistant collector; Mr. W. J. Cunningham, supernumerary assistant collector; Mr. J. C. Anding, district deputy collector.

THE EUPHRATES VALLEY RAILWAY.

THE Report of the Committee on the Euphrates Valley Railway sums up the evidence in a spirit of entire agreement with the conclusions which any impartial reader would have drawn therefrom. The final report differs very slightly from that first drawn up by the Chairman, Sir Stafford Northcote. Setting aside the question of a railway between some point on the Black Sea and the Persian Gulf, the Committee have evidently fixed their attention to the various schemes for connecting the Persian Gulf with the Mediterranean. It may be said that, looking at the matter from an Anglo-French standpoint, they agree in preferring the line of the Euphrates Valley to that by the Tigris. They are not blind to the commercial merits of the latter, and its adaptability to the projected Turkish system; but its greater length and costliness put it out of the reckoning as compared with the manifestly shorter and cheaper route by the right bank of the Euphrates. Due regard must of course be paid to the wishes of the Turkish Government, without whose co-operation neither line could well be undertaken. On this point however the Turkish Ambassador seems to set all doubt at rest in his letter of August 1st to Sir George Jenkinson. "I content myself"—he writes—"with the line from the Mediterranean to the Persian Gulf; whether the valley of the Euphrates or Tigris be preferred, is immaterial for me; but it seems that by the former, which has already been surveyed, the railway would be the shortest and the easiest to be made, in consequence of the flatness of the country, and therefore the cheapest."

As far back as March, 1870, M. Musurus, in behalf of the Sublime Porte, had accepted all the conditions contained in a letter from Sir George Jenkinson. These conditions were that a mixed committee of Turks and Englishmen should undertake the management of a railway to be built with money raised by a Turkish loan, the interest of which should be counter-guaranteed by England at the rate of 4 per cent., with 1 per cent. for a sinking fund; that the mixed committee should apply the money so raised to its avowed purpose only; that all the land requisite for that purpose should be granted in free gift by the Turkish Government; that England should have the right of sending troops to the East at the rates laid down for the passage of Turkish troops, and that English mails to and from the East should be forwarded free of all expense. It was further arranged, with the sanction of M. Musurus, that the bondholders and the English Government should have an absolute mortgage on the railway, land, and works, until the loan should have been fully repaid, and that the customs duties and port charges of Alexandretta and Basrah should be assigned to the joint committee as security for the payment of yearly interest. It is evident therefore, as the Select Committee allow, that if England would only furnish an adequate guarantee, "the Turkish Government would give its general countenance to the undertaking, whatever might be the route that was chosen."

But is it worth England's while to offer such a guarantee? Among the "many very competent witnesses" who hold it to be fully worth her while, even at the risk of some pecuniary loss, the Committee cite the names of Lord Stratford de Redcliffe, Lord Strathnairn, Sir H. Bartle Frere, Sir Donald Macleod, Mr. Laing, Mr. Gifford Palgrave, Sir Henry Green of the Bombay Army, and other gentlemen of mark. Some few witnesses on the other hand, such as Lord Sandhurst, Sir H. Rawlinson, and Major Champain, appear to doubt the prudence of such a course, however ready to admit the usefulness to England of a railway through Mesopotamia. Their doubts, however, seem to have as little weight with the committee as with our ourselves, for the former are decidedly of opinion that if any steps be taken to construct the line, her Majesty's Government had better communicate with that of Turkey, "with a view to some arrangement of the nature above described." They also speak well of the advantages which England may reap from partially guaranteeing a probable outlay of ten millions. These are mainly to be derived from "the more rapid transmission of mails, and from the possession of an alternative and more rapid route for the conveyance of troops; and from the great commercial advantages, both to India and England, which the opening up of the route would confer." Looking to the terms already accepted by Turkey and to the probable effects of a railway in developing new traffic along the shortest line from Syria to the East, and one of the oldest trade routes in the world, we cannot think that England would run any serious risk in offering the kind of guarantee required. In the Draft Report, framed by Sir George Jenkinson, we are reminded that the Turkish Government has always "faithfully and promptly fulfilled its pecuniary and other engagements;" a good reason for trusting it on the present occasion. Sir George also recommends a joint guarantee of England and India to the extent of three or four per cent., an arrangement under which England could not anyhow be liable for more than £300,000 a-year; but "that is supposing the Turkish Government to fail entirely to pay anything, or the railway either; and that is a contingency almost too remote to be treated as a possibility, or certainly as a probability."

With regard, however, to the question of a guarantee, it is likely that England would have to reckon without India. From a despatch laid before the committee it appears that the Indian Government would hail the projected railway as an undoubted boon to India, and would gladly pay for using it, but objects at the same time to join in any outlay, direct or indirect, for the purpose of making such a line. We are not surprised at this. It is not India so much as England that would benefit by the line in question, and under present circumstances England can best afford to run the risk of a guarantee in return for a cheap and quick alternative route not to India only, but to all her settlements and trade-marts in the East. In times of need the proposed railway, with each end safe in British keeping, would be of untold value to us for the timely despatch of troops to India; the saving in that respect being reckoned by different witnesses at four to seven or eight days. For purposes of ordinary relief its usefulness is questioned indeed by Lord Sandhurst and Sir H. Rawlinson, who, not without reason, prefer the Canal Route with its unbroken voyage right through. Lord Strathnairn and Sir H. Green, however, uphold the shorter route for the cold weather. From the evidence given by Captain Felix Jones and Mr. Eastwick, this route would seem to be the least trying in the hot and rainy months, when the heat in the Red Sea becomes intolerable, and the sufferings of the passengers are heightened by the monsoon, which prolongs their voyage and compels them often to stay below, with the hatches battened down. On the great importance of having so good an alternative route open to meet all contingencies, nearly all the witnesses are agreed. That importance, as the Committee observe, "would of course be materially enhanced, especially as regards the conveyance of troops, by the completion of the works now in progress at the harbour of Kurrachee, and of the Indus Valley and the Lahore and Peshawar Railways." From the evidence of Messrs. Parkes and Thornton it appears that Kurrachee Harbour will be fit to receive the large Indian troopships in the course of two more years. Whenever the railway shall be open thence to Peshawar, the Euphrates route will "afford means of communication between England and the Punjab, and the north-west frontier of British India, superior to those afforded by the way of Suez and Bombay."

So far therefore as Sir S. Northcote's Committee is concerned, there is nothing whatever to prevent the making of a railway along the Euphrates Valley, if Turkey and England will only put their heads together and settle between them the terms on which money for that purpose shall be raised. Here is the last paragraph of their Report:—

Speaking generally, your Committee are of opinion that the two routes, by the Red Sea and by the Persian Gulf, might be maintained and used simultaneously; that at certain seasons and for certain purposes the advantage would lie with the one, and at other seasons and for other purposes it would lie with the other; that it may fairly be expected that in process of time traffic enough for the support of both would develop itself, but that this result must not be expected too soon; that the political and commercial advantages of establishing a second route would at any time be considerable, and might, under possible circumstances, be exceedingly great; and that it would be worth the while of the English Government to make an effort to secure them, considering the moderate pecuniary risk which they would incur. They believe that this may best be done by opening communications with the Government of Turkey in the sense indicated by the semi-official correspondence to which they have already drawn attention.

The choice of ports at either end of the Euphrates Line is a question which the Committee properly leave for further discussion. On the Mediterranean side the choice seems to lie between Scanderoun, a "fine natural harbour" in an unhealthy place, and Suedia, a far healthier place at the mouth of the Orontes, but capable only at great cost of being turned into a good harbour. Under any circumstances the Committee would prefer Scanderoun to Tripoli, the port recommended by Captain Burton, and by him alone; and in summing up the evidence they seem on the whole to favour Scanderoun as compared with Suedia. With regard to the terminus on the Persian Gulf, they pronounce decidedly against carrying the railway on to Kurrachee; and of the rival ports in the Gulf, such as Mohamrah, Basrah, Core Abdallah, Grane, Bushire, they are "inclined to prefer Grane." On all such points however they hold that "a local inquiry, conducted by competent authorities," would be desirable. Mr. Parkes, in his Report on the Persian Gulf Harbours, leans, we think, towards Grane, alias Koweit, and so does Captain Taylor; but in the absence of fuller knowledge regarding Core Abdallah, and of careful surveys round the Gulf, the former is evidently loath to commit himself in favour of any particular port.

Correspondence.

INDIAN PREFECTS AND THE PRESS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

"The only means of obtaining information which the Government possesses is through its own officers and through the Press, and it is for obvious reasons undesirable to trust wholly to the former, however intelligent and trustworthy they may be."—See Times newspaper of August 13, in letter from Calcutta Correspondent.

SIR,—Previous to the great Mutiny in 1857 it was the fashion to say of officers commanding regiments the same as is now said of district officers. The Commander-in-Chief, for obvious reasons, thought it undesirable to trust wholly to the representations of colonels, men of high honour, and thorough knowledge of native soldiers, but who were abused as old fogies. It was thought more desirable to listen to the petitions of sepoys, full of adulation of head-quarters, and of complaints against regimental officers.

And now we are told that the reports of district officers are not to be depended on, and that the abstracts of secretaries convey a more correct picture of the political horizon.

As the ruin of the army was caused by distrusting commanding officers, so is the ruin of the Empire likely to be caused by distrusting local magistrates.

General Jacob long ago pointed out what should be the true policy of the Government. Trust your colonels and prefects; if they abuse your trust turn them out and supply their places with better men.

With reference to the influence of the Press we must bear in mind that the English Press indicates public opinion more perfectly than that in India will for a long time to come be able to do. Government servants in India are forbidden to communicate knowledge gained officially to the newspapers, but the British Parliament has the power of squeezing out of the most astute Secretary of State any information it requires.

In my letter in your columns of the 27th June, last year, I urged that if the Home Government wish to obtain reliable information they must look for it in the unabridged reports of the district officers. The frequency with which secretaries and precis writers distort political pictures can scarcely be conceived by those who have not seen the process.

Has any member of Parliament the faintest notion of the present state of feeling among our subjects? Among the Mahomedans, Soonnees, and Shiahhs? Among the Seikhs, Mahrattas, Rajpoots, and Goorkhas? Among the clans, our neighbours living in Boneir and Swat, among the Oorukzaie, Afreedie, Bungush, Momund, and Wuzereee clans; or among the inhabitants of Tull-Chooteallee, or of the Shum plain?

The clansmen of Boneir can trace their descent farther back than any English house can; they are perhaps the most genuine Republicans in the world; and they proved themselves to be noble antagonists to the British power.

The Oorukzaies are said to be a splendid race of men, and inclined to be friendly to us; they have lately proved themselves to be superior to the fighting Afreedies, and to the Bungush and lower Momund tribes.

With the councils in India crotchety and unsafe, with the council at home dumb, with a Parliament which undervalues and neglects its duty to our Eastern Empire, with an Indian Press debarred from receiving information from the best sources, the district officers, our hope of obtaining good government for India rests on the influence of the English Press.—Your obedient servant,
T.

NATIVE VAGRANTS IN INDIA.

The Madras Athenæum holds that all the sincere zealots, devotees, fanatics and ascetics put together, even if we add in the semi-humbugs to swell the tale, will be but a drop in the bucket as compared with the unmitigated humbugs, the fellows who adopt religious mendicancy as a profession in order to shirk work, indulge vagabondage, escape justice, facilitate swindling, find opportunities for theft, enjoy debauchery at other people's expense, excite discontent, and foment sedition. Nine-tenths of the beggars, able bodied and sturdy beggars, who loaf about India are only religious in pretence, and are all of them really actuated by some or other of the motives aforesaid, usually by all of them combined. It is about the least of their crimes to sponge upon and impoverish the people. In addition to that they debauch them, seduce them into ganja and opium eating and smoking, that thereby they may be made the readier tools to carry out iniquitous ends. Most of the political mischief that is done or attempted in India is by the agency of these men, who wander at will wherever they please, fakeers from Lahor turning up at Trevandrum, emissaries from the Mahabun teaching treason at Dacca. The result is that disaffection appears to be ubiquitous, and would doubtless actually be so except for the fact that the people properly so-called know these agents far better than they trust them. It is one of the surest proofs of the passive loyalty, or rather of the disinclination for turbulence of the great bulk of the people, that such emissaries should have been so long and preservingly and ubiquitously at work, and yet should have produced so little result of any sort. The average native may listen without reproof, perhaps even with languid approval, to the diatribes of incendiaries; but he does not see the expediency of incurring the risk of getting himself knocked on the head. And so in ordinary times and in ordinary circumstances the sedition mongers appear to do no practical harm. But at the same time they keep up a constant sense of uneasiness, and they enable the dangerous classes, not the majority by any means, but still numerous enough to be troublesome on occasion, to keep open communication with one another all over the country and to develop hundreds of plots, mostly certain to prove abortive, but one or other of which might chance to prove practicable under certain contingencies by no means inconceivable. Would it be impossible to put some restriction on the absolute license of these men? From an economic point of view it is inexpedient that they should fatten in idleness on the hard-earned means of the toiling millions; from a moral point of view they are unutterably vile; from a political point of view they are a great and perpetual danger. Why should there not be a passport system for the bona fide religious and a vagrancy law for the sturdy impostors? Why should not extortion by intimidation be made as criminal in them as in any other men? and why when they wander beyond their own districts should they not be bound to give a satisfactory account of themselves, and provided with work, board, and lodging under police superintendence in default of the same?

THE DUEL BETWEEN MR. CAMPBELL AND THE UNIVERSITY.

The Indian Daily News hold that no true friend of the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal could honestly congratulate his Honour on the singular attitude which he has assumed towards the Vice-Chancellor and Syndicate of the Calcutta University. The impatience which Mr. Campbell is wont to display, whenever he is confronted with anything that in the most remote degree resembles opposition to his will, is all very well when the persons with whom he is dealing are local subordinates, who are bound to carry out his crotchets and who wait upon his pleasure for advancement in life. But the syndicate of the University is a body which represents or ought to represent the highest education and intelligence of the community; and Mr. Campbell, we should have imagined, is sufficiently familiar with the usages of the civilised world to know that no such body could brook any vexatious interference with their duties on the part of any executive authority. Mr. Campbell's desire to invent a new language may speak volumes for his energy and perseverance, but the impudence with which he insists on forcing his new language on the University is only in keeping with the impertinence with which he taxes the University with ignorance of the lingua franca of India. No other ruler in the world would, we feel sure, have presumed to inform the syndicate that "owing to the location of the University in Calcutta" they were ignorant of the "common language of Hindoostan;" and the presumption becomes all the more extraordinary when it is borne in mind that it is Mr. Campbell (who, as he has informed the world, has no natural talent for language), and not the syndicate, that is really ignorant of the actual state of affairs. No doubt, as Mr. Campbell pompously points out to the syndicate, the University is only an examining body; but unless Mr. Campbell believes that the University would be bound to include the Chinese language in the list of tests for degrees, if he chose to make an order to that effect, it is difficult to see how the University can be compelled to fall in with any other absurdity on which a crotchety governor might resolve. The University nowhere pretends to interfere, as Mr. Campbell seems to imagine or suspect that it does, with the legitimate functions of the executive Government. Entrusted with the high duty of conferring degrees for certain educational accomplishments, the syndicate decides in good faith on what terms it will confer these degrees. If the Government desires to help the natives of the country to win such honours as the University has to bestow, it rests with it to mould its educational policy in accordance with the standards of examination laid down by the University. The real question is, not whether the Government or the University ought to direct the educational policy of the country, but whether the Government or the University is to decide the standard of examination. And if the University is really the examining body, which Mr. Campbell acknowledges it to be, it seems to us that it is Mr. Campbell who is interfering with the legitimate function of the syndicate, and not the University that is interfering with the legitimate functions of the Government. The practice of all the Universities in England is conclusive upon this point; and no one can have the slightest doubt how the matter will be decided by the Government of India, if Mr. Campbell should be so exceedingly injudicious as to appeal to it in the dispute which he has most unnecessarily plunged with the syndicate of the Calcutta University.

STATE RAILWAYS.—The following, from the Simla correspondent of the Pioneer, may be interesting to our readers at the present juncture:—"Mr. Molesworth's report on State Railways is before me. It is a very interesting document, and thoroughly exhaustive. The portion of the most interest is that relating to the Punjab Northern State Railway, on which the progress would appear to have exceeded all anticipations. The Consulting Engineer rather takes up the cudgels for his civilian brethren, or at least places in a generous light the manner in which Government restraints and checks are felt to be harassing to officers bred in an independent atmosphere. Mr. Molesworth is entirely in favour of the Carwar line of railway, to be made and started at an over-all cost of £6,300 per mile, the ghaut section costing £11,000 per mile."

Bengal.

KANGRA.—An Umbala correspondent of the Delhi Gazette says that fifty men of the 1st Goorkhas have been ordered from Dhumsala to occupy the fort at Kangra, as the Kukas are arming themselves in that neighbourhood. That correspondent should be looked after.

NATIVE LANGUAGES.—Rewards have been sanctioned by his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab for the higher officers of the Educational Department who pass in languages. Success in Arabic or Sanscrit earns Rs. 1,750; in Persian, Rs. 1,200; in Pushtoo, Rs. 1,000; in Urdu or Punjabi, Rs. 750.

TRIAL OF LIAKAT ALI.—Interesting as was the scene within the Court, that outside is said to have been unprecedented. A crowd of Mahomedans (estimated at 5,000 persons) swarmed round the cutcherries, but, while expressing their anxiety to see the prisoner, and to hear how things were going with him, they conducted themselves in a most orderly manner. Nevertheless, the Commissioner has decided not to allow such a gathering to-day when the trial is to be resumed.—Times of India, July 26.

SPELLING OF OLD INDIAN NAMES.—All interested in the preservation of old historic Indian names in their present form will be pleased to learn that the Chief Commissioner of Oude has sent a circular to all the Civil Officers under him, to the effect that in accordance with instructions received from the Government of India, the name of the capital of the province may be invariably spelt "Lucknow." We trust to see the same indulgence extended to Cawnpore and some dozen or so other places round whose names crowd glorious associations.

AN IMPROVED MODE OF COMPETITION.—A vacancy having occurred in the 6th class of the Financial Department, his Excellency the Viceroy has nominated three gentlemen to compete for it inter se. The nomination by the late Lord Mayo of Mr. H. Davis, son of Lieutenant-Colonel H. N. Davis, Deputy Commissioner, Rangoon, has been confirmed. On his own behalf his Excellency has named Mr. C. F. Needham, son of Lieutenant-Colonel Needham, Deputy Judge Advocate, and Baboo Ragonath Roy, who was first at the last B.A. examination at the Presidency College, Calcutta.

DETERMINED SUICIDE OF A SOLDIER.—A European prisoner, a soldier from Peshawur, committed suicide in the Central Jail at Lahore this week. He had been bent on self destruction some time, as he had obstinately refused to touch food till there was fear of his starving himself to death. Food was accordingly administered to him against his will. Some time after, being left in a room by himself, he hanged himself with the punkah frill, which he had torn off and hoisted up for the purpose. Life was extinct before medical assistance could be brought.—Indian Public Opinion.

A GOOD STORY.—Respecting the Punjab Mayo Memorial Fund Indian Public Opinion says:—The following has been sent to us as a fact by a correspondent in a large Punjab station. In course of conversation with a young native gentleman whose father had a good position in the district, he asked him if his father were coming into the station, and so on. He said "O, yes, he is coming in to-morrow; he is a member of the committee for raising the tax for Lord Mayo's monument." "But," said the sahib, "that is not a tax!" "O, yes, the Sirkar is making us pay it by Act XX. of 1871."

SIR W. GRAY.—The press generally has expressed its disbelief in the rumour that Sir William Gray is to succeed to the Ministry of Finance on the retirement next spring of Sir Richard Temple. An anonymous correspondent of the Indian Daily News, however, now comes forward, and says, "I can vouch for it that Sir William has been offered the appointment, and that Lord Northbrook has recommended him to accept the offer. That he will accept, I have good reason to believe." It would be satisfactory to know if the correspondent's voucher is worth accepting.

FINANCIAL.—We (Englishman) hear that Mr. Edward Gay, Deputy Comptroller-General of Accounts, Financial Department, Government of India, now on deputation to England to assist Mr. E. F. Harrison, C.S., the Comptroller-General, in his examination before the Select Committee of Indian Finance, will soon return to India, when Mr. Fitzgerald, now acting in Mr. Gay's place, will join the Bengal Accountant's Office as Deputy Accountant-General. Mr. E. F. Harrison, it is also expected will soon return to India and resume his charge. Mr. H. D. Sandeman, C.S., the officiating Comptroller-General, we hear, takes leave of absence for two months to proceed to England.

THE GIBSON COURT MARTIAL.—The Agra paper hears that the Gibson Court Martial now sitting at Allahabad is likely to be a lengthy proceeding. The Court assembled on Monday, the 15th, and has continued to meet daily ever since. The cross examination of the witnesses for the prosecution has been severe, even to riling the Rewah Rajah's Prime Minister, who is evidently unable to appreciate the quibbles and niceties of English Law. It is expected that the Court may sit for many days yet, since the prisoner has several witnesses to call in his defence, all of whom will no doubt be subjected to severe cross examination by Captain Clementi, the prosecutor.

OUTRAGE ON THE EX-KING OF OUDH.—We learn that on Tuesday evening, whilst H.M. the King of Oudh was taking an airing in a small park phaeton which he uses in his grounds, a Punjabee suddenly rushed out from a thicket and leaped into the King's carriage. He was immediately seized, but managed to escape to the river, into which he plunged and swam away. The man was not observed to be armed in any way, and it may be presumed he was merely some fanatic excited by bhang.—Indian Daily News, July 23.

COLONEL GREATHED.—Taking the opportunity of the temporary retirement of Colonel Greathed, his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor, N.W.P., in the Irrigation Revenue Report for 1870-71, expresses "warmly his sense of the great obligations under which this Government has been laid for the devotion and assiduity with which he (Colonel Greathed) has directed the affairs of this most important department (including two seasons of great risk and anxiety) ever since his Honour assumed charge of the North-Western Provinces." One point for congratulation, says the Pioneer, is the fact "once canal water, always canal water," in definitive contradiction to the prognostication that in bad years canal water would be in demand, and in good years be scouted.

DARING ASSAULT IN THE CALCUTTA JAIL.—We are informed that on Monday last, the 16th inst., one of the prisoners in the Presidency Jail, named Madee Khan, most brutally assaulted a European warder, named Smith. It appears that the assailant, who is an Afghan, and who was undergoing imprisonment for two years for house-breaking, had been guilty of some misconduct on Friday last, in consequence of which he was reported by Smith, and, by way of punishment, was set to work on the tread-mill, at which he was kept for two days. On Monday last, in the afternoon, when relieved from work, seeing the warder walking near the mill, he took up a hammer which was lying close by, and, going behind the warder, struck him a violent blow on the back of the neck, which felled him. He then kept his victim down and continued striking him on the head with the hammer, and would soon have killed him had not some of the native convicts come up and secured him. Madee Khan was immediately put in irons and locked up, and his victim was conveyed to the General Hospital, very seriously injured, but hopes are entertained of his recovery. On Tuesday morning Madee Khan was flogged in the presence of all the convicts who were working on the tread-mill at the time of the assault.—Indian Daily News, July 23.

RAILWAY ACCIDENTS.—The railway accident returns for 1871 show that there were 35 cases of collision in 1871 and 69 in 1870, and 78 in 1869. Of these 35 cases of collisions 13 occurred on the East Indian, 15 on the Great Indian Peninsula, 3 on the Madras, and 2 on the Punjab and Delhi Railway. Of the 35 collisions, 9 were due to the neglect or misconduct of the Locomotive Department, 9 to workmen employed on the line, 6 to employes of the Traffic Department, and 4 to pointsmen. The resulting casualties consisted of 8 passengers injured (all on the East Indian Railway, namely 4 in one, 3 in a second, and one in a third collision) and 1 railway servant killed (this was on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway) and 5 injured (4 on the East Indian and 1 on the Madras Railway). There was also one collision due to a trolley having been maliciously placed on the East Indian Railway, near Bhulpore, by some persons unknown. In 1870 the casualties from collisions amounted to 3 killed and 42 wounded, but of these 1 death and 30 injuries were due to a single serious accident. The number of passengers killed in 1871 was 9, against 13 in the previous year, and the number of passengers injured 29, against 63 in the previous year. In 1871 there were 246 railway servants killed or injured: 24 of these cases were from causes beyond the control of the persons killed or injured, and 222 arose only from misconduct or want of caution on the part of the persons themselves.

A PERTINENT QUESTION.—Who, we should like to know, has been pricking up the Punjab Rajahs, and drawing subscriptions from their unwilling purses? Here is the Punjab Mayo Memorial Fund, which, after languishing nearly six months, suddenly is showing amazing signs of vitality, and is promising to far overtop all the other provincial Memorial Funds. From three thousand odd rupees, at which it stood for weeks, it has almost at a bound gone up to half a lakh. The Rajah of Nabha has given Rs. 5,000, the boy Nawab of Bhawalpore—whom our Lahore contemporary irreverently calls "Bhawalpore Tommy"—has given Rs. 10,000; the Rajah of Jheend does not intend to be outdone by the Rajah of Nabha, and their wealthy Highnesses of Pattiala and Cashmere come down handsomely with between Rs. 15,000 and Rs. 20,000 apiece. The Lahore paper says of the Bhawalpore gift, "Your artless generosity reminds us of the story of 'The Babe in the Desert,' or 'The Disinterested Burglar,'" and asks whether "good Old Honesty, 'Of the Pilgrim's Progress,' is ever coming this way at all." Whether the screw has been put on the Rajahs, as here implied, or not, we cannot say. The money has been subscribed, if not given, and it is proposed to expend it in building at Lahore a Mayo College for Government Wards, or a Mayo School of Art and Design. After this, we hardly dare mention the amount subscribed towards our own Bombay Memorial Fund. But we will print it small, so that it may escape the notice of our lynx-eyed contemporaries of Upper India. It is—Rs. 9,404.—Times of India.

THE LOSHA EXPEDITION.—The following is an extract of a despatch from the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India:—"India office, London, June 13, 1872.—To H.E. the Right Hon. the Governor-General of India in Council.—My Lord,—I have considered in Council your Lordship's Military letter No. 82, dated May 3, 1872, transmitting correspondence detailing the whole of the operations of the Loshai Expeditionary Force, which have been recently brought to a successful termination. 2. I congratulate your Lordship upon results which are not less creditable to the wisdom and the moderation of the Government which sanctioned the expedition, than to the military authorities which conducted the enterprise to a successful issue. 3. Her Majesty's Government fully concur with your Lordship in attributing much of the success to the thoughtful and unremitting interest which his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief has throughout taken both in the plan and in the conduct of the operations. 4. Her Majesty's Government also fully concur in the terms in which your Government have acknowledged the services on this occasion of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal and the officers employed under his Honour's orders, of Brigadier-Generals Bouchier and Brownlow, and of the several officers of the Military and Political Departments employed in connection with the expedition, whose services have been brought to the notice of your Government by the military authorities.—I have, &c., ARGYLL."

INDIAN STAFF CORPS PAY.

A correspondent writes to the Madras Mail as follows:—

"There seems to be an impression in some quarters in India that Staff Corps Officers, when they become entitled to colonel's allowance, will receive only £1 000 a year until they attain the rank of major-general. It is needless, perhaps, to inquire how such an impression arose; but it will suffice to quote the orders on the subject to prove that it can have no foundation. Paragraph 4 of despatch from the Secretary of State, dated November 30, 1866, No. 261, G.O. January 7th, 1867, No. 22 (Madras G.O. of 1867, page 19) runs as follows:—4. 'I take this opportunity also of informing your Excellency, with reference to the scale of pay laid down for Staff Corps officers in the Royal Warrant of 26th January, 1861, that her Majesty's Government have determined that an officer of the Staff Corps attaining to the colonel's allowance before promotion to the rank of major-general will receive out of India the same aggregate amount of pay and allowances that is drawn by officers of infantry of the Indian Army holding the rank of regimental colonel, with the colonel's allowance.'

The aggregate pay and allowances of an Infantry

(Local) Colonel is	£456 5 0
To which add the Colonel's allowance	668 12 5

Total ... £1,124 17 5

"With reference to the 2nd item, paragraph 2, of the Comptroller Directors' letter, No. 54, published in G. O. January 19th, 1855, No. 106, Madras G. O. 1855, page 33, determines the amount, and runs thus:—2. 'We annex to this letter a statement of those shares and of the sums included in them on account of interest (as published in General Orders), from which you will find that the average amount to Rs. 5,475-14 per annum for colonels of regiments serving in India, and Rs. 668-12 5 for those on furlough in England.' The colonel's allowance commencing from the 1st January next and thenceforward is to be regulated accordingly.

"The Secretary of State's despatch is clear, and there cannot be the faintest shadow of doubt that the obligation will be fulfilled. The only possible protection against the coming black cloud of expense is that offered by the Government of India, known as the Norman-Broome retirement scheme, which the Secretary of State for India rejected. By this time his Grace has probably learnt the exact position of the officers of the several staff corps. If they wish to retire they must do so on a mere pittance; but by waiting the larger pension must become theirs, and wait they will, of course. In the meantime the least fortunate of them are drawing handsome allowances for doing general duty—in other words, 'unemployed.' Their position is more favourable to themselves than to Government. Can any one doubt that some scheme of the Norman-Broome type is inevitable to relieve alike the finances and the Indian armies of their incubus of field officers.

Miscellaneous.

MAJOR J. A. ELLIS.—The Maharajah of Travancore has issued a commission to Major J. A. Ellis, appointing him to the command of the Nair Brigade.

CIVIL.—Mr. J. D. Mayne has returned to Madras and resumed his office of Crown Prosecutor and Clerk of the Crown. Mr. Tames, who was brought all the way from Allahabad to take up these places, is thus left out in the cold.

THE PIER.—Our pier is being repaired, and will no doubt be useful till the next cyclone comes and sends a ship through it, and breaks it again. We have heard nothing about a breakwater lately, and probably the subject has been given up. When another cyclone comes the subject will be renewed.—Madras Times.

ROADS IN THE KISTNA DISTRICT.—We are glad to see that road-making in the Kistna District has been seriously taken in hand. Governments have just sanctioned an outlay of ninety-three thousand rupees to make a trunk road for a distance of sixteen miles. This, says the Madras Times, is a beginning, though but a small one, but in time it may be followed by many other undertakings of the same kind.

THE TRIPUTTY HILL TRAGEDY.—We learn that the bodies of the two prisoners who plunged into a tank while on their way up the Triputty Hill have been found, and that an enquiry into the affair is being held on the Hill. This of course fully disposes of the suspicion that the men had made their escape by other means than suicide; but the suspicion was very natural when the bodies remained forty-eight hours unfound in the waters of a pagoda tank. Meanwhile the European officers have to account for having delegated such a duty as the guarding of an important prisoner entirely to native policemen, and the latter will have to be called to account for the carelessness that enabled the prisoners to break away from the escort. Meanwhile the prospect of the authorities getting to the bottom of the forgery conspiracy is of course much diminished.—Madras Times, July 17.

RATHER HARSH.—We hear from Bolarum that cantonment rules have been carried out there with a good deal of harshness. Lieut.-Colonel Adey, the Commanding Officer, exercised his authority recently in a very summary manner upon an unfortunate occupant of a house situated within the cantonment limits. The cantonment rules give very great power to commanding officers, who should exercise that power without employing needlessly harsh measures in doing so. It would be as well if some modifications of these rules could be made, so that the expulsion of a man with his family from a house within the cantonments might only take place on occasions of extreme need.

NATIVES IN ENGLAND.—The people of Madras have been amused and somewhat annoyed by the attention that has been paid to three native visitors from this place to England, the chief of the party being Mr. M. Vencatasawmy Naidu, dubash of the firm of Messrs. Parry and Co. One of the papers calls him the "Naider of Madras," a title totally unknown here. We read of the way in which he and his fellow countrymen have been taken about and lionised and introduced into society, much to their surprise we are sure. But what is annoying is that in return for this kindness Mr. Vencatasawmy Naidu said some things about the Government of this country that were utterly untrue, and others that were only partially true. In time the people of England may manage to get a little common sense into their heads with regard to Indian visitors, but in the meantime they will go on in the same way, and pet and pamper every man who goes from this country, whatever he may be, whether he is a cooly or a man of the highest rank. The English people at the present time have natives of India on the brain, and it will require some time to cure them of the disease. When they get rid of the disease they will be heartily ashamed of the tricks they played while it was upon them.—Madras Times.

COAL AND IRON IN THE NIZAM'S TERRITORIES.—Explorations and discoveries are significant signs of the times in these territories, and they speak volumes on behalf of the Government. The pioneering party which was sent to Cumnum some five or six months ago to bore for coal, have been very successful in their operations, notwithstanding the difficulties and hardships they had to contend against. Three distinct and promising seams of coal have been struck, and the quality of the coal is spoken of as being superior to that of Sasti. But unfortunately, owing to the late excessive drought, with the attendant privations and sickness to which the party were subjected, they had to suspend work a short time back; and now that the monsoons have set in, during the prevalence of which work is out of the question in those wilds, they have had to abandon the scene of their labours and to come into head-quarters. The party will return to renew operations at the fall of the year. The attention of Government is also being drawn to the discovery of copper in certain districts where hitherto its presence was unknown. In the Nagur Kurnool taluq the existence of this ore has recently been discovered, and samples of it are, with a piece of copper wire manufactured in the district, transmitted to Government, who have forwarded them to scientific men for examination and report. It is also said that copper ore has been discovered near Yedlabad, in the Indoor district; but doubts are entertained as to whether the ore is indigenous to the locality where it was found, or whether it had been washed down from the hills to the west of Yedlabad. This doubt is to be cleared up as soon as opportunity offers. The Government have also been recently directing their attention to the iron ore of the Cumnum district. This is no late discovery, but the Government were not before aware of the abundance and excellence of the iron to be obtained in that part of their territories. This, it will be remembered, is also a promising coal district. So here we have side by side those two mighty engines of civilisation to which the "old country" is greatly indebted. It is much to be regretted that the resources of the territories are so imperfectly known. But the vigorous and earnest measures the Minister is taking to develop them will do much to bring them to light.

THE LATE CAPTAIN MITCHELL.—All who knew Captain Mitchell, the Superintendent of the Central Museum, Madras, will hear with deep regret of his death yesterday. And the regret will only be strengthened among those who knew him well by the recollection that he had survived his best—we shall be right in saying his most brilliant—days. It is the lot of few men who set their feet for the first time on the ladder of ambition at so low a round as the level of a gunner to gain such a reputation as has Captain Mitchell. His name belongs no more to Madras than to the world. In Madras we recollect him as the commandant of the mounted police, selected specially for his courage and discretion at a time when both were much required. Those who have visited the museum regard him as a more than worthy successor of the indefatigable Dr. Balfour. The medical profession has acknowledged its debt to him as a microscopist. His industry, research, and sterling honesty—for this last has its market value even among naturalists—secured him respect in both the Old and the New World. The name of Mitchell is known in every museum in the world. And not only there. His fruitful mind in his best days could receive no germ of information which did not fructify. As an Artilleryman who had seen service all over the East and at different altitudes, he laid down a hypothesis with regard to fuses, which experiments in different parts of India proved to be true, and Mitchell's fuses were known in America from the time of Bull's Run to the final triumph at Richmond. The name of Mitchell has not been in so many mouths of late as formerly. His life had been active both bodily and mentally. And while fatigue of marching on foot or in the saddle was a stranger to him, long observing through the microscope, and taking measurements of the denizens of the microscopic world by means of a micrometer, while genial to his tastes, was fatiguing to the eye and, from personal experience, we say depressing to the spirits. We do not pretend to account for the latter phenomenon, but mention it only as a fact. Captain Mitchell came out in the same ship which brought out the first (in one sense) Competition Wallah, Sir Thomas Pycroft, and he has never since re-visited England. Many will be sorry to hear of his death, and will think this short hasty tribute to his merits and ability unworthy of the man and his work. His funeral was numerously attended last evening by gentlemen of all grades of society.—Madras Athenaeum, July 19.

A FAIR COMPLAINT.—The reliefs, as ordered for this year, so far as the native regiments are concerned, are extremely unfair. This will be the third time within a few years that the 5th regiment has been sent to Belgium. The 12th regiment has been spending the last ten years or so in going backwards and forwards between Dharwar, Belgium, and Aden. The 17th regiment went to Dhoolia last January, and is now ordered to Poona. The wing of the 15th has only just gone to Tanna, and will be moved to Malligaum. It is not mentioned what regiment will go to Dhoolia to relieve the 17th. These constant moves are a great expense to the sepoy, and with reference to the 15th and 17th regiments are quite unnecessary.—Times of India.

POST-OFFICE SHORTCOMINGS.—It is to be hoped that the eye of our Postmaster-General will fall upon the advertisement in our yesterday's paper from one of the principal Bombay news agencies explaining to their clients that the non-delivery of their home papers is entirely owing to miscarriage on the part of the overland postal service. We have also ourselves to complain of the non-receipt of several weekly and other papers that should have come by this mail. It may not be much that Mr. Macfarlan can do directly in this matter, but he ought to do all in his power to make the authorities of St. Martin's-le-Grand very uncomfortable until such vexatious losses are rendered all but impossible. From inquiries we have made it seems quite certain that these missing papers were duly posted in proper time at the General Post-office. The fault lies entirely with the Brindisi service, but whether the loss occurs on land, sea, or strait, is for the postal authorities to discover.—Times of India, July 26.

CHOLERA AT KHANDEISH.—There has been a very serious outbreak of cholera at the Khandeish Model Farm. Between the 9th and the 20th of this month no fewer than forty-seven people were attacked with the disease, and of these fourteen (including Mrs. Fretwell, the wife of the Superintendent, and Mr. Elms, a young man seventeen years of age) died, while two were, on the date of our information, still in a dangerous condition and not expected to recover. The number of casualties from cholera in the neighbouring village of Bhurgaum is not known, but it is believed to be large. The Model Farm is healthily situated, and every care is observed by Mr. Fretwell to carry out all necessary sanitary measures; and we can at present only surmise that this severe visitation originated in one or other of the large towns of Khandeish, where vigorous sanitary regulations are, from all accounts, urgently needed. Dr. Lumsdaine would earn a world of gratitude if, by a strict scientific investigation, and by introducing such measures as were found necessary, he could mitigate the severity of the fatal diseases which periodically devastate that province.

BRIBERY IN THE MOFUSSIL.—A magistrate in a Mofussil town not 500 miles from Bombay writes to us:—"I am deep in no less than three bribery cases, which I hope will end in the removal of nearly all the chief officials of the place. This place lies rather out of the way, and has been for years in the hands of the native administrators whom some of you admire so much. The consequence is, it is a sink of corruption and oppression. Much as I knew before, I could never have believed that the police, backed up by the other officers, could, under British rule, have succeeded in reducing a whole town to such abject slavery. You may be interested in seeing the following bill of expenses incurred by a trader of some means in—who was committed by me last month for smuggling Rs. 150 worth of opium, but who got off on a technical point before the Sessions Court. I got the details from him at night after taking him round the bungalow to assure him that every door was locked, and that no one was listening, also giving him my promise that the police should not know who informed me. I may add that I have corroborative evidence which leaves no doubt of the general accuracy of the account:—To my Sheristadar, Rs. 100; To—for acting as agent between him and my Sheristadar—a puggree worth Rs. 10; to Session Judge's Sheristadar, Rs. 100; to Vakeel, Rs. 50; to Fozdar, Rs. 50; to the sepoys who acted as go-between for the Fozdar, Rs. 50; Total, Rs. 360. And after all, he adds, 'no one helped me a bit.'" No wonder the natives want a native magistracy and judiciary, for they would at any rate have a chance then of getting their money's worth as they do in the—State close by here. Under us they are bullied into paying, and get nothing in return.—Indian Statesman.

THE LATE ATTACK ON THE "CASHMERE"—FURTHER PARTICULARS.—By the B.I.S.N. Co.'s steamer India, which arrived in harbour yesterday afternoon from the Gulf, &c., we have a few further particulars regarding the perpetrators of the late outrage on board the Cashmere. The ringleaders of the attack were eight in number, and were boatmen belonging to Bussorah. The others were Chab Arabs, brought from Mahaurra especially for the work—in fact professional plunderers, well known in those parts. With the exception of seven who have been captured, the whole of the gang has made away and joined an Arab Chief, Shaik Luftan, some distance in the interior—where there is very little chance of catching the delinquents. The Turkish Government has sent a number of troops to Bussorah to keep peace and order. Their appearance would seem to have frightened one gang of scoundrels off, for we learn that a short time since a gang to the number of about sixty seized a bungalow and made off to some more congenial spot—though where is not known. Doubtless they will remain there until their misdeeds have ceased to occupy the attention of the Turkish authorities. Bussorah itself is, we learn, much quieter and freer from robbery and murder than it has been for some time past, and the authorities are doing their best to prevent any future outbreaks. It seems that about Rs. 14,000 of the stolen specie has been recovered—the rest has probably been taken off by the robbers to their retreat in the interior. How to catch Shaik Luftan and his gang will be rather a difficult matter for the Turkish Government to determine. The country where they are said to have taken refuge is swampy and marshy, and cannot be approached without the gang receiving timely intimation. The Turkish man-of-war is the only armed ship at Bussorah. No gunboats have been sent there as was stated some time since.—Times of India, July 26.

THE KHAN OF KHELAT.—The truth is out at last about the Khan of Khelat. The intelligence published in the two daily papers establishes the fact that the Khan is the real cause of all the disturbances on our Sind borders. He has positively refused to keep the promises he made to Sir W. Merewether to return the hereditary land belonging to the Sirdars. They have demanded their lands after being put off from time to time, and the answer finally given them by the Khan was in the following words. Alluding to the lands, he says—"They do not belong to you, your grandfathers held them for Nusseer Khan, but I do not want petty rulers and Khans in my territories, I am the paramount authority, and I am the Khan." The Sirdars left him greatly enraged, and sought the advice of the Wuzzeer, requiring him at the same time to ratify the terms of the Treaty, as he was the responsible representative of the Khan at Jacobabad. The Wuzzeer accordingly represented the matter to the Khan, and pointed out that he should adhere to the treaty, as he would otherwise bring disgrace upon Merewether Sahib, who did his best for him and brought about peace and quietness. The Khan was indignant, and ordered his attendants to strike him down. They did not obey his orders, and the Wuzzeer escaped, but the Khan has sworn to take his life in seven days. The Political Agent, Major Harrison, was asked by the Sirdars to interfere, but he was not listened to, and the Khan in addition has threatened to attack his camp. The Commissioner in Sind has ordered the authorities at Jacobabad to send, by double marches, one company of Jacob's Rifles under the command of a European officer. This is the end of the fine promises made a few months since to Sir W. Merewether on behalf of the Khan, and which, it is much to be regretted, Sir William believed for a moment would be performed. What could have induced the Commissioner in Sind, with his extensive experience, to believe in such empty protestations as those made by the Khan of Khelat is at present inexplicable. Perhaps now Sir William will believe that the Jam of Lus Beyla is a better and more important man than he has been hitherto regarded. The cloud is now no bigger than a man's hand on the Sind frontier, but the horizon looks threatening.—The Argus.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

TRANSPORT AND PASSAGE.

The following notification, by the Government of India, in the financial department, is republished for general information:—

May 17.—No. 3,507.—The Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to prescribe, in supersession of all former rules on the subject, the following rules specifying the class of accommodation to be granted to the several grades of Government servants when travelling free, on duty by rail.

All officers drawing salaries of not less than Rs. 350 a month shall receive first class accommodation.

All officers drawing salaries of less than Rs. 350 a month, and not less than Rs. 25 a month, shall receive second class accommodation.

All officers and servants drawing less than Rs. 25 a month, and not less than Rs. 15 a month, shall receive intermediate class accommodation when available, otherwise third class accommodation. All others shall receive third class accommodation.

The necessary alteration to be made in para. 15 Transport Regulations, Part II., and the above order to be entered as para. 15a.

MESSSES.—BRITISH REGIMENTS.

Adj. Gen.'s Office, Head Quarters, Poona, June 29.—The subjoined G.O., by H.R.H. the Field Marshal C. in C., is published to the army in this Presy., and the C. in C. desires to call the particular attention of general officers com. divs. and districts, and officers com. regts., to the orders therein conveyed:—

Horse Guards G.O. No. 39 of 1872.

H.R.H. the Field Marshal C. in C. has reason to know that, in many instances, the expenses of regtl. messes have increased to such an extent as to press heavily and injuriously upon junior officers, and those whose means are limited.

The orders on this subject, as already laid down in paras. 261 and 302 of the "Queen's Regulations and Orders for the Army," and the confidential letter and memorandum of May 15 and July 27, 1857, are so clear and explicit, that any commanding officer who allows the mess of his regiment to become the source of undue and extravagant expense, fails in one of the most important functions of his position. He should not only discourage, but firmly repress, any tendency upon the part of those under his command to indulge in extravagant and unnecessary habits of luxury inconsistent with the military profession. This he should do by personal example, and by insisting upon the mess being conducted, in every particular, with strict economy and a due regard to the means of the poorest member of it.

The F.M. C. in C. is not disposed to dictate to the officers of the army with regard to the nature and number of their entertainments; but commanding officers will be required to exercise a wise discretion in checking and controlling all unnecessary and extreme expenditure on such occasions.

The Duke of Cambridge will not absolve commanding officers from any part of their responsibility in a matter in which the interests and prospects of the younger officers are so deeply concerned; and his Royal Highness will seriously consider the propriety of continuing an officer in command of a regiment who fails to carry out, in their true spirit and intention, the orders of her Majesty on this subject.

General officers in command will, at their annual inspections, report fully upon the ordinary, as well as the special expenses of messes caused by entertainments, and upon the general conduct of regiments in these particulars.

LEAVE AND ALLOWANCES.

The following notification, issued by the Financial Department, No. 287, dated June 14, is republished for general information:—

June 14.—The Gov. Gen. in Council is pleased to declare that the undermentioned rules in the Civil Leave Code are applicable to commissioned military officers in civil employ:—

Rule 2 under section 4 (d) in chapter II.

Rules 2 and 3 under section 9 (b) in chapter III.

Rules 2 and 4 under section 15 in chapter V.

Rule 3 under section 18 in chapter VI.

Rules 2, 4, and 5 under section 21 in chap. VII.

Rules 4, 9, and 10 under section 24 in chapter XII.

2. H.E. in Council is also pleased to direct the republication of the following rules applicable to commissioned military officers in civil employ:—

The words "prior to his proceeding on furlough" in section V. of the Military Furlough Regulations of Nov. 10, 1868, shall, in the case of an officer who takes subsidiary or preparatory leave before furlough, be understood to mean prior to his being relieved of his duties.

Days of embarkation and debarkation are parts of furlough, and furlough allowances only are admissible for such days.

Subsidiary leave ceases the day before embarkation, and commences the day after debarkation. It cannot be extended on the ground that the vessel in which an officer leaves India, or returns to it, touches at some other port in India after the first embarkation or before the final debarkation.

If an officer remains in India after the end of subsidiary leave prefixed to furlough, his furlough is held to have begun in India, and his absence on furlough is reckoned from the date on which he gave up office.

An officer may draw allowances as if he were on privilege leave for any part of his subsidiary leave before furlough, for which, if he were not going on furlough, privilege leave would be admissible to him.

When an officer applies for leave he should distinctly state under what rule he wants leave, and show that he is entitled to leave under that rule.

Officers going on leave from the Public Works Department are required to produce no-demand certificates from account officers of that department.

The Government to which an officer is subordinate may exempt him from loss of appointment when he overstays privilege by more than a week.

Leave may be retrospectively commuted, by the authority which granted it, to any other kind of leave which the said authority would have been competent to allow when the original leave was sanctioned.

When privilege leave is, on medical certificate, retrospectively commuted to furlough out of India, so much of the leave passed before embarkation may be treated as subsidiary leave as the officer would have been entitled to count as subsidiary leave if he had originally obtained furlough and not privilege leave.

An officer on privilege leave cannot draw his allowances in England, but his agent may draw them in India in the manner prescribed in rule 2 under section 23 (a) of the Civil Leave Code.

If an officer receive an advance of pay in England to enable him to return to duty in India, the advance must be recovered at the rate of exchange fixed for transactions with the Imperial Government at the time it was made.

ESTABLISHMENTS.

Headquarters, Simla, June 14.—No. 150.—Under instructions from H.R.H. the Field Marshal C. in C., it is hereby notified that the ten pioneers of British infantry regiments are to be included in the strength of the service companies.

Queen's Regulations, para. 419, G.O. 145 of 1870 (Bombay G.G.O. 427 of 1870).

STAFF—INSPECTIONS.

No. 153.—To remove misapprehension . . . The C. in C., with the concurrence of Government, is pleased to lay down the following rules for guidance:—

When a general officer commanding a division proceeds on inspection or other out-station duty within his command, the proper staff officers to accompany him are the assistant adjutant general and assistant quartermaster general, either or both as the general officer may consider necessary. If only one of these officers is taken, that officer will perform all the staff duties required by the general commanding.

2. On such occasion the brigade major must invariably be left at his station.

3. In district commands, the brigadier general will be accompanied by the brigade major or deputy assistant quartermaster general; and the accompanying officer will perform all the staff duties required by the brigadier general.

4. During the absence on such duty of a brigade major, an officer will be appointed to act as station staff.

VOLUNTEERING—ARTILLERY.

Headquarters, Simla, June 26.—D brig. R.H.A., having been ordered to proceed to England next cold season, the non-commissioned officers, artificers, and men desirous of extending their services in this country will be allowed to volunteer for the R.H.A. serving in any of the Presidencies, under the rules laid down in para. 2 of G.G.O. 195 of Nov. 17, 1863. (Bombay G.G.O. 590 of 1863.)

The non-commissioned officers and artificers volunteering to remain in India will take rank, in the brigade to which they may be posted, according to the dates of their promotion.

It is to be understood that men remaining in the country may select their presidency, but are not allowed to volunteer for any particular brigade or battery.

ARMY SIGNALLING AND TELEGRAPHY.—The officer commanding the sappers and miners is authorised to grant to such officers as have passed through the prescribed course of instruction in army signalling and telegraphy, in this presidency, certificates of proficiency in these branches, after being assured of their qualifications, both with respect to army signalling and the construction and working of a field telegraph.

TRAVELLING OF PUBLIC SERVANTS.—The Governor general in Council is pleased to declare that the notification of this department, No. 3,507, dated May 17, specifying the classes of accommodation to be provided for Government servants travelling under a free pass by railway on duty, does not apply to officers of the army, or to establishments subordinate to H.E. the C. in C.

LEAVE—PASSAGES.—Under instructions from Government, the Commander-in-Chief is pleased to notify that officers returning to India from leave to Europe, who take their passages by private steamers, or steamers not under contract to Government, do so at their own risk in respect to forfeiture of pay, service, or appointment, should they fail to arrive on or before the expiration of their furlough.

SANITARY COMMISSIONERS.—With reference to Home department notifications Nos. 1,650 and 2,344, dated March 4 and May 12, 1870, H.E. the Viceroy and Governor general in Council is pleased to direct that the sanitary commissioner and superintendent of jails and dispensaries and superintendent of vaccination, Hyderabad Assigned districts, shall in future be designated sanitary commissioner and inspector general of jails and dispensaries and superintendent of vaccination, Hyderabad Assigned Districts.

WORKSHOPS.—EXHIBITION 1872.—In continuation of G.O.C. No. 192, March 20, the following instructions are published for general information and guidance:—The Exhibition will be open not only for articles manufactured in workshops, but for all industrial works, being the bona fide production of soldiers, or their wives or children, as well of native as of British regiments. Special prizes will be awarded to the best exhibitors among soldiers' wives, and for the best specimens of children's industry. These special prizes will be irrespective of other prizes that the same articles may obtain as specimens of their particular class of goods. Every article is to be ticketed with the owner's name and regiment, the price put upon it, and the class in which exhibited.

CIVIL FURLONGHS.—The undermentioned gentleman has obtained (in July) leave of absence and furlough to Europe, on medical certificate, under the rules of 1868, unless otherwise specified:—Lieut. Col. C. R. Keatinge, chief commissioner, Central Provinces, has one month's subsidiary leave from July 6, prep. to Europe. Mr. R. B. Smart, of the revenue survey, Bengal, for three months. Major J. Macdonald, deputy superintendent, revenue survey, for three months' privilege leave, with effect from Aug. 2. The leave of absence for three months granted to Mr. H. E. Gaskell, assistant superintendent, revenue survey, 2nd grade, is cancelled. Lieut. J. De B. Lynch, 1st Regt., Central India Horse, is granted sixty days' privilege leave. Mr. A. H. Bryson, for one month. Mr. T. B. Morris, assistant engineer, 2nd division, Lahore and Peshawar road, is allowed three months' privilege leave, and in continuation three months' special leave to study the languages. Mr. P. J. Flynn, executive engineer, P.W.D., has been allowed six months' leave, in extension of the leave already granted. Mr. H. T. Tanner, executive engineer, officiating assistant secretary, Irrigation Branch, is allowed three months' privilege leave, from the 15th July, 1872. Six months' leave of absence is granted to Mr. J. S. McGowan, collector of Customs, Sagar, in extension of the leave allowed to him in notification, dated Feb. 10, 1871.

COURT-MARTIAL.—At a district court-martial, assembled at Peshawar on April 16, Private Samuel Fenton, 6th regiment, was arraigned on the following charges:—1st charge: Having, at Peshawar, without leave from his commanding officer, absented himself from the 1st batt. 6th Royal Regiment from tattoo on April 5 last, and so remained absent until about 5.45 A.M. on April 6. 2nd charge: Disgraceful conduct, in having, at Peshawar, on or about April 5 last, stolen the following property belonging to Private James Motts, 1st batt. 6th Royal Regiment, namely, one watch, value Rs. 20 or thereabouts. 3rd charge: Disgraceful conduct, in having, at Peshawar, on or about April 5 last, feloniously received the following article, the property of Private James Motts, 6th Royal Regiment, knowing the same to have been stolen, namely, one watch, value Rs. 20 or thereabouts. 4th charge: Having, at Peshawar, on April 6 last, been drunk. Finding: The court finds that he is guilty of the 1st, 3rd, and 4th charges. Sentence:—The court sentences the prisoner to be fined and to be imprisoned with hard labour for 365 days.

The court do further sentence him to be dismissed with ignominy from her Majesty's service.—T. PESANT, Lieut. col. R.A., President. Approved and confirmed, with the exception of the discharge with ignominy. Private Fenton is still a very young man. I give him this chance of recovering his character, and becoming a good soldier.—NAPIER OF MAGDALA, General, Commander-in-Chief in India.

SCHOOLS—COLLEGES.—It having been brought to the notice of the C. in C. that for some years past the attainments of soldiers who have been admitted into the upper subordinate department of the Thomason College, Roorkee, have in many cases been below the standard necessary to enable them successfully to complete the course required to be taught in the college; in particular, that several have, on entrance, had no knowledge of mensuration, H.E. is pleased to direct attention to the rules laid down [G.O.C.C. July 30, 1860], specifying the subjects on which candidates are required to pass examination (noted below), and desires that all these subjects may be taught in regimental schools to soldiers who are desirous of qualifying for the P.W.D. Such soldiers (having permission from their commanding officers to become candidates for the entrance examination) should be formed into an advanced class, and attend school under the arrangements laid down for special classes, and the hours of their attendance should be fixed with a view to the schoolmaster being able to give them as much individual instruction as possible with due regard to the requirements of other classes. The number of men studying in this advanced class will in future be inserted in the supplement to each monthly school report. English reading and writing; arithmetic, to vulgar and decimal fractions; elementary mensuration; (a) elementary geometry. (a) Note.—Not at present compulsory, but a preference will be given to those who take it up. Euclid and algebra will be accepted as alternative subjects. "Cape's Geometry" and "Todhunter's Mensuration for Beginners," obtainable from the college, are the test books from which examination questions would be set.

EXAMINATIONS IN THE NATIVE LANGUAGES.—The undermentioned officers are reported by the Board of Examiners, Fort William, to have passed, on the 1st July, 1872, the tests specified agreeably to G.O.C. Head Quarters, Bankeri, May 19.

In continuation of G.O. No. 319 [a] of 1871 and 73 [b] of 1872, the Government have ruled that officers of royal engineers of the British establishment, who came out to this country for employment at once in the Public Works Department, and not as young officers who can be attached to the sappers or hold staff appointments in that corps, are considered entitled to the advantages of Indian leave rules, only in virtue of their being employed in that department. If, therefore, they cease to be so employed, they come under the orders of the Horse Guards, and could be granted leave merely to go home to report themselves.

[a] G.O. No. 319 of 1871.—The following letter from the Officiating Secretary to the Government of India, Military Department, to the Controller of Military Accounts, is published for general information:—

[d] G.O. 108 of 1871.

In reply to your letter, No. 349H, dated June 17 last, I am directed to acquaint you that the Right Hon. the Secretary of State has decided that officers of the royal engineers who hold permanent staff appointments not of a regimental nature, and who may desire to take leave to England under circumstances which by the Furlough Rules of 1868 involve forfeiture of appointment, cannot obtain furlough under those rules. They must, therefore, obtain the leave, if at all, just as any other officer of her Majesty's British troops holding no staff appointment.

2. But the principle laid down in G.G.O. No. 22, dated Jan. 6, 1870 (without the addendum notified in G.G.O. No. 54 of 1871), and in para. 2 of G.G.O. No. 627, dated June 17, 1870, is applicable to such officers; the three years' service required being reckoned, in the case of those who are completing their first tour of service in India, from the date of their reporting their arrival in this country.

TRANSPORT AND PASSAGE.—PAY.

The following letter, from the Secretary to the Government of India, Military Department, No. 827, dated April 13, is published for general information and guidance:—

In reply to your letter No. 45c, "Pay," dated 8th ult., submitting the recommendation of the Right Hon. the C. in C., that the provisions of the letter from this department, No. 172, dated June 8, 1871, be made applicable to all officers proceeding home on duty when detained at Bombay, on condition that the State is not put to the charge of a double payment, I am directed to acquaint you, for his lordship's information, that the Right Hon. the Governor general in Council has decided that an officer ordered to proceed to England on duty, under circumstances which, by the regulations, preclude his receiving Indian allowances after the date of receipt of the order, should be provided with passage on the first troop vessel leaving Bombay after that date that he can arrive in time to proceed by; and, for the period that may intervene between that date on the day on which he must leave his station to catch the said troop vessel, he may be retained for duty with his regiment or battery, receiving, whilst so employed, the Indian allowances which he was drawing when the order reached him.

2. But the Indian allowances in question cannot be admitted unless the officer proceeds, as above, by the first troop vessel; nor under circumstances which will involve a double charge upon the State.

TRAVELLING EXPENSES.

No. 523.—With reference to the G.G.O. No. 515 of 1864, H.E. the Gov. in Council is pleased to publish the following extract of a letter from the Government of India for information and guidance:—

"As the regulations require all officers marching on duty, for whatever distance, to perform the journey at their own expense . . . I am to request that it may be clearly understood, in future, that when an officer has bona fide to march, even by forced marches, on the Government service, no claim for travelling expenses can be admitted; and that only when he is ordered by proper authority to proceed by quicker modes of conveyance at the Government expense is he entitled to charge for such expenses, and then only in strict accordance with the rules applicable to his case."

2. It is also necessary to draw attention to the rule given below, and to state that no claim for travelling expenses can be admitted unless it can be shown that they were incurred on the authority of an order such as that prescribed. An order issued after a journey has been performed, for the purpose of supporting a claim to travelling expenses, is no authority for its admission:—

Para. 2 of G.G.O. No. 515 of 1864.

"2. On occasion of officers being ordered on duty, the general or divisional or garrison order will specify the duty on which proceeding, the mode of travelling, and that the journey is on duty at the public expense."

TROOPSHIP PASSAGES.—The Government of India have directed that when an officer is unavoidably detained at the Presidency for passage in a troopship beyond the usual preparatory leave, the period of such detention will not count against him, but will be treated as coming within the preparatory leave.

QUARTERMASTER GENERAL'S ESTABLISHMENT.—In supersession of G.O. No. 661, dated 4th October, 1870, the establishment of the Quartermaster General's Department will stand as follows:—1. Quartermaster General of the army. 1 Deputy Quartermaster General of the army. 3 Assistants Quartermaster General. 3 Deputy Assistants Quartermaster General.

SUBALTERNs OF NATIVE REGIMENTS.—The Government of India have decided that if a captain holding the post of 1st wing subaltern in a native regiment completes his tenure of five years while on furlough, the appointment will lapse in precisely the same manner as if he were with his regiment. The officer will, however, be eligible for reappointment, under the provisions of G.G.O. No. 90, dated Jan. 31, at the expiration of the tenure.

CIVIL FURLONGS.—The undermentioned gentlemen have obtained (in July) leave of absence and furlough to Europe, on medical certificate, under the rules of 1868, unless otherwise specified:—Lieut. col. T. M. Baumgartner, political superintendent, Akulote, returned to duty from the priv. leave granted to him in notification, dated May 29 last, on July 9. Mr. P. Ryan, assistant secretary to Government in the political department, has a further extension of leave for four months. Mr. H. E. Jacob, acting deputy commissioner of customs, has privilege leave for one month, from Aug. 28.

EXAMINATIONS IN THE NATIVE LANGUAGES.—Sergt. major J. Cox, sappers and miners, is reported to have passed the examination required by G.G.O. No. 92 of 1864, for employment in the P.W.D. Mr. E. Blandford has passed an examination in Canarese. The undermentioned are reported to have passed the examination in Hindustani by the lower standard test:—Gunner A. H. Brissell, 6th brigade R.A.; Gunner W. Martin, 18th brigade R.A.; First-class Schoolmaster A. Wolfe, sappers and miners; Corporal T. Hardiman, sappers and miners; Hospital Apprentice T. R. Mulroney. The undermentioned officers are reported to have passed the required examination in Persian:—Lieut. C. W. H. Sealy, S.C. Asst. surg. W. Nolan, 27th regt. N.L.I.

MILITARY FURLONGS, &c.—The following officers have obtained furlough and leave of absence (in July) to Europe, on medical certificate, under the rules of 1868, unless otherwise specified:—Lieut. F. N. Jones, E batt. 9th brig. R.A., from May 14 to Nov. 14. Lieut. C. G. Cookson, 15th hussars, from date of leaving regiment, for fifteen months, on private affairs. Major W. A. BRITISH ASSOCIATION.

In Section E (Geography), on the 15th inst., three papers were read, and were followed by discussion on railway communication with India. The first paper (the Direct Highway to India) was by Captain Felix Jones, late of the Indian Navy. After glancing at the efforts which had been heretofore made to connect India and Europe, he said:—

The direct route to India had long been acknowledged to be by the Euphrates River. Had a better spirit prevailed among the great powers, Mesopotamia would have been bridged over with railways long before this, for when Chesney's river project was no longer tenable, it was foreseen that the railway system was the one thing needed to furnish the broken link to the chain of communication. To Mr. W. P. Andrew, chairman of the Scinde, Punjab, and Delhi Railways, the credit of this foresight was due; and in 1856 Chesney was again in Syria with a staff of engineers, labouring sedulously as ever to forge the link and to open the highway of his dreams and of his waking thoughts. His efforts were, however, again barren of any practical result, although they demonstrated that the country was in every way adapted for the construction of a railway. French ascendancy in Syria and Egypt had, from the rise of the Second Empire, prevented the carrying out of any scheme. At the present time, however, there was no ground for jealousy. Turkey was conspicuous in a desire for peaceful reforms, and seemed earnest and sincere in asking England's co-operation towards pushing her railways in Asia Minor. Now there was an opportunity for encouraging Turkish efforts for the good of the world at large, and of India and our Eastern Colonies in particular. State exigencies are the bases of sound enterprise. Our exigency was an alternative and direct line eastwards, apart from the passage through Egypt. Turkey's exigency was railway extension and progress within her borders. Men of all professions, ranks, and calibre, with few exceptions, seem agreed as to a fusion of interests with Turkey, but considerable diversity of opinion prevailed as to particulars, and while a very laudable spirit had been evinced as to plans for adoption, the fact of the serious difficulty if not impossibility in the raising of capital even for the most limited of the projects has been mostly overlooked. Among all the different schemes which had been propounded he preferred the one from Aleppo through Deyr Anah and Ilit, thence onward by the right bank of the Euphrates, out of reach of the marsh and flood, by Kerbela, Najaf, Sennaiveh, Sukesh, Zobeyr, thence onward to Bagdad and up to the Persian Gulf. Thence the communication might be by sea to Kurrachee or elsewhere. The Arab populations on the Euphrates are more fixed, more numerous, and more disposed to trade, while the local traffic was greater than on the Tigris, Bagdad and Mosul alone excepted. But with the sacred shrines of Kerbela and Najaf as centres of attraction on the Euphrates for the Shah Mahomedans of Persia and of India, these towns and others south of them made into railway stations would rise briskly into importance, for pilgrimages there were in reality, but profitable trading voyages in two senses to the Moslems. The Euphrates Valley Railway afforded the best prospect of immediate success. It would cement old alliances and would subdue the predatory disposition which had been for so long a fungus growth of those dear old Bible lands.

Mr. Clements Markham then followed with a paper by Mr. Andrew on the same question. It commenced with the observation that the countries which our future highway to India would traverse were the most ancient and interesting in the world. The proposed restoration of the ancient route of the Euphrates had the strongest claim upon the sympathy and support of all who felt an interest in advancing the prosperity, civilisation, and happiness of nations. No existing or projected railway could compare in point of interest and importance with that of the Euphrates Valley. It would bring two quarters of the globe into juxtaposition, and three continents, Europe, Asia, and America, into closer relation. It would bind the vast population of India by an iron link with the people of Europe, and would entail the colonisation and civilisation of the great valleys of the Euphrates and Tigris, the resuscitation in a modern shape of Babylon and Nineveh, and the re-awakening of Ctesiphon and Bagdad of old. Although various routes had been suggested, there was none which combined in itself so many advantages as the ancient route of the Euphrates. It was the most direct route to India. It was the shortest and cheapest, both for constructing and working a railway, so free from engineering difficulties that it almost appeared as though designed by the hand of Nature to be the highway of nations between the East and West; the most surely defensible by England, both of its termini being on the open sea, and the most likely to prove remunerative. In an engineering and political point of view, the Euphrates route, undoubtedly, possessed great advantages over any others. All the routes which had been suggested from places on the Black Sea were open to the fatal objection that they would be of the greatest service to Russia, while the engineering difficulties with which they were surrounded were of themselves sufficient to exclude them from practical consideration. In the course of the investigation before the Select Committee of the House of Commons, the facilities which existed for the construction of a railway from the Mediterranean to the Persian Gulf by the route of the Euphrates had been amply demonstrated by the late General Chesney, the veteran explorer of the route; by Captain Charlwood and Mr. W. F. Ainsworth, two of the officers attached to the Euphrates expedition; and by Sir John Macneill and others. The advantages of the route in respect of the climate and productiveness of the country to be traversed had been fully shown, as well as the facility of the navigation of the Persian Gulf. The advantages of the proposed undertaking, from a military point of view, were placed beyond question; while its importance in a political sense had been established by a cloud of witnesses. The proposed railway from the Gulf of Scanderoon to the Persian Gulf had been specially designed with a view to its ultimately forming part of a through line from Constantinople to the head of the Persian Gulf, while it was capable of being extended eastwards to Kurrachee, the port of India nearest to Europe. The line was almost level for nearly the whole distance, and, therefore, capable of being traversed at a very high rate of speed; whereas in Asia Minor and Persia the gradients would be so severe as to neutralise in a great measure the advantages ordinarily attaching to railway travelling as compared with that by sea. In other words the proposed railway would take advantage of precisely that portion of the route between Constantinople and India where the greatest benefit would be derivable from the substitution of railway for sea transit, whether regard be had to the rate of speed attainable or the economy with which the traffic might be worked. A regular mail service being already in operation on the maritime portions of the Euphrates route to India, a railway of little more than 800 miles in length, from Scanderoon or Alexandretta, on the Mediterranean, to Kowait or Grain, on the Persian Gulf, was all that was required to secure for us the immense political and strategic advantage of a complete alternative route to India, a shorter and more rapid route than now exists, and one, moreover, which compared very favourably with the Red Sea route, both as regards climate and the facility and safety of the navigation on the maritime portions of the journey. The harbour of Alexandretta was of sufficient capacity to contain the whole Navy of Great Britain. It was the safest harbour on the coast of Syria, and might be made available for the purposes of the railway at a very small outlay. With regard to the harbour of Kowait, at the head of the Persian Gulf, nothing could be more secure or favourable in any way for ships of the largest size, whether to ride at anchor, or to be moored alongside a quay wall. For landing and embarking passengers, the mails, and cargo, only a short jetty was required to bring a steam tender along. Kowait was superior to Alexandria, Suez, and Bombay, while for an expenditure of from £80,000 to £100,000 a wharf of sufficient length to berth four steamers of 3,000 tons each might be constructed, and the railway brought down upon it. Starting from Alexandretta the line would pass by Aleppo, Annah, Ilit, Kerbela, Nedjif, Somowha, and Sheik to Kowait. The cost, according to the estimates of competent engineers, would be under nine millions sterling; and Musurus Pasha, the Turkish Ambassador, had officially intimated the readiness of his Government to raise the requisite funds by means of an Ottoman Loan, under conditions especially favourable to this country, if Great Britain would but give a counter guarantee, as she had already done jointly with France, in case of an Ottoman Loan raised in 1854.

Miscellaneous.

MADRAS IRRIGATION AND CANAL COMPANY.—The Madras Irrigation and Canal Company have invited subscriptions for about £600,000 first mortgage 5 per cent. debentures at eighty-two, repayable at par in twelve years. The mortgage will be a first charge on the whole of the company's works, executed at a cost of £1,500,000. At the price of issue and the terms of repayment the yield will be a little over 8 per cent.

THE GEOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY AND DR. LIVINGSTONE.—With reference to the rumoured action of the Royal Geographical Society in fitting out another expedition to communicate with Dr. Livingstone the Council has not settled any plan of action for the future with regard to Dr. Livingstone and his field of exploration. It is not likely they will send another expedition at present, that is, until further news is received from Dr. Livingstone. An Asiatic traveller, Mr. Cameron, who has already been in Borneo, Upper Thibet, and other little known parts, has offered his services free to open up a communication with Dr. Livingstone should he be required to do so.

SHARP PRACTICE.—It seems more than probable now that General Griffith's death will cause no promotion below the rank of Major-General in the Royal Artillery, it having been decided not to consider the recent absorption of one of the two vacancies caused by the retirements under the India Office scheme. This is scarcely right. The clause in the Royal Warrant lays down that "the supernumeraries shall be reduced by the absorption of every third vacancy." Not a word is said about any exceptional instances. The last reduction was effected upon the demise of Major-General Broome, C.S.I., since which time two steps have been given in succession to officers deceased. Surely the recent reduction ought to be taken into account.—Army and Navy Gazette.

MILITARY.—The following will be the transfers to the Royal Horse Artillery in consequence of recent retirements, viz.:—Colonels C. B. Fuller (late Bombay), D. Gaye (late Bombay), and H. Le G. Bruce (late Bengal), on promotion; Lieutenant-Colonels Tod Brown, C.B. (late Bengal), on promotion; G. R. Brown (late Bengal); G. G. Brown (late Bombay); A. Bunny (late Bengal, from 16th Brigade, J. S. Frith (late Bengal), on promotion; and W. D. O. Kerrich (late Madras), on promotion.—Colonel F. W. Bond (late Madras) is to succeed Colonel Eaton as Colonel on the Staff Commanding the Royal Artillery in the South-Eastern District.—Major-General Sir William Coghlan, K.C.B., Major-General on the Bombay List with the rank of Colonel-Commandant is to be taken on the Establishment of Colonels-Commandant and posted to the 21st Brigade, consequent upon the death of General Griffith.

FORAGE CAPS AND BEARDS.—It seems too much to expect that the authorities will all at once see the absurdity of sticking to the forage cap for officers, when the more useful and better-looking Glengarry has been adopted for the men; but why not make a beginning, and allow infantry officers to wear Glengarry caps, when worn by the men in undress, during the autumn manoeuvres? A friend of ours out during the manoeuvres last year carried his regulation forage cap in his haversack, where it took up a good deal of room and got among such articles as bread crumbs and the like, which did not improve it. The Glengarry could be folded up in the great coat, which is carried across the shoulder on the march. It would be far more conveniently carried there, and would be always at hand. The men at Aldershot, when in full marching order, always carry their forage caps at the back of their packs outside, and they consequently can always put them on at a moment's notice when they get into camp. There is another point also. Why should no beards be allowed during the manoeuvres? Last year, it is true, we heard about beards being allowed; but it was only after the troops had been out for about a week. The matter of beards has been long ago spoken and written about, but all we now ask is that officers and men be allowed to avoid the discomfort of shaving in a crowded tent for the time they are out. Little matters of this sort are all important. How can a man who has just cut his chin bless anything—even the Control?—Broad Arrow.—In the General Orders signed by Major-General Armstrong just issued for the conduct of the Armies participating in the Manoeuvres we find no reference made to the head-gear worn by officers when off duty. From this we infer that the wretched (for campaigning purposes) forage cap is again to constitute a part of an officer's kit. When will some consideration be shown by those in authority? Why should not the Glengarry, which can be folded up and carried anywhere and anyhow, be substituted just for the month or so? Is it too late to make the alteration?—Army and Navy Gazette.

CURED OF SNAKE-BITE.—The following account will doubtless be of interest to our readers. The accident occurred on a plantation in Cachar, and the care taken of the poor old coolie gives a practical illustration of the relations subsisting between planter and coolie generally:—"Yesterday morning a corpse was brought and laid down in the bungalow verandah. A splendid old coolie sirdar had been bitten by a snake, and they had carried him in from the garden. He was perfectly insensible, and lay like a log; his pulse was gone, his features had collapsed, and B— observed to me with tears filling his eyes, 'My God! he's gone.' I said, 'Not gone, but fast going, poor fellow.' Still while there was life, we determined to leave nothing untried. A vein was opened in his leg—no blood! About six or seven men were then set on to rub him with small pieces of blanket; two blankets were got together and wrapped round his feet, and boiling water poured over them, ice was applied to his head while friction was actively continued. Half-a-tumbler of brandy was forced down his throat. He had almost lost the power of swallowing. We kept on these remedies, repeated the brandy with ammonia—six drops, so strong you could not bear to smell it—rubbed ipecacuanha into the wound, and at last a pink-tinted fluid began to show itself. His leg was then opened, and ammonia was forced into the wound (close to the sting), and we repeated the dose of brandy and redoubled the friction, because the blood began, after a little, to flow from the second cut. Every one round us thought it was torturing the man, but poor B— and myself, and B— was fairly crying. We then administered a large dose of salad oil to prevent the fumes of alcohol from rising to the brain. After two hours the man opened his eyes, and complained of pains and cramps, and went off into a dead faint again, but we had reliefs by this time, and rubbed him into wakefulness. Meanwhile, a large tubful of hot water had been prepared, into which he was plunged, cold water being at the same time poured on his head. He was however still lazy and sluggish. Half-an-hour passed, more hot water to the body, more cold to the head, and, oh! what joy for us, the old man can articulate, and even make an effort at rising. The moment his limbs were sufficiently relaxed we lifted him out of the tub, and enveloped him in a blanket; and then, poor old fellow! he was trotted up and down the verandah till he dropped from fatigue. Brandy down his throat, and cold water dashed in his face soon revived him. In the interim arrowroot had been prepared—for I knew the depression after brandy—to keep up his strength. We made him take it, and in the evening at dinner time, some good strong tin soup. He had a good night's rest, and this morning is a hale, hearty old man."—Bengal Times.

India-Office, 31st July, 1872.

BY ORDER OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL.

FIVE YOUNG MEN will be SELECTED in NOVEMBER next to be TRAINED and EDUCATED for the FOREST SERVICE of INDIA.

The course of Training and Instruction in Forestry and Cognate Sciences in France or Germany lasts for two years and a-half, previous to the departure of the Students for India at the end of 1875, and the Secretary of State will contribute, at the rate of £50 half-yearly, towards the Expenses of the Training of such Candidates as are favourably reported on by their Instructors. In addition to this, some weeks must be passed under a Forester in Scotland.

The Salary will be at first £300 a-year, and the Salaries of the Appointments in the three Presidencies range between that sum and £1,900 a-year.

Applicants must be natural British subjects, above Seventeen and under Twenty-three Years of Age, and unmarried.

Persons intending to become Candidates should at once apply for the particulars of these Appointments to the Assistant Secretary, Revenue Department, India Office, Westminster, as the Testimonials and Certificates required must be sent to the India Office before the 14th of October next.

HERMAN MERIVALE.

THE MADRAS IRRIGATION and CANAL COMPANY.

INCORPORATED BY SPECIAL ACT OF PARLIAMENT.

ISSUE OF MORTGAGES

Under the Authority of Special Acts of Parliament passed, with the express approval of the Secretary of State for India, for the purpose of paying off temporary advances made by Government, amounting to £600,000, and Interest thereon;

FORMING A STATUTORY FIRST CHARGE

Upon the whole of the Company's completed Main Canal for Irrigation and Navigation, in length 190 miles; with over 300 miles of completed Irrigation Channels therefrom (now in successful operation), also the land occupied by the said Canal and Channels and the Embankments, and on either side thereof, including extensive areas, at present submerged, but which are gradually silting up and will become rich cultivable land; and the Stations, Workshops, Bungalows, Offices, Tollhouses, and other Buildings erected on portions of such land, and the Timber and other Trees grown on other parts; also upon all Rates for Irrigation (the same being payable by the Government direct), all charges for water otherwise supplied; also all Navigation Tolls and other revenue of the Company (except the Guaranteed Interest on the present Capital Stock of the Company), subject however as to these Rates, Tolls, and other revenue, but as to these only, to the said temporary advance of £600,000 so long as the same or any part thereof shall remain unliquidated, and for the payment off of which the present Loan is issued.

Upon the construction of the foregoing Main Canal, Subsidiary Channels, accessory Works and Buildings, a sum of £1,500,000 (including the £600,000 to be now paid off) has been expended under the supervision of Government, in addition to which all the land referred to above was provided and secured to the Company by the Government.

The Price of Issue 82 per Cent. of the nominal amount, repayable at par at the expiration of twelve years from date of issue, or at the option of the Company at any time after five years and after three months' notice.

Interest at 5 per cent. per annum on the nominal amount of issue will be paid half-yearly on the 1st of January and the 1st of July.

Subscriptions payable by instalments as follows:—

For every £100 nominal:
£10 on allotment.

The remaining £82 by four equal instalments of £16. 10s. each, on the first of the month next following the expiration of each succeeding three months from allotment.

The whole or any portion of the instalments may be paid by anticipation, and interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum will be allowed upon the actual amount paid from date of payment until it shall become due as an instalment.

Mortgages will be granted for amounts from £20 upwards, as subscribers may desire, but all amounts under £100 nominal must be paid in full on application.

Subscribers to have liberty at any time, upon notice, to exchange each Mortgage for Stock or Shares in the Company, equal in amount at par to the sum secured by such Mortgage.

Prospectuses and Forms of Applications for Mortgages may now be had at the Company's Offices, 8 and 9, Queen-street-place, Southwark-bridge, London, E.C.; or at the Company's Bankers, Messrs. RAMSON, BOURN, and Co., 1, Pall-mall East, London, S.W.; or at the Agra Bank (Limited), 35, Nicholas-lane, Lombard-street, E.C.

In case the payment on allotment shall not absorb the whole deposit, the surplus will be returned, or retained on account of the next instalment, as the subscriber may prefer.

Should no allotment be made to an applicant, the deposit will be returned without deduction.

By Order of the Board of Directors,

J. WESTWOOD,

Secretary of the Company.

ciple of the gastric juice. In Powder, Lozenges, Globules, and as Wine.

CHLORODYNE has now obtained such universal celebrity it can scarcely be considered a speciality, its composition being known to most European practitioners. The combination of Chloroform quickly relieves the pain and spasms of Cholera, Diarrhoea, Dysentery, and in fact all acute and nervous pains, and chronic Coughs; frequently small doses will produce this beneficial result. Many of the Chlorodynes of commerce are not of uniform strength; this has induced MORSON and Son to compound their preparation. Sold in 1-oz., 1, and 2-oz. bottles.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.

Facts and figures recommend Holloway's treatment to tender-hearted persons. Changes of season are always trying to mankind, from the variability of temperature now increasing then depressing the circulation. Hence the prevalence of throat affections, chest complaints, and disordered digestion at this season. For all this catalogue of ailments, Holloway's Ointment, rubbed thoroughly twice a-day over the parts affected, will be found universally serviceable in preventing, checking, or curing each and all. It is remarkably curative in cases of inflamed or ulcerated throat, while for glandular enlargements it is a specific. In coughs, colds, asthma, and bronchitis, Holloway's Pills should be taken simultaneously with the friction of the Ointment over the chest.

PROSPECTUS.

This Association has been formed for the purpose of supplying what has been long and painfully felt as a want by all Departments of the Indian Services, as well as the Anglo-Indian public generally. The Business it will undertake will consist of Banking and Agency in all its Branches connected with the East, at adequate Commissions. Success will depend more on the Credit and Character of the Company than upon a large Capital; and, as the business will be at once safe and comprehensive, the profits ought to admit of handsome dividends being realised for the shareholders.

The Banking operations of the Company will be conducted with the view principally of attracting the more profitable Agency business of the Civil and Military Services, and the accounts of professional and other persons who are not engaged in large commercial transactions, coupled with the Insurance Accounts, and other Agencies, which must follow such a line of Business.

The Civil and Military, Covenanted and Uncovenanted, Servants of the Indian Government are now a very large body, and the different Members of the Government Services in that country are in receipt of liberal incomes. Many of these gentlemen frequently require temporary accommodation, which they have difficulty in obtaining, unless at usurious rates; and to make such advances, when covered by adequate collateral security, will be one of the principal objects of this Company; in the different Presidencies there are a large number of gentlemen, European and native, in receipt of moderate allowances, which are paid with the greatest punctuality, and who might be advantageously assisted under the careful system of management which will characterise the Business to be conducted by this Company.

A moderate Commission on the collection of Furlough Pay, and Pensions of the Indian Government Constituents will, in itself, afford a good income.

The following classes of Business will also be undertaken by this Agency:—

- 1.—To receive and remit Pay, Salaries, Pensions, Dividends, Fund Allowances, and every other description of Income.
- 2.—To undertake the Agency of H.M.'s Service (Army and Navy), and others, both in India and England.
- 3.—To make remittances to and from India at the Exchange of the day.
- 4.—To keep Current Accounts on the principle adopted by London Bankers, with or without Commission, and with or without an allowance of Interest, according to Agreement, and to receive Fixed Deposits at agreed Rates.
- 5.—To secure Passages by the Steamers of the Peninsular and Oriental Company, the Austrian Lloyd's, the Messageries Maritimes, and the Societa d'Adriatico Italiano, and by all other Vessels running to and from India.

6.—To execute orders of every kind, both at home and in the East, including the Transport and Warehousing of Furniture and Baggage, taking houses and apartments and similar services.

The completion and opening up of the Railways throughout India, and the large increase of through traffic between the two countries since the opening of the Suez Canal, show clearly the wide field for this part of the Company's operations.

Co-operative Store Departments, under the direction of this Agency, will be established in India. As this is a field, up to the present time undeveloped and much required, it is only reasonable to anticipate that a success equal to that achieved by such establishments in England will result, and a large connection will in consequence be secured for the Company. Many Indian families in this country reside in the West-end of London; it is therefore proposed to open a Branch there also, and to secure accommodation for the especial reception and warehousing of Baggage, &c., &c.

A portion of the Shares will be reserved for Subscribers in India.

No promotion money is payable, but 1,500 fully paid up Shares have been appropriated for the benefit of the Founders of the Company, as provided in the Articles of Association.

Copies of the Memorandum and Articles of Association to be seen on application to the Solicitors or at the Company's Offices.

Applications for Shares addressed to the Directors in the enclosed Form will be received by Messrs. BARCLAY, BEVAN, TRITTON, TWELLS, and Co., 54, Lombard-street, London, Bankers to the Company; by JOHN DAVIES, Esq., Secretary to the Company; and by I. H. DUNSTON, Esq., at 6½, Austin-friars, Old Broad-street, E.C., where the offices of the Company are (pro tem.), of whom Prospectuses may be obtained.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR SHARES.

To the Directors of THE EAST INDIAN CIVIL, MILITARY, AND COMMERCIAL AGENCY (Limited).

Gentlemen,—Having paid to your Bankers the sum of £ being a Deposit of £1 per Share, I hereby request you will allot me

NOTICE.

Owing to the frequent irregularity of late in the arrival of the Indian Mails, our readers will no doubt excuse us for reverting from our recent rule of publishing this Journal every Monday, to the older system of publication on the arrival of every Overland Mail.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail, which again came in two days after time, are—from Bombay, August 2; Agra and Madras, July 31; Calcutta, July 30.

LORD NORTHBROOK was to leave Simla with a small retinue on the 5th August for Chini, a spot discovered, we think, by Lord Dalhousie, which lies in the heart of the Himalayas, a week's journey or so beyond Simla, and well beyond the influence of the yearly rains. The change from the cloudland of Simla to the drier climate of Chini will no doubt be very welcome to his Lordship, apart from the opportunities for sport afforded him by the way.

LORD NORTHBROOK has made a handsome present of a thousand pounds towards the founding of a new Anglo-Oriental College for Mohammedans. Another of his good deeds which calls for notice was the check he put on hurried legislation with regard to Sir R. Temple's Bill for license-duties on certain spirits in British Burmah. The Bill was nearly passing when his Lordship happened to ask whether it had been translated into the vernacular and published, according to rule, in the British Burmah Gazette. The Council seem to have been taken aback at so simple a question, and it turned out that not only had no translation been made, but that the Gazette in question was not even taken in by the Simla Secretariat. An incident like this would seem to justify the complaints so often raised in India against the way in which new measures are smuggled through the Council. Of course all further dealing with the Bill was adjourned for a fortnight; but even that seems too short a time for circulating its contents in a province two thousand miles off.

It is given out that Lord Northbrook will start in the middle of October for a long tour by way of Lahore and Sealkote to Mooltan, thence down the Indus to Kurrachee and across to Bombay. In these days of railway travelling, there is no excuse for a Viceroy keeping away from any part of his wide dominions, especially from the minor Presidencies which have generally been left too much to themselves, to the disadvantage both of the supreme and local governments.

WE regret to hear that cholera is still raging in Lahore, where several Europeans were among its latest victims. It was also hanging about Jammu, on the borders of Kashmere, whose Maharajah, as our correspondent assures us, preferred remaining near the seat of danger to passing his summer pleasantly in the beautiful valley around Srinagar.

WHEN the mail started, Bombay was on the point of receiving a new supply of water from the opening of the Toolsee dam into the Vehar lake. The works at this point have been completed, and before the end of July the sluice was lifted a little, so as to let some of the Toolsee water at once into Vehar. Bombay is already rejoicing at her escape from a water-famine.

THE weather reports from India are mostly good. In Bombay nearly sixty inches of rain had fallen, the weather was "delightfully cool," and the fresh vegetation pleasant to behold. From Guzerat and the Central Provinces similar weather is reported. In the Punjab and in some parts of Sindh heavy floods have done much damage to valuable property. In the North-West Provinces and Bengal the rainfall hitherto has been very light as compared with last year. At Allahabad only eight inches had fallen down to the 26th July. The bunniahs are already beginning therefore to keep back their grain with an eye to greater profits in the future. In Madras the monsoon has equalled the average; and everywhere except in the North-West Provinces the crops are promising well.

THE Moolvie, Liakat Ali, has been sent down to Alipore jail, whence in due time he will be shipped off to the Andamans. It came out in the evidence that he had spared the lives of certain Europeans, and even severely punished one of his own men for wantonly wounding one of their number. But Mr. Pollock, the Sessions Judge, in his summing up, held that neither Mrs. Bennett nor any other witness for the defence had much cause for gratitude to the Moolvie, who had fed them very badly, and left them pretty much to chance, when he might have sent them all in to their friends in the Fort. The judge finds no extenuating circumstances in the case, although he allows that Liakat Ali was "not shown to have taken an active part in the perpetration of gross cruelties, or murders of Europeans, or natives." It was quite clear however that he had been devoted to the rebel cause both at Allahabad and Cawnpore. The sentence, we suppose, is technically just; but after all the sheltering of Europeans should count for something, even if he did not look so closely as he might have done after their wants and comforts.

A WRITER in the Bombay Gazette expresses his wonder at the favour shown in some quarters to the project of a Carwar Railway, when the interests of a much larger region, containing many more millions of population, can be furthered by "a railroad running north and south via Belgaum, connecting with the Great Indian Peninsula near Poonah, furnishing the easiest, cheapest, and most practicable outlet for Sattara, Kolhapoor, Sanglee, Meerug, Belgaum, Dharwar, and the whole Southern Mahratta Country, at an expense much less than the proposed Carwar line." The writer declares that he has no personal interest in either line, but speaks with an eye to the best interests of the whole country. Whether his views are as sound as they appear to be disinterested, we cannot say. It was inevitable that any broad scheme for developing railways in India under State control would raise a host of competing claimants for the public money. But it seems odd that all this outcry against the Carwar and Hooblee line should have begun to rage long after the line in question had been openly projected, at the very moment when nothing but the orders of the Government are needed to carry out the construction of a line already surveyed and reported as practicable. Even in Bombay itself opinion seems to be almost equally divided, for the Times of India advocates the Carwar line as warmly as it is opposed by the Bombay Gazette. Each of them keeps a special correspondent at Simla, who writes or telegraphs things pleasant to his employer. One of them the other day informed the readers of the Times of India that the construction of the line from Carwar to Yellapore was to begin early in the cold season. Hardly had that journal inferred from this message that "anyhow the Carwar Railway is now safe," when the rival editor brought out his telegram, assuring him that he might "safely contradict" his rival's statement, for "nothing official is known." Which of them is in the right, we wonder?

So far from having already sanctioned the construction of the Carwar Railway, it appears from a special telegram published in the Pioneer, a paper which ought to know best on this matter, that the Indian Government has ordered a Committee to consider the whole question, with reference, we presume, to the course which the Government ought to take.

ONE of the reforms on which Mr. Campbell seems to have set his heart, is the introduction of practical science into the schools of Bengal. Something of this sort has long been advocated both by Englishmen and enlightened natives in Bengal, as a means of counteracting the peculiar bent of the Hindu mind towards verbal logic and fine-drawn speculations which lead to nothing. But the study of practical science is still warmly opposed by many Hindu gentlemen, who regard it as tending to deteriorate the character of their colleges and to cramp instead of enlarging the Hindu mind. The Calcutta University moreover has done much to discourage the study in question, by compelling candidates for the First Arts examination to pass in Sanskrit or some other classical language. Mr. Campbell however called on the Director of Public Instruction to furnish a plan for the encouragement of practical science among the youth of Bengal; and Mr. Woodrow has answered the call in a long and well-considered paper, setting forth the advantages of a system of scientific training like that which has done so much good in Germany and Switzerland. He gives an interesting account of the German Real-Schulen, or practical schools, and urges the special importance of teaching drawing as a regular subject of study in all Bengali schools. Drawing, he well observes, "educates the eye and becomes as it were the grammar to the study of sciences of observation and experiment." Every Prussian teacher knows drawing, and a well-known passage is quoted from Horace Mann, to show the difference between geography as taught in a Bengal school, and geography as made clear to the pupil's understanding in Germany by means of the blackboard and a piece of chalk. Mr. Woodrow would give three hours a week to instruction in drawing, surveying, and engineering. Any teacher in a Government school should be examined, he thinks, in Physical Geography, and in one of these four subjects, Physics, Chemistry, Botany, and Geology. To teach the schoolmasters themselves, peripatetic teachers must first be appointed, but after a couple of years many of the regular teachers will have learnt enough, with due encouragement from the State, to qualify them for teaching others. Something also must be done to encourage practical science in the University, where Sanskrit just now "blocks up the opening."

IN approving of Mr. Woodrow's proposals, the Lieutenant-Governor adds a special indictment against the Bengali students of his day for their bad writing. It was quite otherwise in former days, he declares, when the native clerks in Government employ wrote a remarkably good English hand. He insists therefore on greater attention being paid to this branch of practical knowledge in the Government schools.

THE only piece of news telegraphed from India during the past week is a statement that cholera is raging in Kashmere.

WE are glad to see that the Englishman has once more drawn attention to "the costly customs lines which sever one province of India from another." It is really hard to understand why the duty on salt in one part of India should be as much as six shillings a maund while in another part as large a revenue can be obtained with a duty of only half a crown. The evil effects of these unequal rates have long been patent in the prevalence of smuggling and the cost of maintaining a preventive service between two great sections of British India. Mr. Hunter's work on Orissa furnishes fresh evidence of the mischief arising from a policy so far behind the times. Indirectly also, and against the author's own conclusions, it seems to suggest some very strong arguments for lowering the salt duties in Upper India to the level of those in Madras. It is now generally admitted that those duties should be equalised all over India, but Mr. Hunter is for levelling upwards, whereas the facts he adduces are much in favour of the opposite process. He argues that the people of Southern India already consume more salt per head than they absolutely need. But the experience of others ill supports the assumption, and his calculations allow nothing either for the cheaper salt that crosses the customs frontier northwards, or for the wants of the cattle in Southern India. If half an ounce of salt a day is not deemed too much for our English soldiers at home, twice that quantity will hardly suffice the Madras peasant for himself alone, to say nothing of his cattle who often die for want of the needful seasoning to their food. The very fact that salt manufactured for a few shillings a ton costs the consumer as many pounds, seems to proclaim the gross injustice of a rate of duty which raises the prime cost of a necessary of life to something like a thousand per cent. It is likely enough that improved means of transport and enlarged sources of supply would tend to cheapen the salt in the market; but before all things it seems necessary to lower the salt duties in Upper India to the level of Madras. This too, we are glad to note, was the conclusion which most commended itself to Lord Mayo's practical common-sense. His idea of reform, we learn, was "based on a consumption at lower rates," for he had learnt to look upon the existing rates as the cause of real suffering and even of much disease among the people. It is hard indeed to say how many of the cattle in various parts of India have died for want of salt, or how much of the illness prevalent among the people has been owing to the same cause. Lord Northbrook, we hope, will follow up his predecessor's researches in this direction, without fear for any financial consequences involved in the first stages of a movement for lowering duties which bring in a handsome revenue.

It appears from a recent number of the Englishman that former estimates of the population of Bengal will have to be considerably revised when the results of the last census are made public. The returns of certain districts would seem to show that the regulation districts alone contain fifty-six instead of thirty-six millions of souls. These districts comprise an area of about 140,000 square miles, hitherto supposed to yield an average of 256 persons to the square mile. This average must now, it seems, be raised to 400, a proportion higher by thirty-nine than that for the North-Western Provinces, and ten more than the figure assigned to England and Wales. It is less however by seventy-four than the average per square mile in Oudh. The non-regulation provinces are usually reckoned at 96,000 square miles, with an average population of only sixty-seven to the square mile. The whole therefore of Mr. Campbell's territory contains an area of 236,000 square miles, nearly twice the size of the British Islands, with a population more than double theirs. The thirty-eight regulation districts of Bengal average an area of 3,700 square miles each, and the eight divisions one of 17,500 square miles. The latter therefore are nearly twice the size of the nine divisions in the North-West Provinces, while the districts in the latter average only 2,320 square miles each. A comparison in this respect with Oudh is still more significant. That province is no larger than the Patna Division, and yet it supports one Chief Commissioner and four Commissioners, with twelve district officers. As our contemporary pertinently remarks, "either one would think a large amount of money must be wasted upon high salaries in Oudh, or a considerable addition is called for to the administrative staff of Bengal." If the estimates of population in Bengal are near the mark, it is high time to institute a yet more sweeping reform. The area of Bombay and Madras together is not much larger than that of Bengal, and their joint population is probably less. And yet each of those provinces is ruled by a full Governor and his Council, whereas Bengal can only boast a Lieutenant-Governor. It would at least be something gained, if the Patna and Bhagalpore Divisions could be transferred to the North-West Provinces, to which their inhabitants seem to show a nearer affinity than to the people of Bengal.

MR. LEWIS FARLEY has lately informed the public of an offer he has received from certain capitalists and contractors to carry a railway on the narrow gauge from Scanderoon, by Aleppo, to Basrah on the Persian Gulf, for five million sterling, or about half the sum mentioned in the Report of the Euphrates Valley Railway Committee. They are also prepared to guarantee an average speed of thirty-five miles an hour. The route proposed differs from that recommended by the Committee, for it would cross the Euphrates at Birejik, and pass down the right bank of the Tigris, through a populous and fertile country, by the "thriving towns" of Mardin, Nisibin, and Jezireh, to Mosul and Bagdad. The offer, it seems, has already been communicated to the Turkish Government.

THE Archbishop of Canterbury has given deep, nor quite unreasonable offence to some of our Indian visitors by his well-meant but ill-advised utterances at Carlisle regarding the so-called "heathens" of the Eastern world, the natives of India, China, and Japan, who find their way to our shores, and some of whom, in point of intellect, culture, and moral advancement might compare favourably with the cultivated classes in any land. In referring to the Burmese ambassadors as "absolute heathens," and wondering that Hindu gentlemen, who study the law in the Temple or Lincoln's Inn, should still remain "heathens in the centre of English civilisation," his Grace was really pandering to the ignorance and self-conceit of his hearers, and illustrating that very spirit of self-righteous Pharisaism which the founder of Christianity condemned among his own countrymen. To call a foreigner a heathen because his religion differs from yours is to pay a poor compliment to your own religion, to say nothing of your good taste and breeding, or of the charity which ought to underlie the faith of a true Christian. The letters in the Times from some of the Hindu law-students betray the soreness they could hardly help feeling at the unprovoked insult to their race and creed; a soreness not to be allayed by his Grace's expression of a fear lest growing intercourse with these Eastern strangers, and the increasing study of Eastern philosophy in "our great seminaries of learning," should not only corrupt our literature, but also encourage converts among our English youth from Christianity to heathenism. His Grace might surely have left these precious bursts of Christian charity and enlightened tolerance to the amiable enthusiasts of Exeter Hall.

THE Chairman of the meeting at which the Archbishop of Canterbury spoke about heathenism, has written to the Times to explain away the offensive passages of his Grace's speech. The expressions used, the Bishop of Carlisle says, were never meant to be taken in the sense they seem to bear. We are assured that the term "heathen" was "not used in a manner to cause pain or offence." We are willing to acquit his Grace of all intention to offend any one, because the word in question is very freely used as an equivalent for Gentile or Pagan in its modern sense, as a general term in short for all foreigners who are not Christians. But the tone and drift of his speech, as reported, do seem calculated to vex not only a susceptible Hindu like Mr. Thakur, but many Christians who have not the least desire to turn Buddhists or Hindus. It is wonderful by the way to hear his Grace's apologist talk of "heathen" being "derived" from the Greek ethnos, "a nation," as if a good Old-English word must needs trace its parentage from a Greek one. "Heathen," like the German heiden, meant simply "dwellers on the heath," countryfolk in short, just as "Pagan" was once the Latin term for a countryman.

INDIAN RAILWAYS.

THE Report of Mr. Juland Danvers on Indian Railways in 1871-72 contains the usual amount of interesting details intermixed with useful and suggestive remarks. A brief description of the heavy floods from which so many railways suffered last year, three of them alone to the tune of £300,000, leads Mr. Danvers to suggest the possibility of issuing telegraphic warnings from the Upper Provinces as soon as the rivers there begin to rise. By this means he thinks that due precautions might be taken in Bengal, before the floods find their way so far down the rivers which empty themselves into the Bay. For want of timely warning many bridges and culverts which were swept away on the Eastern Bengal Line might have been saved by cutting sufficient water-way through the embankments. It is acknowledged however that much of the damage done by yearly floods is due to the mistakes of railway engineers who have hitherto sought to confine or resist the rivers, instead of making way for their overflow.

Of the 5,204½ miles of railway open at the end of last March, 250 miles were completed in the last and 128 more in the first quarter of the present year. Only sixty-eight and a-half miles of open railway belong to the Government, and only thirteen have actually been laid down by the State, the balance consisting of the Nulhatee and South-Eastern lines purchased by the State from guaranteed companies. There are now however some 2,440 miles in course of construction, of which 1,503 are being laid by the Government at a probable cost of eleven millions, including the two already expended. The recent additions to the guaranteed lines include thirty-nine miles on the Wudwan branch of the Bombay and Baroda Railway. "It is worthy of remark," says Mr. Danvers, "that this last portion of railway, which is constructed on the 5ft 6in. gauge, was completed and opened within a year of the acquisition of the land at a cost of about £7,000 a mile." Very worthy of remark, we may say, with reference to the question of broad or narrow gauge for the line from Kotree to Mooltan, for example. According to Mr. Danvers's own statement, "some engineers" contend that very little will be saved by adopting the metre gauge on State railways; and Mr. Fowler himself, an engineer of no mean repute, has shown by careful estimates that the Indus Valley Line can be built on the standard gauge of 5ft. 6in. for £8,367 a mile, or about £800 a mile more than the estimated cost of a narrow gauge railway over the same ground. Even for the line from Lahore to Peshawar the probable saving by the narrow-gauge would be no greater. But the time, it seems, "is approaching when the question will be settled by absolute results." What this means, we are left to guess; but if the absolute results refer to the issue of experiments on some other line, it is hard to see how that will settle the question with regard to a great military railway, whose usefulness depends on other considerations than prime cost alone. Wherever else the narrow gauge may be tried successfully, its application to the Punjab State Railways appears to us sadly out of place, in view of the arguments adduced against it by the eminent engineers whose reports we noticed some weeks ago.

Of the 307 ships employed last year in carrying railway stores to India, six were lost, whose aggregate cargoes are valued at £32,882. We note that already the Suez Canal is becoming the favourite route even for vessels thus laden, the saving in time by this route being often of more value than the added charge for freight. The average charges for freight, as shown by the report, range from 10s. 6d. a ton on stores carried for State railways to £2. 13s. 7d. for the Punjab and Delhi line. No reason is assigned for so great a discrepancy. The East Indian Railway paid only 15s. a ton, but to this must be added 25s. for insurance. It is possible that insurance may be included in the charges for the Punjab and Delhi line, but even then it pays much higher rates than the East Indian. During the last nineteen or twenty years nearly twenty-nine million pounds' worth of stores have been sent out to India in 6,926 vessels, of which sixty-seven only have been lost.

The guaranteed capital at the end of last March amounted to about ninety-three and a-half millions, or nearly a million and a-half more than it did a year before. The number of shareholders increased during the year by about 5,000, while the holders of stock and debentures fell from 6,759 to 3,658. Of the 61,314 holders of all sorts only 395 are Native Indians, a fact at which nobody need wonder who remembers the high rates of interest that prevail in purely Indian speculations.

Of the 68,517 persons employed last year on Indian railways 4,852 were Europeans. In spite of the new mileage open and the sixty-nine new stations, the whole number employed was less by 700 than in the previous year. On the Punjab and Delhi Railway the reduction of railway servants amounted to 4,771, and on the East Indian to 1,528, while the Great Indian has increased its numbers by 2,372 and the Bombay and Baroda by 777. Only one person was killed last year through a cause beyond his own control out of nearly nineteen million passengers; a result which shows well beside the thirty-one killed in 1869 and the four killed in 1870. In those same years sixty-three and ninety-two passengers were injured by accidents to trains. Last year only eight were thus injured. Of the railway servants 216 received hurts, of which eighty-four proved fatal; all but three of the latter class being due to carelessness or misconduct on their own part. The accidents from fires amounted to seventy-six, most of which occurred on the Punjab and Delhi line. Among the 314 animals run over by trains were a camel, a crocodile, and a hyæna. We wish that Mr. Danvers had told us a little more about the crocodile. How did it happen to get into the way of the train? The other animals that shared the same fate were buffaloes, goats, deer, leopards, cows, and bulls. One item which Mr. Danvers deems peculiar to Indian railway returns deals with the deaths of passengers from natural causes. Last year 110 persons, of whom ninety were males, died during the journey from heat-apoplexy, cholera, fever, dysentery, and other forms of disease. A careful inquiry is made into all such cases, and many of the sufferers are believed to have set out on their travels in a state of entire unfitness to bear the fatigue and heat of a long railway ride. Without questioning the grounds for such a belief, we should like to know how many of these deaths have been hastened by the want of ordinary comforts on the way.

Of the 11½ millions to be expended on State railways two millions are set down against the lines which are to connect Agra with Ajmere, Delhi, and the Sambhur Lake; covering altogether a length of 367 miles. The Northern Punjab line of 270 miles is reckoned to cost £2,700,000, and the 480 miles of the Indus Valley line are put down at £3,000,000. The line of 144 miles from Carwar to Hooblee and the Holkar State Railway of only 86 miles from Indore to Kundwa on the Great Indian Peninsula, are each put down for £900,000. The Nizam's line from Goolburga to Hyderabad, a distance of 116 miles, will probably cost a million. Of the £1,812,382 hitherto spent on State Railways, £660,868 has been laid out on the Northern Punjab line, and nearly as much in the purchase of the Calcutta and South-Eastern Railway.

In spite of the new mileage opened last year and the increased amount of capital expended on railways, the net revenue of all the lines together shows a decrease of £2,524 on the total for the previous year, although the working expenses were reduced by about £65,000, and the passenger traffic is steadily increasing on the whole. On the East Indian the falling off amounted to more than £43,324 on passenger traffic, and £257,300 on goods. The Sindh and Punjab lines show a general decrease of £31,237. These two lines however were the only sufferers in this respect, all the others showing an increase, which in the case of the Great Indian Peninsula was not far short of £200,000. Luckily for this railway, it had no river to compete with it for the carriage of goods in a year of dull markets, whereas the East Indian suffered mainly from this cause. Had the Company been wise enough to lower their rates, the result, as Mr. Danvers intimates, would probably have been very different. But railway companies are very slow to learn the true secret of a profitable business. A comparison however of one term of years with another shows that in spite of all drawbacks, preventible or otherwise, Indian railways are doing on the whole as well as might have been expected. Between 1857 and last year the average net receipts on the East Indian line have steadily risen from £636 per mile to £999; on the Great Indian Peninsula from £351 to £611 a mile; from £375 to £735 on the Eastern Bengal; and from £185 to £397 on the Madras line. But all these instances are outdone by the progress of the Bombay and Baroda line, whose average of net receipts has risen from £106 to £514 a mile. When we remember that the Indian Railway system is barely twenty years old, we may well be satisfied with results like these in a country where so much has yet to be done for the development of trade and industry.

Ninety-three per cent. of the passengers during the year travelled by the third and fourth classes, contributing £1,405,225 to the total of £1,941,978 received from passenger traffic. The first-class travellers contributed only £98,308. On two of the lines there is an "intermediate" class between the second and third, the receipts from which amounted to £29,837. The decline in the quantity of goods carried is stated at 440,000 tons. In working expenses the East Indian saved as much as £120,000, while the Punjab and Delhi spent £50,700 more than the year before. The Madras line shows £22,000 in excess, against a saving of £20,000 in the Great Indian Peninsula. The working expenses of different lines vary from 41·68 on the East Indian main line to 99·71 on the Sind, Punjab, and Delhi; but the general average stands nevertheless at 53·70. The receipts per train mile vary from about 12s. 6d. on the Bombay and Baroda to 2s. 6d. on the Carnatic line. The average both of receipts and expenses per mile on Indian railways—8·74 and 4·50 respectively—is higher than in England; but the relative proportion between the two items in each country is not very different—less apparently than four per cent. in England's favour. The cost of fuel tells powerfully against some railways; the Great Indian Peninsula for instance paying more than twice as much for its coal as the East Indian. The highest rate of all, 27·41d. per mile run, is paid by the Bombay and Baroda line, while the average cost of fuel in Bengal and Madras ranges from 14·02d. on the Great Southern of India to 16·83d. on the Eastern Bengal line. Let us hope with Mr. Danvers that the coalbeds lately discovered in Central India will ere long lower the cost of fuel for the railways in Western India. On the Madras side wood is the chief fuel employed, but the question of using the condensed peat found on the slopes of the Nilgherries has lately been raised by Colonel Wragge. Opinion in Madras however appears so far unfavourable to the Colonel's scheme.

The net earnings of the guaranteed lines came to £2,839,338, thus leaving rather more than a million and a-half to be defrayed as interest out of Indian revenues. All things considered, this is not a very serious charge on the Indian taxpayer in return for the benefits already flowing and sure in time to flow yet more abundantly from the spread of Indian railways. The guarantee system may have fairly been condemned for future purposes, but with all its shortcomings no better, we think, could have been devised for India, on its first introduction by Lord Dalhousie.

CHOLERA IN THE NORTH-WEST OF INDIA.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

DEAR SIR,—You may have seen accounts of the ravages caused in the sub-Himalayan districts by cholera, and that this dire disease had extended from the right bank of the Ravee to the left bank of the Jhelum, throughout what we know more especially as the Jummoo territory. The disease was clearly brought by pilgrims returning from the great fair at Hurdwar, and spread rapidly along the valleys in this part of the Himalayan outposts, which may, literally, be termed the "hot beds" of cholera, when once planted there, and has subsequently extended, notwithstanding the precautions taken to prevent its spread in the Punjab, as far south as Lahore, and other places, without, however, doing much damage. The past season has been distinguished by an unusual influx of European visitors to Kashmere, and the Maharaja, while himself nobly expressing his determination to remain at Jummoo, amongst his own suffering people, although he had previously signified his intention of passing the summer in Kashmere, at once issued a notice recommending his many visitors to adopt the far Western Hazara and Mozufferabad route, instead of the more common and shorter ones of Poonah or Peer Punjab, so as to avoid all danger from possible contagion.

I venture to beg your particular attention to the action of his Highness in this matter, especially his remaining at Jummoo during such a crisis, with reference to the assertion unblushingly put forward by a missionary gentleman (who, not long since, published fifty-two "reasons" why the Maharaja of Kashmere should be deprived of his possessions), that his "indifference," "cruelty," and "inhuman behaviour," were the causes of the loss of hundreds of lives, "while cholera was raging in Sreenuggur!" Kindly allow me to place this reverend gentleman's charitable "assertions" in juxtaposition with my simple facts. You may easily imagine how logically accurate were his fifty-one other accusations.—Yours faithfully,

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—Can any of your readers inform me where I can procure a copy of a little book called "Sir Francis Ford's Letters from the Nilgherries?" It was published in Bombay about the year 1852. Any information on the subject will greatly oblige

AN OLD INDIAN.

RETIREMENT OF INDIAN OFFICERS.

The Times of India points out that any measure which would afford reasonable ground for assuring even a moderate success would be a measure of contraction and not of expansion. We have before expressed an opinion, and in no measured terms, of the "happy despatch" order. While by no means maintaining that the Indian Government—we may say any Government—is bound to maintain on full pay, for an indefinite period, much less to find employment for officers, who in its judgment are not competent or qualified to be entrusted with the duties of responsible offices, the number of officers whose services an honourable Government would be justified in dispensing with in this summary manner cannot be very large. Admitting, however, that there are some, perhaps half a score officers in all India, whose case could be so dealt with, it cannot be denied that the very essence of the contract between the officers of the old East India Company and the Crown was that each officer should not only rise by seniority to the highest rank, but that, in the absence of any disqualification, he should obtain all the privileges appertaining to the rank so obtained. Of these privileges military command is of course the most coveted and the highest. When, therefore, a Lieutenant-Colonel who possibly may have served with distinction in the field, whose breast may be covered with medals, or who may have served with equal distinction in the bureau, and whose intellect may have been used by the Government to great advantage of the State, finds that while his juniors who are in no wise his betters are commanding Regiments and holding Commissionerships and Deputy Commissionerships, whilst he is, to use an expressive phrase, left out in the cold, it is not in human nature to suppose that he will not be discontented. Of course he will be; and we question whether to scatter two or three hundred such field officers, broadcast, throughout the various military cantonments of India doing "general duty"—which means, visiting guard rooms once a week, attending court-martial now and then, and sitting on Commissariat Committees, &c.—is the very wisest and best way to improve the morale of the officers of the Indian Army generally, or that of the junior members of it in particular. The mischief done by maintaining the existing state of things we believe to be far more serious than is apparent on the surface; and when all its disadvantages are taken into consideration, together with the indisputable fact that these two or three hundred field officers while in India must be paid from £1,000 to £1,200 a year, and must, if they live, eventually become entitled to pensions on the home establishment of £1,125 a year, whereas the great majority of them would in all probability gladly compound for a present annuity of £600, or about one-half the smaller sum, we confess we are at a loss to understand why the Secretary of State hesitates to relieve the Government of India of this pressing financial embarrassment. We attach no importance at all to another alleged excuse, namely, that the Secretary of State would stultify the Government by offering terms after he stated, as in 1862, that he would not do so again. When the orders of 1862 were issued, they were no doubt issued in good faith, and the statement was made with a view to render the measure then brought forward as effective as possible; but they proved abortive. Many of those officers who ought to have gone did not go, and some of those who ought not to have gone did go; so that if the Government gained something, they also lost something. Means could scarcely be adopted which would prevent any new orders failing from the same causes which rendered the previous one unsuccessful, and the sooner they are issued, the lesser will be the evil of which we now complain. But paramount to all considerations in the mind of the Secretary of State should be his duty. It is incumbent upon him to make the best arrangements he can for the protection of the permanent financial interests of the country. This is his first duty; and while maintaining the honour and good faith of the Government, he should not be deterred from discharging it, because it may be said that one of his predecessors had ten years ago announced his intention of not propounding another retirement scheme at any future date. The whole question, as we have said, is one for the consideration and report of a committee guided by actuaries—viz., what is the deferred annuity of each field officer, who is well qualified and has a claim for employment on the Indian Government, but for whom the Government cannot find it, worth on the 31st December, and what will he take for it? We believe if the question was decided on this principle, the officers of the army would be satisfied, and the Duke of Argyll would make a good bargain for the State.

NATIVE LOYALTY.

The Shome Prokash in defence of the Vernacular Press observes that no one has ever heard the Vernacular papers say that the Government of India ought to be degraded, disgraced, and rooted out. All they do is only in the way of protesting against the acts of particular individuals or classes of men. It was from the time when, owing to the misfortune of India, Lord Lawrence became Governor-General and Punjabee officers his sole councillors, that all classes of people in Bengal became discontented. Actual oppression was practised in Lord Mayo's time. Are not the Europeans, too, dissatisfied with the financial policy of the Government? They are dissatisfied because their pockets are touched on account of the Income-tax only, but unfortunate natives have now to pay the Road Cess also. With the former such dissatisfaction is reasonable; in reference to the latter it is the outcome of disloyalty! Our conviction is that the conquering sovereign obtains the same rights as the conquered king possessed in the country conquered. The Hindoo kings gave Bruhmutter lands to the Brahmins, the Mussulman sovereigns never interfered with them, but at present English rulers are doing it by the passing of the Road Cess. We look upon this as a sinful act, and therefore speak aloud. Our education has been made headless, and therefore are we grieved. These are the causes of our discontent. We are helpless, if the expression of this discontent is put down as disloyalty. We repeat that just as it is the duty of the subject to show loyalty to the sovereign, so is it the latter's duty to act in such a manner that his subjects may not suffer in any way.

SIMLA VERSUS CALCUTTA.

The Bombay Gazette observes that half a loaf is well known to be better than no bread, and we are not sure that the good people of Calcutta are at all wise in quarrelling with the arrangement which assigns the Government of India to Simla for one-half of the year and to Calcutta for the other half, or at least for the greater part of the other half of the year. It may be remembered that when this subject was referred to in Parliament a year or two ago, Mr. Grant Duff stated very emphatically that if the Supreme Government were not allowed to reside at Simla for one half of the year it would certainly not be condemned to reside at Calcutta at all. But if Simla does occasional good service in pointing out the absurdity of locating the Government of India in such an out-of-the-way, pestilential, and climatically depressing place as Calcutta, so Calcutta does equally good service by exposing the absurdity of locating the Government for so many months every year at Simla. Arcades ambo or blackguards both are they as regards the subject in hand, for they are intent only upon their own aggrandise and on blackening each other's faces. We remember a gentleman who has been foremost in finding fault with the residence at Simla mentioning to us that he never himself enjoyed good health while he lived in that city of palaces, to which he would condemn the Government without remorse; and though the Ditchers, when they are away from their beloved capital, are not in the habit of speaking of it in the highest terms, they are always ready to do so whenever the question is broached as to where the Supreme Government ought to be located. The principle may be that Calcutta is quite good enough for them, that is to say, for Secretaries to Government in the Foreign Department—good boys who write for Mountain Echoes, Finance Ministers who care not how justly they are abused, et hoc genus omne. But while we cannot altogether accept the hollow eulogiums which are periodically pronounced upon the city of palaces, we can and do welcome, as real gospel truth, the withering descriptions of Simla which are furnished by Calcutta when the charms of her rival have withdrawn the Emperor from her side. It is said when Mademoiselle Bellanger and a certain Countess W. were competing for influence over the latest grand monarque, that he who wanted to hear truth, pointedly stated, in regard to each of these illustrious ladies, had only to frequent the salon of her rival. So, in like manner, if we want to hear the truth about Calcutta, we have only to go to Simla; and, to know about Simla, we have only to listen to the voice of Calcutta. But it must be admitted that it is much easier to find fault with the scrubby Highland shooting lodge than with the social old City of Palaces. Of all the absurdities into which the Anglo-India of late years has fallen, there is no one so purely absurd as the notion which Simla involves. That the entire Supreme Government of one of the greatest countries of the world should, with almost all its departments, be removed hundreds of miles, a long way beyond any point which can be reached by rail or to which even the roads can be calculated on as always secure; that it should there be accommodated in a number of wigwags scattered inconveniently on the tops of cliffs and on a crumbling hill-side; that it should thus be placed far beyond the reach and the influence of any society, whether European or native, and that this should be done in a country like India, where the people literally hunger after something imposing in the appearance of their Government—all this is in the most curious defiance of the requirements of the case. During great part of the summer Simla is not even the pleasant place to live in which it has been supposed; and from all accounts, as regards climate, whatever it may be as regards society, a residence from June to October would be much preferable in the little inn on the top of Snowdon, or in the high hotels of the Eggischhorn and the Gorner Grat. The one only advantage which has ever been claimed for Simla is its alleged healthiness. It is very much out of the way; it is in no direct contact with any part of our Indian Empire; it is not easily reached; it is not a place convenient to live in, and it has hardly proper accommodation for civilised human beings; but then it was held to be healthy, and that single recommendation, which it shared with many other places, more conveniently situated, was held to counterbalance all its disadvantages.

NUMISMATOLOGY.—We noticed in our paper of the 1st June, at some length, the archaeological discoveries of Mr. Broadley, C.S., in Behar. Amongst other things, he obtained a unique series of 37 silver coins (about half the weight of the rupee of our own times) belonging to the earliest kings of Bengal. We hear that Colonel Guthrie, the famous coin-collector, has offered Rs 1,200 for the set. We wonder when private individuals are ready and anxious to pay such large sum for treasures of this kind the Government of India has not come forward and purchased the unrivalled collection of Buddhist sculpture which has cost Mr. Broadley so much money and labour.—Bengal Times.

SIR SALAR JUNG.—It is rumoured that Sir Salar Jung contemplates establishing a fund for the support of the widows and orphans of the employes who died in the service of the Nizam's Government.

DURBAR AT MANIPORE.—On the arrival of Colonel Mowbray Thompson to relieve Major-General Nuthall as Political Agent at Manipore, the Maharajah held a grand open Durbar; he and his Ministers attending in their State dresses, and the two Political Officers in uniform.

THE VICEROY AT CHEENEE.—A contemporary points out that the Viceroy's trip to Cheenée, while affording a pleasant relief from the gay life in Simla, will also tend to relieve his Lordship of much of the disagreements of the rains, which in Cheenée are very mild, if even worthy of the name.

THE PATIALA RAJAH. The Maharaja of Patiala arrived at Simla on the afternoon of the 23rd July. His Highness was attended by a numerous retinue clad in all the colours of the rainbow, mounted on steeds of rare mettle, with gorgeous trappings of crimson, silver and gilt.

LOCUSTS.—We learn from the Muttra district that about ten days ago locusts in innumerable numbers visited that locality; they were so thick in fact as to cover the fields of indigo on which they alighted and entirely destroyed the young crop. Such a flight, it is stated, has not appeared for some time past in the N. W. P.—Delhi Gazette.

GREAT RISE OF THE GANGES.—Rain at last. On Friday, and again on Saturday night, Allahabad enjoyed (?) heavy rain. On Friday and Friday night the rain gauge registered five inches, and the fall on Saturday night must have been quite as heavy. The Ganges has risen fully twenty feet within the last four days.—Pioneer, July 30.

THE MAYO INSTITUTE AND HIMALAYAN ORPHANAGE.—We understand that satisfactory arrangements are now in train for placing that useful institution known as the Mayo Institute and Himalayan Orphanage on a proper footing under a committee of management. We hope to have the pleasure of publishing a prospectus in our next issue.—Civil and Military Gazette.

LICENCE-TAX IN LAHORE.—His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor has sanctioned the imposition of a licence-tax of Rs. 6 per head per annum on the following workers in leather within the municipal limits of Kasur, in the Lahore District who are not assessed to Income tax, from the beginning of the current official year, viz:—1. Tanners (Chamrang). 2. Curriers and Skimmers (Khatik). 3. Manufacturers of Skin Bottles (Dabgars).—Indian Public Opinion, July 26.

TEA IN BOKHARA.—The following letter from Bokhara has been received by a Cabul merchant:—"Levying duty on tea grown in Hindoostan has been relinquished by the Bokhara Government. The Hindoostan hill tea which was sold in March last at forty-five tillas a shaira is now sold at eighty, and the merchants are allowed to sell their tea throughout Turkistan without being charged duty. Materials for clothing, such as muslin, long cloth, &c., are forbidden to be sold in the cantonments in Turkistan."

THE ROAD TO YARKAND.—Bad weather and heavy falls of snow in the interior have prevented the opening roads this year from Kulu to Yarkand. Several Kulu men have made their way over from Ladakh on foot, but for horses and general traffic the road is quite impassable. From Kulu, however, no merchants have this year been able to reach Ladakh, and with Yarkand there has been as yet no communication whatever. On the 13th June, by the latest despatches from Ladakh, heavy rain fell, and the hills were again covered with snow.

HEAVY FLOODS ON THE INDUS.—Very heavy and serious floods have occurred on the Indus, and the country in the Muzaffergurh district is in many places extensively inundated. Muzaffergurh lies in the triangle between the Indus and Chenab, west of Mooltan. The north-western corner of this triangle is most seriously flooded, and all the available officials are on the spot collecting labour and trying in every way to stop the progress of the inundation. From Daira Deen Paish to Kot Adoo the country is almost under water. We may add that such floods as these have not occurred on the Indus for a great number of years.—Indian Public Opinion, July 23.

FLOODS IN ORISSA.—The following is an extract from a private letter from Cuttack, dated July 7:—"The whole population of Orissa passed the last fortnight in much anxiety and distress. Last week the Mahanuddy and Katjoree overflowed, and caused no end of damage. This flood was preceded by incessant rains during the last fortnight; there is not a plant in the land in the lower basin of the rivers which has not been laid low; and not only were the crops and villages devastated, but men, women, and children were found dead on the borders of the creeks and embankments, and innumerable carcasses of animals, both domestic and wild, cows, elephants, horses with saddle, wild boars; and inanimate objects, such as bedsteads, tables, and other furniture, thatches, posts, large trees of sal and teak, ploughs, were seen passing like arrows in the rapid current. Many thousands of cattle are lost, and there is not a vestige of crops."

THE LOSHAI EXPEDITION.—We (Englishman) hear that Captain G. F. Blackwood, R.A., who accompanied the Peshawur Mountain Battery in the Loshai Expedition, has written a very interesting report upon the operations of the half-battery which accompanied the Cachar column.

MILITARY ACCOUNTS.—We (Indian Daily News) hear that, on the recommendation of the Controller of Military Accounts, Captain Herbert Cowper will be confirmed in his present officiating appointment of Ordnance Examiner. Captain Cowper's intelligence is unquestionable, and his claims to the appointment not less so.

ANGLO ORIENTAL COLLEGE.—It appears from the copy of a letter from the Viceroy's Private Secretary to Syud Ahmad Khan Bahadur that, subject to certain conditions, Lord Northbrook has made the splendid donation of a thousand pounds to the Mahomedan Anglo Oriental College. The promised contributions to the College fund now amount to Rs. 30,135-7.

THE RECENT RIOTS IN BENGAL.—All the prisoners charged with committing a riot on one of Mr. Wise's estates, which resulted in the murder of one of his servants, have been acquitted by the jury, on which the Bengal Times remarks that the jury "have simply proved themselves by their gross stupidity to be most unfit for their office."

POLICE.—It is said to be in contemplation of the Government of Bengal to change the designation of first grade inspector attached to the Bengal constabulary police force now in the service to that of assistant superintendent. The pay and allowances at present received will not be interfered with. It is also intended to make the second grade officers first grade inspectors.

A PRETTY QUARREL.—A pretty quarrel is reported from Gya. A sheristadar wrote to the deputy magistrate saying he could no longer serve under him, and bringing forward certain allegations against his character. The deputy at once tried him for contempt and sentenced him to some days' imprisonment. The prisoner appealed, and the judge reversed the deputy magistrate's sentence, the sheristadar being meanwhile ordered to prove the allegations or to stand his trial for libel. An inquiry is now in progress.

CIVIL.—Subject to the approval of the Secretary of State, the salary of the Judgeship of Beerbhoom is to be reduced to that of a first-grade magistrate and collector, and the saving, Rs. 7,000, is to be divided between the magistrates of the chief districts in Bengal. Messrs. W. LeF. Robinson, magistrate of Dinapore, and A. V. Palmer, magistrate of Gya, are the fortunate recipients of the increased allowances. Mr. E. C. Craster, now officiating judge of Beerbhoom, reverts to his substantive appointment as Judge of Gya. Mr. S. H. C. Tayler is appointed Judge of Beerbhoom and Additional Judge of Burdwan on the reduced salary, and Mr. E. E. Lewis is promoted to the first grade of magistrates.

THE CAPITAL OF THE PUNJAB.—A shave of the Pioneer's Lahore Correspondent to the effect that there was a possibility of the local Government making Rawalpindie the capital instead of Lahore seems to have attracted more notice than the probability of the story warranted. To comfort the minds of house proprietors in Lahore and prevent undue speculation in Rawalpindie we can assure our readers that the Government have no such intentions, and that, indeed, the first notice the Government had of the alleged scheme was in the letter to which we refer. Rawalpindie however will incidentally be favoured with a visit from his Honour's camp in December when he goes to the Camp of Exercise.—Indian Public Opinion, July 23.

EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.—The committee appointed to investigate the affairs of the East Indian Railway say in one part of their report:—"In spite of all the stated objections, every merchant we spoke to admitted a decided preference for the railway, and some went so far as to say that, if the rates per maund from Patna to Calcutta were only one or one and a-half annas above the boat rates, they would even now employ the rail. In proof of this we may mention that on the 19th inst. Messrs. Kelly and Co. offered to send 30,000 maunds of seed at once, and two special trains per week to Calcutta, if the Railway Company carry it for seven annas per maund (net weight); and at that very time there was a steamer lying at the ghat by which 15,000 maunds of the seed are now being sent at the rate of five and a-half annas per maund."

CHOLERA IN LAHORE.—We regret to learn that cholera is not diminishing in the city, and that it has even attacked the Anarkullie bazaar. Yesterday four sudden and fatal cases occurred in the sweepers' settlement at the end of Anarkullie bazaar. The place was the same evening cleared of its residents, most of them being provided with carriage and sent off to Shah Bilawal, north-east of Lahore, near the old nullah. Only the public sweepers are allowed to stay in the city. The place attacked has been put under a quarantine cordon till thoroughly disinfected. From Nowlucce another case, Mrs. Jenkins, has been reported this morning. The daily city return has increased considerably above last week's return, though not at all to an alarming extent. The disease appears of a comparatively mild type, and succumbs to simple remedies when soon enough administered. A case is reported from Rawalpindie, where a soldier from the 37th, who had been employed under Lieutenant Crompton on the traction engines, died after a short illness.—Indian Public Opinion, July 26.

COOLY CORPS ACCOUNTS.—Baboo Romesh Chunder Dutta, of the Bengal Civil Service assistant magistrate of the 24-Pergunnahs, has been temporarily employed on deputation at the Bengal Office, to adjust the accounts of the Cooly Corps attached to the Loshai Expeditionary Force, in the place of Mr. Harrison, who has proceeded to Midnapore to join his appointment as magistrate of that place.

A LOAFING DODGE.—Two loafers, one an Eurasian, the other a Burmese, have been personating Mr. Talboys Wheeler and "a friend" in the Amherst district. To do this it was, we believe, considered necessary for the first man to put on an amazing white hat—at any rate, the deception was successful, and the two rascals collected as "taxes" some fifty rupees from the villagers before the police pounced upon them.

A DESERVING CASE.—A memorial is, we understand, about to be forwarded to Government on behalf of the widow of John Harris Elson, the licensed pilot who was lately drowned in the discharge of his duty near the Sandheads. It is needless for us to dilate upon the narrative of the memorial; only we would say this—that the widow of a man who appears to have behaved so bravely and unselfishly during the terrible and protracted tragedy which preceded his death, deserves, in our opinion, a provision at the hands of Government, which we are sure the most rabid and anti-taxpayers among us, whether European or native, would not for a moment grudge. There is one portion of Mrs. Elson's memorial that strikes us with a strange surprise. It is a statement that her late husband, being only a licensed pilot, was not permitted to subscribe to the Unconvenanted Service Pension Fund.—Englishman.

A CRUEL WIFE.—The other evening, on the arrival of the loop-line passenger train at Howrah, an old man of the Southgope caste was brought out of a third-class carriage in a dying and emaciated condition, apparently suffering from some chronic disease. The Government Railway Police discovering that he was accompanied by a woman who was also in the same train, told her to convey him to the hospital. The woman succeeded in bringing him out as far as the gate of the station, and leaving him there, she was making her way towards the ghat, alleging that as he would not survive there was no necessity for her to remain with him any longer. The unfortunate man then informed the police that the woman was his lawful wife. This she denied, but subsequently admitted, saying that as he would in a very few hours die, which would compel her to spend money on his funeral pile, she went away, leaving him lying in the street. The police then had the man conveyed in a palkee to the Howrah hospital.

MOULVI LIAKUT ALI DEPORTED.—On last Friday night Moulvi Liakut Ali was brought down to Howrah in heavy iron fetters by the half past nine o'clock express train, in charge of a European inspector and four native constables of the Allahabad Police. He was, on arrival, escorted also by both the Government Railway Police and the Twenty-four Parganas Police to the Railway steam-ferry. Some of the employees of the railway held a conversation with him. He said that he had left property at Allahabad to the amount of three and a half lakhs of rupees, which had been confiscated by the Crown, and that he had saved the lives of European men, women, and children during the mutinies of 1857-58. He had a lota and piece of wood to clean his teeth, which, he said, he had brought with him from Mecca. He is a well built and powerful man, about six feet high, with a very long grey beard, apparently about sixty years of age. He was immediately marched off to the Alipore Jail, where he will be safely lodged until his transfer to Port Blair.—Englishman, July 30.

PROPOSED ACADEMY OF LITERATURE FOR BENGAL.—Mr. J. Beames, C.S., Balasore, who is so well known for his researches in the vernacular languages of India, has written an interesting pamphlet, entitled "Suggestions for the formation of an Academy of Literature for Bengal," in which he urges on the Bengalis the foundation of an Academy which should undertake the task of consolidating the national speech. After describing the gradual development of the modern languages of Europe, he says: "That the language of Bengal requires consolidating and defining, will not be questioned. On the one hand limits must be set to the practice of introducing Sanskrit words wholesale, and on the other it is necessary to restrict the use of local, vulgar, and provincial terms. The academies of Europe have generally consisted of about forty members; but having regard to the larger area and greater number of dialects which the Bengal Academy will have to deal with, it would be advisable that it should consist of not less than a hundred members. The chief seat of the Academy would necessarily be the capital of the province, and at least forty of the academicians should be residents thereof, the remaining sixty being chosen from men of learning of all parts of Bengal. The resident members are advised to adopt the practice of the old Florentines, who used to meet in the gardens of some suburban villa. At such meetings the preparation of a dictionary would be the chief business, and the Academy must decide how the compilation is to be carried out. Gentlemen willing to aid in the formation of the Academy are requested to address themselves to Mr. Beames, or to Babu Jagadishnath Raj, Balasore.—Englishman.

DROWNING OF LIEUT. PRIDDEN, R.E.—Lieut. C. E. Pridden, R.E., Executive Engineer, Ghatki Division, I.V.S. Railway, was drowned near Sukker on the Indus on the evening of July 10. Mr. E. G.

Medley, who was in the boat at the time of the accident, gives the following account of it. Lieut. Pridden and himself, with three boatmen and two Panthans, left Sangee, about thirteen miles from Sukker, at sunset, hoping to reach Sukker before the moon set. On approaching Sukker, the strong current carried the boat past the mouth of the small pass. The boatmen, fearing they would be dashed against Bukker Island, set the sail, there being a light wind at the time blowing up the river, to keep her clear of that danger. Meanwhile the terrific force of the current—eight miles an hour—carried the boat to the Rorce side, to a place where the whole current of the Indus strikes with full strength against the walls of Rorce town, and where the water swirls into strong eddies and whirlpools; the boat became unmanageable, the sail caught the branch of an overhanging tree, where the remains of it still are, and the current rolled the boat over. Mr. Medley had just time to divest himself of some of his clothes, and as the boat rolled over struck out for the shore, about five yards distant, and although he is a powerful swimmer he barely managed to reach the land. Lieut. Pridden, who was sitting by him in the boat when she went over, either jumped into the river or was thrown out by the force of the collision, it is feared against the rocks, and was last seen striking out, as also were two boatmen. On Mr. Medley getting ashore he saw some fishermen, whom he induced to go off on the gurras they float on to save Lieut. Pridden and the others. The two boatmen were thus saved. In the meantime the others who were supposed to be on the bottom of the boat were heard shouting as they drifted down the river, cap-sized and tied to a tree. The body of Lieut. Pridden has not been recovered. He leaves a widow and three children.

Coraha: No business reported.

Madras.

DENGUE IN MANDALAY.—The Burmese capital has had its full share of dengue visitation. Several of the Queens and Princes have suffered from it, and it has attacked nearly all the Europeans. The S.P.G. Mission, with its large boarding school, has suffered very slightly indeed. Dengue has now left the city.

CURE FOR THE DENGUE.—Another cure for the dengue! There may yet be balm in Gilead for racking bodies; "Old Soldier"—we hope this is the truest shot ever he fired—writes to a Madras contemporary:—"Having seen a para. in your paper a few days ago relative to the benefit derived from drinking hot tea during an attack of dengue fever, I beg to recommend tea made of lemon grass. I have seen it used to a great extent in the West Indies with great success."

IRRIGATION IN THE MADRAS PRESIDENCY.—We are happy to hear that the first link of the Perryaur project is about to be forged by the opening out of the Ghaut leading from the Periaculum Valley to the Travancore Hills, through which that river flows. It has been calculated that every year that this project is delayed involves a direct loss to Government of five lakhs of rupees; while the benefit to the country effected by the irrigation is simply incalculable. We are glad, therefore, to learn that it has been resolved to submit the whole question to the Government of India during the current official year.

THE BANGALORE CAMP OF EXERCISE.—We believe it is quite uncertain as yet whether the Camp of Exercise will be held here or not at the end of the year, and military men are almost in despair about it. The natives have an absurd idea that some 70,000 men are expected to take part in it, whose after duty it will be "to carry on war with the great sirdars of Hyderabad and annex that country." As long as Sir Salar Jung lives, there is not much chance of an outbreak, though perhaps Colonel Lumsden's appointment to temporarily succeed Mr. Saunders as Resident may be intended as a hint to those troublesome feudatories to keep quiet.—Bangalore Herald.

THE WYNAAD COFFEE CROP.—A Wynaad correspondent writes to the South of India Observer:—"Taken as a whole, we fear the coming coffee crops will scarcely realise the bumper over expected. A few estates in Wynaad, which were fortunate to get the early shower to bring forward a large April blossom, appear to be the exception to the general rule. During the early part of last year, and especially during the months of June and July, the rainfall was excessive, but this year the early showers throughout Wynaad and Coorg appear to have been unusually deficient. This, however, it appears has not affected the highly cultivated estates so much as the ones lacking this advantage."

A YOUNG LADY DROWNED AT CANNANORE.—A most lamentable case of drowning occurred on the evening of July 14. The victim was the daughter of Mr. Sausman, apothecary in charge of the hospital of the 89th P.V. Regiment. Miss Sausman had called on a Mrs. Godfrey, a schoolmistress at Cannanore. The visit lasted till it grew dark. When the young lady took leave to go home, Mrs. Godfrey directed a servant to accompany her; but instead of going home Miss Sausman took an opposite direction, and went towards the beach adjoining the barracks of the 89th Regiment. This was to take a walk, as she said. On reaching the beach she quietly divested herself of her upper dress; and on being questioned by Mrs. Godfrey's servant as to the cause of such a strange proceeding, she said she wanted to have a little play in the water. She got into the water, and instantly a heavy wave washed her off. The body had not been, up to the latest information, recovered.

COCK FIGHTING IN SOUTHERN INDIA.—The cruel sport of cock-fighting, it seems, is carried on to a great extent in Southern India, and most of the zemindars are passionately fond of it. We learn from the Madras Mail that from Cape Comorin northwards to Salem and Coimbatore there have been from time immemorial organised circles of villages for the furtherance of this great object; and nowhere can the "sport" be better witnessed than in the seats of the chief Poligars. Each circle has its rendezvous, which is generally a grove of banyans or tamarinds, to which all patrons of the sport repair once or twice a week. In no case are the inhabitants of a village found arrayed against one another, the rule being that the ancient division of the circle into two hostile camps should no wise be infringed. There are a dozen places of note in Tinnevely, six in Madura, eight in Trichinopoly, two in Coimbatore, and one in Salem, where this sport is carried on with more than ordinary zest and animation, and where a hundred or more cocks, arrayed in battle order, are frequently to be seen.

OFFICIAL PAPERS AND THE PRESS.—In its issue of Saturday, June 29, the Madras Athenæum published certain proceedings of the local Government censuring the Acting Inspector-General of Police for the tone of his correspondence with the Gaol Department, the said document not having at the time been placed at the disposal of the Press. The Madras Government has therefore published the following:—"The Government have had repeated occasion to notice the publication by the Madras Athenæum of Government papers which had not been officially communicated, and this in breach of the understanding on which the editors are furnished with copies of correspondence, the publication of which the Government deem unobjectionable or desirable. They resolve, therefore, in the present instance, to give effect to the G.O. of November 30, 1865, on the subject, and direct the removal of the Madras Athenæum and Daily News from the list of newspapers to which papers placed at the disposal of the Press are supplied."

NEW CONSTITUTION FOR FRENCH INDIA.—The new "Constitution" for French India, lately enacted at Paris, has been received at Pondicherry, and was promulgated in the Moniteur Officiel on Friday. The novel ordinance, which is to bouleverser the existing order of things, was first received at Pondicherry by M. Emile Hecquet Fils, a gentleman who, last year, performed prodigies of persuasion amongst the untutored Indians in order to secure the election of M. Desbassyns de Richemont as Member for French India, and who was, therefore, rewarded, by the grateful deputy, with the first possession of this important State secret. Time will not permit us now to enter into details of the novel method which the French have invented for the better government of their Indian subjects. Suffice it to say that it aims at infusing into them the same principles of self-government through elected representatives which Mr. Campbell has lately declared himself so "very anxious" to introduce amongst Bengalee Baboos, and promises to afford the most delightful distraction to the inhabitants of Pondicherry and Karikal. Such an institution, as Mr. Campbell observed in his circular last month, "may of course be introduced into towns where the people have a real interest in the taxation imposed on them, the expenditure of the funds and the general management of their affairs." It cannot, however, be said, by even the most partial observer, that the inhabitants of either Pondicherry or Karikal—the two principal towns of French India—have yet attained to this advanced degree of intelligence; nor is it very likely that they would be permitted to use it if they had. Mais enfin, nous verrons!—Madras Times.

THE "INDIAN ANTIQUARY."—We refer to the papers by Mr. C. E. Gover and Mr. R. C. Caldwell—papers we would recommend those to peruse who, living in this Presidency, desire to be familiar with South Indian topics. Mr. Caldwell's two papers are on "Tamil Popular Poetry," containing translations of at least a dozen Tamil writers, ancient and modern. The following extracts struck us as containing evidences that Tamil poetry of this class does contain the beautiful thoughts and expressions which Mr. Caldwell contends it does. One poet is represented as awaiting the time when he will his

"tired being steep
In that existence which is sleepless sleep."
And when he will

"With eye-lids dropt, to heaven ascend,
And with God's being his own being blend."

Another author seems to revel in similes such as the following:—

"Gold vessels, broken, still as gold we prize,
And wise men in adversity are wise:
But worthless men, when ruined, what are they?
Vessels of clay, when broken, are but clay!"

"When the tank's water to the rice-field flows,
It feeds the grass which by its channel grows:
Thus for the sake of one good man, on all
In this old world, the gracious rain-drops fall.

"The bad are bad, though cherish'd. Yet when boil'd,
Sweet milk still sweet remains, and is not spoil'd.
And fire but whitens white shells. Thus we see Good men remain good in adversity.

"The cobra, conscious of its poison, hides;
Abroad the water-snake unfearing glides,
Thus they whose hearts hide guile exposure fear,
But secrecy befits not the sincere."

Another poet seems to delight in sarcasm and invective on idol-worship, which is strange as coming from a Hindu poet. This writer calls the deity by the fine epithet "Shepherd of the Worlds." Mr. Gover's paper is one which is written in his usual picturesque and graceful style, and is an admirable description of a scene in Madras during the recent Mahometan festival of the Mohurram. But we have said enough for the present. We therefore close by strongly recommending our readers to patronise the Indian Antiquary, which is a magazine in every way creditable to Indian journalism.

MR. STANLEY AND DR. LIVINGSTONE.

The Zanzibar correspondent of the Times of India writes as follows on May 28:—

When Mr. Stanley arrived first at Zanzibar, nothing was known concerning the nature of his mission.—At his arrangements for starting towards the interior from the coast were accomplished in three weeks, and no one could have known that he was going on more than a sporting expedition.

Through the difficulty of obtaining porters on the coast he was detained for a month longer, but this was no fault of his.

After this was overcome he pushed on towards the interior, and his march to Ujiji is quite a new feature of African travel.

Mr. Stanley is not only an energetic traveller, but a shrewd observer, and his notes of travel, adventure, and explorations will, when published, form an entirely new chapter in such enterprises.

The quiet and energetic manner in which the New York Herald's correspondent fitted out, and carried through successfully, his expedition, was a striking contrast to that of the Lieutenants sent out in charge of the "Livingstone Search and Relief Expedition."

Lieutenants Dawson and Henn were shamefully used by some parties, whoever they were. They evidently started from England on their expedition under the impression that on their arrival in Zanzibar everything would be ready for their immediate departure for the interior. Probably these gentlemen thought that there would be no trouble in this respect on their arrival, and that although the preparations were not forward enough, it was merely a matter of a few days.

Nothing, however, had been done or ordered to be done, and Lieutenants Dawson and Henn were cast on their own resources. It was painful to see and realise fully the sad position of these gentlemen.

Mr. Dawson, in an evil hour, had abandoned his position, as one of the most distinguished surveyors in connection with the English Navy, to find out Livingstone and relieve him merely for the glory of doing so, and to secure his own promotion.

Mr. Henn, a young man of twenty-five or so, who, it is stated, was so much interested in the suppression of the slave trade that he actually went in for learning Kisuheli, in order that he might check the interpretations of interpreters, never professed to have any more interest in regard to the expedition than to have some good shooting; while Mr. Livingstone was represented by both as being merely a decoy duck used at home to raise funds.

We have two expeditions; one fitted out by the proprietors of the New York Herald, and another by the people of Great Britain.

The one is a model of success; and the other, the latter, an example of utter failure on the part of all concerned.

The details regarding the "Livingstone Search and Relief Expedition" may never come before the public, nor before the subscribers to the fund, but if they did so, the effect would be most damaging.

The President of the Royal Geographical Society ordered that a quantity of cowries should be in readiness for the expedition to take into the interior as means of exchange. If Sir H. Rawlinson could display such utter ignorance of what he was talking about, and not only recommending but ordering such things, nothing whatever could be expected from Messrs. Dawson, Henn, and Livingstone.

Sir H. Rawlinson might as well have ordered a supply of brick-bats or paving stones for the expedition. No newspaper correspondent could have been guilty of such folly. An expedition from Africa to England plentifully supplied with cocks' feathers to defray the expenses, would be equally sensible as that ordered by the President of the Royal Geographical Society.

The position is humiliating, but only to those actually engaged; the Carpet Geographers, loud in word, but impotent in deed.

STATION TALK.

MHOW, July 16.—To-day an important meeting is to take place at Indore on railway matters, General Daly, C.B., of course representing the British Government; Mr. Oag, the contractors, Messrs. Hood and Co.; and Ramjee, vakeel, H.H. the Holkar. It is hoped the vexed question of "Royalties" or "No Royalties" will now be decided definitely. Among the politicians at Indore much interest is excited by the proceedings of Major Evans Bell, who is fighting in England the battle of H.H. the Holkar. It is indeed a great pity that the energies of so able an officer should be misdirected to the defence of the new Revenue Settlement by which the unfortunate subjects of the Holkar are greatly oppressed. He seems to argue that General Daly has no power, or ought to have no power, to interfere in such matters—totally forgetting the most important fact that experience, whatever may be said in theory, has proved that, if we err in anything, we err in the too great an exercise of the policy of non-interference. The gallant Major knows as well as any body can tell him that in our relations with native princes we have two duties clearly to fulfil—one is to give them all legitimate support, and the other to see that they do not oppress their own subjects. Now the Holkar and his advocate, by insisting on the observance of the policy of non-interference, simply mean this, that the Holkar's subjects may be robbed by their sovereign to the fullest extent of his Highness' cupidity: that while this virtual spoliation goes on we are not only to remain quiet, but, if called upon, are to side with him, and, if necessary, lend him the aid of our troops to enable him to do what he likes. We all know that most of the native States, and especially that of the Holkar, could not be held together for a day, but that they have the benefit of our assistance and countenance. Were the British not in this part of the country the Holkar's subjects would have revolted immediately the new agricultural assessments were made; indeed, but for the presence of the British, he would never have dared to raise the rents. I give the Holkar all the credit Major Bell claims for him in not allowing a lot of his officers to continue to rob him; but because they did so is no valid excuse for enhancing the burdens of the poor ryot. Instead, therefore, of Major Bell finding fault with General Daly in the way he does, any disinterested party will see that this officer deserves the thanks and gratitude of the friendless in preventing the Holkar taking advantage of our presence in these parts—for it is clear that, were we not here, and he to attempt what he has done, would have simply cost him his giddy. No, Sir, it is bad enough that we ourselves should be enhancing the burdens of our own subjects, without countenancing the native States to follow our example. Captain D. W. R. Barr has been appointed to act for Colonel Gordon, Deputy Bheel Agent at Maunpore.—Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

GUZERAT, July 29.—You will be sorry to hear that cholera has reached Surat, and that Captain G. F. Birdwood, our Superintendent of Police, was carried off by it yesterday (Sunday) afternoon. He was an excellent police officer, an intrepid shikaree, and a man beloved by all (natives as well as Europeans) with whom he came in contact. He leaves a young widow and a son two years old to lament his premature departure, and all who knew him are to day sad at heart. Capt. Birdwood was popular because he was a man of kindly heart and large views, although belonging to "the services," he looked through—not a microscope but a telescope, and his defective eyes spotted out a gentleman whether inside or out of the magic pale of the "heaven born." European or native, covenanted, uncovenanted, or interloper, was all the same to him, so long as he was a gentleman. Many in Kandeish will mourn his loss. I believe that while Superintendent of Police of the G.I.P. Railway he made many friends both in the Traffic and Engineering Departments of that Company; and I understand he earned a medal and clasp during the Persian campaign of 1857, and that he was with the 23rd Regiment N.I. during the Mutiny. The rain fall up to date (Bulsar) is 50 inches 41 cents, so that one would not be a prophet if he said that this monsoon would either be a very heavy or a very hot one. Colonel Hancock, Consulting Engineer to Government, and Mr. Curry returned yesterday; Mr. Duxbury on Saturday, after a tour of inspection throughout the length of the B. B. and C. I. Railway. I understand that they intend to establish salt depots at the principal stations on that line.

BUSHIRE, July 12.—I am glad to say that there is an end of famine, for the present, in most parts of Persia; and prices have considerably fallen, but poverty, as to be expected, still remains. It is reported that his Majesty the Shah, while out shikarring about two months ago, managed to shoot a leopard, and on sending the carcass to the capital, the nobility and his officers had to send his Majesty as "Nauze Shast" or "bravo" fee, a round sum of krans 60,000! Would it not be advisable for our finance ministers in India always to have an English Prince at hand, and when the revenues run short to send the Royal personage to shoot half a dozen royal tigers, and thus put all financial matters to rights? The British subjects in Bushire are particularly obliged to you for the manner in which you have taken up their cause, but they hope that you will say more yet.—but little by little, and I hope at last to see matters mended.—Times of India Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

DEPARTURE OF MISSIONARIES.—We regret to have to mention the departure of the Rev. G. T. Rea, of the Irish Presbyterian Mission, Gujarat. Mr. Rea has occupied the Borsud station for about five years. His health has been failing for some time; a visit to Mahabaleshwar failed to restore him; and he found himself obliged, by medical advice, to leave for Europe. He left with his family on the 12th instant. The Mission, already crippled by the death of the lamented Mr. Dixon, will feel his loss. By the same steamer, Mr. Young, of the Free Church Mission at Nagpore, proceeded home with his motherless children.—Bombay Guardian.

THE WEATHER AT KURRACHEE.—We have had almost unprecedented weather of late; such continuous falls of rain, and such meteorological demonstrations as Kurrachee has experienced within the last fortnight are incidents out of the common in "young Egypt." The tanks are full to overflowing, and there can be no complaints now regarding the scarcity of water. The protracted drought we suffered from was beginning to be sensibly felt, and had the rain kept off much longer the consequences would have been deplorable. Providentially all such dire effects as were apprehended have been averted, and the falls we have had, and are having, will bring forth good fruit in due season.—Our Paper, July 26.

MAJOR-GENERAL TREMENHEERE.—A series of official farewell dinners have been given to Major General Tremeneheere, C.B., at Aden, and in mentioning this a correspondent says:—"I think they are a truer index of the general feeling of regret than such official affairs generally. Our late Resident (who sailed for England by the last mail) had made himself generally beloved by all who knew him for his open handed hospitality and genuine courtesy and kindness to all with whom he had anything to do. I have been in several stations at the time when the officers in command have been leaving them, but I do not remember a single occasion in which so much general regret seemed to be felt by all, high and low."—Bombay Gazette.

MILITARY BANDITS AT GOA.—We regret to have to announce that the house of a goldsmith named Raghoonath Shett Bhandio, of the village of Siroda, in the fourth division of the New Conquests, was a few days ago forcibly entered into by three sepoys of the police corps, a detachment whereof is on duty at Panchivady. The robbers were recognised by the party robbed, and on Lieutenant Minguel de Sa (the officer in command of the detachment) ordering a search of their boxes, gold and silver ornaments to the value of Rs 400, which were the fruits of the little nocturnal expedition they made to the goldsmith's house, were found concealed therein. The sepoys have confessed their crime, and are now in durance vile at the barracks of their corps in the capital, awaiting trial.—Gazette de Goa.

THE MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.—It is well known that very great dissatisfaction has long existed in the Bombay Medical Department because of the caprice displayed in the distribution of its patronage, and other mismanagement in its internal affairs. These abuses are considered to have culminated, as it may be hoped, in the recent appointment of a Deputy Inspector-General of Hospitals in place of Dr. Thom. Within the last few weeks appointments have been gazetted to six medical posts, of which only one is not open to severe criticism, either on the score of unfitness or great unfairness to better qualified men who have seen and done more service. The exception is the new Professor of Hygiene—an excellent selection in all essential respects. We are assured that in none of the other five appointments have seniority, distinguished service, professional or special ability been taken into consideration.—Times of India.

THE RANEE OF AKULKOTE.—The Poona Observer has the following:—"We understand that the Rane of Akulkote has petitioned Government regarding the ill-treatment which she is said to have received by the Political Agent, upon which the Bombay Government have ordered Mr. Havelock, the Police Commissioner, to inquire into the allegation made by the Rane of Akulkote, and report it to Government. Mr. Havelock, we understand, has inquired into the matter in presence of the Political Agent of Akulkote, when the Rane is said to have repeated before the Police Commissioner what she had written in her petition to Government. She also expressed a desire to have another Political Agent appointed to carry on the administration of Akulkote so as to keep the ryots happy as well as herself. We do not know whether her complaint is based upon facts, or whether it is maliciously made or not."—Poona Observer, July 30.

THE CHOLERA AT POONA.—We have much pleasure in announcing that, up to our going to press, no other case of cholera has made its appearance among the European troops at this station. This we are very glad of, as a camp stands erected on Yerowda plain for the 56th Regiment (Pompadors) to move into immediately another case presents itself. For the welfare of the regiment, and that of the community at large, we trust we have seen an end of the disease for this season. Up to the present there have been five fatal cases in that corps, and two in the 68th Durham Light Infantry Regiment. Energetic measures have been taken by the military authorities to prevent the scourge spreading. The married people living in the bungalows in which cases appeared have been moved into barracks, where the late general depot existed, and the move has been evidently attended, so far, with good results. The men quartered in the bungalows in which cases occurred have likewise been moved, but they have been placed under canvas, on the plain between the Ghorepore Band-stand and the Grand Stand on the Race course. —Dewan Herald, July 29.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

REMUNERATION TO MEDICAL OFFICERS.

RESOLUTION.—When the pay of civil medical officers of all grades was recently consolidated, and considerable increases made to that pay on the recommendation of the medical commission, it was understood that these officers were in future to undertake all the ordinary civil work of their respective charges without any extra allowance, except only travelling under special circumstances.

2. The papers forwarded by the financial department under their endorsement dated March 6, 1872, No. 1,789, raised the broad question what is ordinary civil work, it certainly includes attendance on the ordinary civil or quasi-civil officers, or all the civil establishments; on all strangers passing through the district, if in Government employ in some other district, and on all isolated officers or small parties of officers employed in or travelling about the district. Thus if a party of convicts is sent to work at out-door labour at a distance from the jail, the civil surgeon is bound to visit them at all reasonable times without charge, except under certain circumstances for travelling allowance.

3. On this point the only rule which the Governor general in Council is able to lay down is, that the civil surgeon of a district cannot claim extra remuneration for any duties appertaining to his charge, except those for which a special allowance may have been separately sanctioned, and H.E. in Council is averse to any increase in the number of special allowances which are now granted. When the civil surgeon's presence may be required beyond a distance of five miles from the limits of his station, he will in future draw travelling allowance.

4. It, however, seems questionable whether attendance at a distance of five miles should in all cases be required of a medical officer. H.E. in Council is of opinion that service of this nature should not be considered compulsory, except under extraordinary circumstances, and that, where journeys of this distance are frequent, provision should be made for the services of a sub-assistant surgeon.

5. As regards the question raised by the Inspector general of hospitals, Indian medical department, the Governor general in Council is pleased to rule that when an uncovenanted officer requiring medical aid lives at a distance of more than two miles from the officer or residence of the medical subordinate, and the latter has to hire a conveyance for the journey, the expense so incurred should be defrayed by the officer concerned.

ORDER.—Ordered that a copy of the above resolution be forwarded to the financial department, with the remark that the applications submitted by the Public Works Department should be negatived under the orders now issued.

CIVIL FURLONGS.—The undermentioned gentlemen have obtained (in July) leave of absence and furlough to Europe, on medical certificate, under the rules of 1868, unless otherwise specified:—Mr. L. G. Hynes, assistant mint master, is allowed privilege leave of absence for one month. Rev. F. L. Sharpin, M.A., acting chaplain of Byculla, privilege leave for eighteen days, from July 1.

MILITARY FURLONGS, &c.—The following officers have obtained furlough and leave of absence (in July) to Europe, on medical certificate, under the rules of 1868, unless otherwise specified:—Lieut. THE NEW CODE OF CRIMINAL PROCEDURE.

To all commissioners and all magistrates of districts,—dated Calcutta, July 1, 1872.

I am directed to call your very particular attention to the new Code of Criminal Procedure, Act X. of 1872, which will come into force on 1st September next.

[The principal provisions only are herein given.]

2. The changes in the powers and position of magistrates effected by the Code are so considerable that it will be desirable to re-gazette all magistrates with the powers which it is deemed desirable to invest them with under the new law. The Lieutenant governor accordingly wishes to have submitted to him complete lists of officers and honorary magistrates, with the powers for which each is recommended. These are to be submitted by magistrates of districts through the commissioners.

3. Magistrates will now be first, second, and third class, and special Magistrates (section 42). Also power is taken, and will be very freely used, for the creation of benches of magistrates (sections 50 to 56), and powers of summary trial may be conferred on any first-class magistrate and on benches of magistrates (sections 222 to 230).

4. The powers of magistrates of the first and second class are considerably enlarged. Grievous hurt by dangerous weapons, false evidence, and some other offences hitherto exclusively triable by Courts of Sessions, may in future be tried by a magistrate of the first class; and very large classes of cases of common occurrence, hitherto triable by a first class magistrate only, are now made triable by a magistrate of the second class, who has also now power to pass a sentence of solitary confinement.

5. In fact, it may be said that almost all offences are now either entered in column 7 of the schedule as triable by the Court of Sessions, or are triable by a magistrate of the second class. Almost the only cases entered as triable exclusively by a magistrate of the first class are a very few offences by or relating to public servants (Penal Code, sections 163, 166, 169); and against public justice (sections 204, 208, 209, 210, 211, 215, 216), which are not so much separate offences in themselves as offences occurring in the course of judicial proceedings. Practically, then, all sub-divisional officers and second class magistrates invested with power to commit for trial will have, either in virtue of their own powers, or as qualified to hold preliminary inquiry in sessions cases, jurisdiction in nearly every case that can occur; and there is not the same necessity as before for giving first class powers, except where an officer is in every way fully qualified for such powers, and there is real need for a magistrate of that rank.

6. A second class magistrate in charge of a sub-division has, as such, very large powers. Also, when in cases within his jurisdiction he deems a more severe punishment than he can give necessary, he can send on the file for orders to the magistrate of the district after completing the trial. And in those sessions cases which are also triable by a first class magistrate, if he deems that the case may best be tried by the latter officer, he can stop the preliminary inquiry at any stage, and send the parties and witnesses on to the first-class magistrate.

7. All magistrates in charge of sub-divisions will be able to hear on complaint, and to take up without complaint, cases within their jurisdiction; but the Lieutenant-Governor will invest all magistrates of districts with power under Section 48 to withdraw from any magistrate subordinate to him the cognisance of any classes of cases which he may think proper to reserve.

MITRAILLEUSE EXPERIMENTS AT WOOLWICH.—A further series of experiments took place at the Royal Arsenal practice range last week with the English Gatling gun, the only mitrailleuse yet introduced into the service, and that but sparingly; the object being to ascertain the precise value of that arm as an auxiliary either of artillery or infantry, or both. From the opinions already submitted on the subject in official quarters, it is believed that the use of these mitrailleuses will, in the British service at least, be restricted to boats and fortresses, where the length and breadth of the space to be swept lies within very narrow limits, and when as heavy a fire as possible has to be concentrated on one spot—in such positions, for instance, as the flanks of a main ditch before a fortress, rendering its passage by an assailant almost impracticable, while the weapons themselves offer so small a mark, being placed low down, so as to bring a grazing fire on the ditch, that they can hardly be hit by the besiegers. It appears to be the general opinion throughout Europe that they cannot in any way rival artillery in the open, as grape and canister are far more effective against living objects, and shrapnel or common shell, besides being able to reach the enemy under cover, are much more destructive against resisting objects and at longer ranges. On the other hand, it is thought that they cannot compete against infantry either in usefulness for tactical purposes or in the number of effective shots per man, and, except in Russia, where fifteen batteries of Gatlings are being provided, one for each infantry division, they are not being introduced to any large extent by any European nation. Although the system has been under trial for about two years, there are probably at this time not more than a dozen mitrailleuses in the whole of England.

DISTRIBUTION OF INDIAN FORESTS.

Last week, before the British Association at Brighton, Dr. Brandis delivered an interesting lecture on "The Geographical Distribution of Forests in India." The character of forest vegetation, he observed, in all countries was influenced by soil, climate, and the action of man. In India the distribution of moisture was one of the most important elements. Explaining the advantage of considering India as divided into arid, dry, and wet districts by observation of the rainfall, he stated that in the west corner of India was what might be called the arid tract, extending from the coast of Cutch and from Scinde in the south to the Salt range in the north, and from the hills of Beloochistan in the west to the Aravalli range in the east. The average rainfall in this district was less than fifteen inches. Throughout this arid part of India the spontaneous arborescent vegetation was extremely scanty, although a thin sprinkling of low thorny scrub on the hills offered ample and interesting employment to the botanist. In this region the work of the forester was limited to those tracts which stretched along the Indus and its principal tributaries, watered by the annual overflow of the river during summer, or which could be otherwise irrigated. Thus in Scinde there were on both sides of the Indus river 352,000 acres of Government forest maintained solely by the overflow of the river and by percolation. The result of the deflection of a river from its course was that the forest near the old bed frequently perished. Outside this arid tract there were two belts, with a rainfall of between fifteen and thirty inches, which might be called the dry zones of India. The spontaneous arborescent vegetation was scanty, save in the moist lands along the great rivers, but it was better than in the arid tract. In the southern dry zone, comprising part of the Deccan, was the country of the sandal-wood, a small tree, which did not grow gregariously, and did not form continuous forests. Here, too, were the ancient irrigation works, tanks, and gigantic stone dams across rivers, and where water was thus supplied fields and gardens were most luxuriant. In the rest of India generally the rainfall exceeded thirty inches, but even in these moister parts of the country the conditions for forest vegetation were not everywhere as favourable in India as in Europe. Really thriving forests were only found where the fall exceeded forty-five inches, and luxuriant vegetation was limited to those belts which had a much higher rainfall. Within the moist regions with a rainfall exceeding sixty inches (in one place rising to 250 inches), and in Eastern India, there was a great variety of good forest. Of the Deodar forests of the North-West Himalaya a small portion only fell into this belt, the greater part lying in land where the rainfall was less than sixty inches. Between the dry and moist regions was a vast tract of country with an annual rainfall of more than thirty, but less than sixty inches, comprising the greater portion of the upper Gangetic plain, the whole of Central India and the western side of the peninsula. In this part of India the main obstacle to a luxuriant forest growth was, not so much an insufficient supply of moisture as its unequal distribution over the seasons of the year. The jungle fires were also most fatal to forest growth in these regions of India. The protection of forests against this scourge was not an easy matter; but thanks to the energy of Colonel Pearson, fires had been excluded from several forest districts of the Central Provinces ever since 1864, and the improvement in their condition was marvellous. Up to the present time, however, many otherwise observant people in India, and even officers connected with the administration of the public forests, had been of opinion that these fires were not mischievous, and might in some cases be beneficial. The action of man upon the forests of India had until within the last few years been directed towards their deterioration and destruction. It was indeed remarkable that in a great portion of the arid and dry regions of India large extents of forest land had been preserved by the native rulers. The beginnings of forest conservancy were thus found where forests were scarce and grew under unfavourable conditions; but effectual conservancy was now only possible in those forests over which the Government had complete control. The operations of forest officers in India, therefore, must be directed towards obtaining a separation of private and public rights in the forest land. These public domains, clothed with forest, which, as a rule, it would not be the interest of the private proprietor to maintain, would not only serve to supply the future requirements of the country, but would be a source of strength, financially and politically, to the British Government in India.

Dr. A. Campbell read some notes he had made on the Loshais, one of the notorious hill tribes of India. They dry and preserve their dead; there is no distinction of caste; marriage may be contracted or dissolved at will; the men hunt, and the women work; hitherto they have been known to us as a savage and murderous race, but the expedition against them showed they were social in their habits, were mild in disposition, and had great aptitude for trade.

INDIAN COTTON AT SOUTH KENSINGTON.

A complete and highly interesting collection illustrating the cotton industries of India has been added within the last few days to the International Exhibition, and will be found arranged on the upper floor of the quadrant leading from the Western Gallery towards the Albert Hall. The collection has been made by Indian local committees, under the direction of the Government, with especial reference to the Exhibition; and the greater portion of the articles shown has been contributed by the Bombay Presidency, the chief cotton market of India. The Bombay collection was made under the instructions of Mr. Gerald Fitzgerald, the honorary secretary to the local committee, who has also taken a prominent part in the arrangement of the specimens at South Kensington. The Indian officials most active in the matter have been Mr. Dunlop, assistant-commissioner at Berar, and Mr. Wilkinson, of the Bombay Cotton Department.

The general plan of the Exhibition has been so arranged as to illustrate every stage of the cultivation, growth, treatment, sale, and manufacture of the cotton plant, and with this view the first place is given to a collection of some of the principal soils in which it is grown, and of the manures employed to add to their fertility. Most of the specimens of soil are from the Bombay Presidency; but a selection has also been sent from the central provinces and from the Berars, where the "Hingunghat" and "Oomraotee" varieties, two of the most favourably known of the Indian cottons, are produced. All these soils are in hermetically-sealed glass jars, and it is intended that the specimens shall be analysed, with a view to the better selection of the manures most appropriate for them. The boxes near the glass jars contain the rich black cotton soil, or "rigur," of the Deccan; and the various subsoils beneath it, down to the hard basaltic rock. The black soil itself consists of disintegrated trap-rock, and extends to a depth of about eighteen feet in practically inexhaustible fertility.

In the immediate neighbourhood of the soils place is given to a smaller series of manures, which consist exclusively of cattle dung and farm yard refuse. Chemical and artificial manures have as yet been scarcely introduced into India, except upon some of the Government experimental farms: and the natural manures are used but sparingly. The native cultivators are fully aware of their value, but in the cultivated districts fuel is scarce and dear, and the dung, which would otherwise be returned to the soil, is largely made up into cakes, and burnt for the purposes of cookery.

Above the soils and manures is suspended a large map of India, divided and coloured to show the chief cotton districts, and the relative quantities of their produce. According to this map the production is very widely diffused over the whole Peninsula; and a memorandum attached states that some 1,400,000 bales are annually exported, of which more than 1,000,000 bales are shipped from Bombay. In this quantity would be included 250,000 bales of the Hingunghat and Oomraotee cotton from the Berars and the Central Provinces, 75,000 of equal quality from Khandeish, and 130,000 bales of the Surat and Broach varieties from Guzerat. The map also shows the railways by which cotton can be conveyed from the several provinces for shipment.

Next in order comes a collection of implements for the preparation of the ground for the crop. Among these a full sized "nagar," or heavy plough, of primitive construction, occupies the most prominent place. This nagar is drawn by three pairs of bullocks, and is only used on land which has been long fallow, or where weeds have gained a great ascendancy. An adjoining implement, the "bukhur," a sort of light grubber, is more generally employed, and is sufficient under ordinary circumstances. The sight of these clumsy tools would suggest to many visitors that the agricultural machinery with which we in England are familiar has a great mission in the East. Perhaps this may be so; but the time is not yet. In its rural and agricultural districts, India is a vast aggregate of village communities, not only independent of, but even isolated from each other. Those who, in a different state of civilisation, are competing tradesmen, are in an Indian village hereditary officials paid from the common stock, and not especially by those who require their services. The hereditary village smith and wheelwright have had their offices handed down to them from a remote ancestry; and they make and repair the necessary implements of husbandry for their neighbours. To introduce implements which they could neither make nor repair would be to destroy their functions and positions, and to break up, like a house of cards, the whole system of which they form a part. Time and education will probably produce a desire for change and for progress; and when that desire is once felt, the Hindoos, like the Japanese, will be prompt to acquire and to master the mechanical contrivances of the West. But such things cannot be forced upon them, and would not take root as exotics. The labours of Dr. Forbes Watson will probably introduce machine ginning into the cotton districts; but the cultivators must send their produce to be ginned at factories under European supervision, or the Government must provide itinerant artificers, to go from village to village mending the gins.

A large collection of cotton seed will be found in a case to the right of the implements. Most of this seed brings with it some amount of adherent fibre from the gin; and it is prepared for sowing by being rubbed in damp cow dung. The sowing is done after the first fall of rain, or about the first week in June, and the prepared seed is poured down bamboo tubes and suffered to run into furrows left by the "bukhur" already mentioned. When first sprouting the young plant has not only to contend against vicissitudes of weather, but also against a rapid and luxuriant growth of weeds. To remove these the farmer employs the pair of implements resembling small bukhurs, which run between the rows. A complete collection of the principal weeds has been sent to the exhibition, ready to be fitted with "barbarous binomials" by any who may be desirous of the task.

Of the mature cotton plant itself numerous pressed and dried specimens have been sent, but there is only space to exhibit a few of them. Major Trevor Clark's plants, grown under his own superintendence, are in height somewhat above the average of those of the ordinary native field, but are less sturdy than they ought to be. They show expanded flowers, and one pod of cotton ripe for picking. The picking is done about October and November, but generally very carelessly, on account of the scarcity of labour. On a shelf on the left-hand side of the gallery will be found cases containing examples in the seed of nearly every kind of cotton that is grown in India; and, before the produce is marketable, the seeds must be separated from the fibre. This "cleaning" process is accomplished, in Dharwar and the adjoining country, by the iron foot roller, of which a model is shown; and in other parts of India by a double wooden roller or "churka," of which there are two models, a single and a double-handed implement. The foot roller is found to tear the staple of the cotton and to detract from its market value; but the churka is a wonderfully simple, cheap, and effective machine, and may be regarded as the parent of all the various gins which have been invented to supersede it.

The rest of the collection falls naturally into two divisions—the first illustrative of the uses of the portions of the cotton plant which are left after the removal of the fibre; the second, illustrative of the uses of the fibre which is retained in India.

The stalk of the cotton plant is used extensively for fuel, for thatch, and for baskets, specimens of which are shown. The seed, over and above what is required for sowing, is used as a food for cattle, and so is the cake left after the extraction of its abundant oil. The fibre adherent to the husk is among the many substances that have been used for papermaking; and the increasing value of all these applications has led to recent endeavours to utilise them to the fullest possible extent.

The last process shown is the manufacture of cotton cloth, with models of the looms and photographs of the work. One of the chief seats of this manufacture is at Nagpore and its neighbourhood, where are made not only the coarse cloths worn by the cultivators themselves, but also the fine varieties, with borders of crimson silk and gold thread, which are sent all over India for the use of the more wealthy classes. The industry was greatly fostered by the late Rajah of Nagpore, but has somewhat declined since the annexation of the province and the dispersion of the court.

The collection of woven fabrics is very rich and varied, and extends from the coarsest calico to the cloud like and exquisite Dacca muslin, of which a most beautiful specimen is exhibited. In addition to the unbleached, the coloured and printed cloths are deserving of special notice. Dr. Bhawanoo Dajee, of Bombay, has contributed a valuable collection of the dyes employed, with explanatory notes; and near these dyes will be found a large number of the engraved blocks used for the production of patterns. The process of stamping is shown by photographs.

We have reserved to the last the mention of the most attractive feature of the whole exhibition, which consists of a series of exquisite water-colour sketches by Mr. Griffiths, of the School of Art, Bombay, to illustrate the manner in which the various fabrics are worn or used by the natives. Some of these sketches are in the cases which contain the fabrics themselves, others will be found similarly placed in the Indian Court. That they are accurate representations of Indian life is, perhaps, their least merit, for they have a perfection of drawing, a harmony of colour, and a bold individuality of treatment which can be adequately described by one phrase alone. They are emphatically works of genius, and they should be visited as such by every lover of art, however much or little he may be interested in the growth of cotton.—Times.

Miscellaneous.

MADRAS IRRIGATION AND CANAL COMPANY.—The applications for mortgages up to this time have been highly satisfactory, and an allotment will be made in the course of a few days.

MILITARY.—The Duke of Cambridge has selected Colonel E. Seager, half pay late 8th Hussars, to receive a distinguished service reward, vacant by the death of Lieutenant General Kerr Ross. Colonel Seager rose from the ranks, having received his commission as Cornet and Adjutant from Sergeant Major in 1841. He served in the Crimean campaign, and in Central India in 1858-59. He has received the Crimean medal with four clasps, the fifth class of the Medjidie, Turkish medal, and the war medal for India.

DEATH OF AN EX-INDIAN JUDGE.—Mr. Richards, ex-Baron of the Irish Court of Exchequer, who has just died aged eighty-two, was educated in Trinity College, and called to the bar in 1811. He was one of the judges of the Supreme Court at Madras, but resigned in 1835, became Solicitor-General for Ireland, and succeeded Sir Michael O'Loughlin as Attorney General in 1836, and became a Baron of the Exchequer in the following year. He was appointed chief commissioner under the Incumbered Estates Act in 1849, and resigned his seat on the bench in 1859. He was succeeded by the late Baron Hughes.

EXPORT OF BULLION.—The exports of bullion to India for the month of August by the P. and O. Company's steamers have been extremely small, amounting to not more than £8,000 in gold, which was required by Bombay; about £2,200 in gold by Madras; and £8,500 in gold by Ceylon. To Calcutta, £1,000 in silver was sent. These were the exports up to the 23rd of August last. By the steamers of the Messageries Impériales £720 in gold was exported to Pondicherry, and £1,680 in silver to Madras. The latest quotations of the price of silver are subjoined:—Bar, 5s. 0½d. per oz. standard; Mexican Dollars, old die, 5s. 2½d. per oz.; new die, 5s. per oz.; 5 francs, 4s. 11d. per oz.

ABYSSINIA.—Information has been received with regard to the internal state of Abyssinia. The country is parcelled out amongst different chiefs who are at present on pretty good terms with each other. Probably they are nearly equal in strength. Dejaz-Kassei, who has assumed the ancient title of the Emperors of Abyssinia, has, since his coronation, changed greatly for the worse. The Roman Catholic missionaries have been expelled the country, whilst the Europeans who still remain in his service are treated very badly, and are said to be in a starving condition. The barbarous punishment of amputation of the hands and feet is becoming common, and there have been recent instances of the whipping of women, some of them persons of position, and connected with Europeans. In fact there is a complete disregard of European opinion and influence; and it is said distinctly that it is extremely unsafe for any European to travel in Northern Abyssinia at the present time.

DR. HOOKER'S INDIAN MILITARY SERVICES.—In a letter to the Standard, signed "G.", the following account is given of the military services which Dr. Hooker has rendered to the country:—"In 1861 the Indian Government, for the second time, organised a field force to punish the Rajah of Sikkim (a small State among the highest spurs of the Himalayas, enclosed by Tibet, Bhotan, our own borders, and Nepal), for acts of violence and aggression on our territory. On the first occasion, in 1849-50, a large force had been assembled at Darjeeling to punish the same Rajah for having imprisoned and ill-treated the Governor-General's agent and Dr. Hooker, but the general officer, who had served with distinction in the Nepal war, reported the country 'impracticable for British troops,' in which opinion he was borne out by Sir C. Napier. ('Life of Napier,' vol. iv., p. 240. 'Himalayan Journals,' vol. ii., p. 239.) The force was consequently broken up, and the Governor-General's menace came to nothing. In 1859-60, on my way between Calcutta and Darjeeling, I studied Dr. Hooker's most interesting and valuable work, 'Himalayan Journals,' which I found to be a most perfect staff officer's report, containing accurate information on every point that could be useful to the commander of an expedition, regarding hills, valleys, elevations, distances, rocks, soil, trees, vegetation, roads, rivers, bridges, productions, inhabitants, their character, climate, seasons, &c., and accompanied, moreover, by an excellent sketch map, which the Government copied and furnished for our use. For the time that the force was in the field the work was as hard as has ever been performed by any force; but the rapidity of its movements, and the complete success of the expedition, which elicited the warm thanks and highest expressions of approval of the Governor-General in Council and of Lord Strathairn, who was then commander-in-chief, were owing in a very large degree to the perfect information regarding the people and country afforded by Dr. Hooker's work, and which was not obtainable from any official source."

BILLS ON INDIA.—Tenders for £650,000 in bills on India were received on Wednesday, the 21st inst., at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta, £640,700; to Bombay, £1,000; and to Madras, £8,300. The minimum price was fixed, as before, at 1s. 10½d. on all the Presidencies. Tenders on Calcutta and Madras at 1s. 10½d. will receive about 50 per cent., and on Bombay at that price in full. The average rate was 1s. 10¾d.

FAILURE OF A GREAT INDIAN FIRM.—The failure was announced last Friday morning of Messrs. Gledistanes and Co., East India and China merchants. The liabilities will, it is thought, represent about £1,500,000; but as a large portion of this amount is in acceptances by other firms, the total will be very considerably reduced. One of the principal causes of the suspension was the loss sustained through late operations in cotton, tea, and other Eastern produce, and when the event transpired great excitement was created, as the stoppage was believed to have arisen entirely through misfortune in business, and not in consequence of over speculation. General sympathy was manifested for the house, which had been long established, and possessed high credit. The members of the firm are connected as directors with some of the leading banks and insurance companies in the city. The following circular was sent out this evening to the creditors:—"26, Austin-friars, London, E.C., Aug. 22, 1872. We deeply regret to inform you that we have found it necessary to suspend our payments. We have placed our books in the hands of Messrs. Harding and Co., of the Old Jewry, accountants, and will submit a statement of our affairs to you at the earliest possible date. —We are, your obedient servants, GLEDISTANES and Co."

VIA "BRINDISI AND THE SUEZ CANAL."—A two-hours' entertainment, which, if not actually novel, at least proves very attractive, is now being given by the Messrs. Hamilton in the concert room of the Agricultural Hall. The audience in the course of the evening perform an imaginary journey from London to Calcutta by the new Brindisi and Suez Canal route, the scenes through which they successively pass being illustrated by a magnificent movable diorama, while the incidents of the journey are described and the scenery explained. The first of the views represents the Horticultural Gardens, bounded by the International Exhibition, with the Albert Hall in the background. From thence the traveller is taken to the starting-point of his journey—the terminus at Charing-cross—where the life and bustle of a crowded railway station are vividly depicted. The next step in the route is Folkestone, followed by the graphic delineation of the horrors of the Channel passage. The striking representation of the deck of a Boulogne steamer excited prolonged applause from the audience. After a brief stay at Boulogne, Paris is reached. The various places of interest in this beautiful city are almost brought bodily before the eye of the spectator by the facile brush of Mr. W. Telbin and Mr. A. Hamilton. The Mont Cenis Tunnel next occupies the traveller's attention, and, in default of seeing the tunnel itself, sightseers should certainly go and witness Mr. Hamilton's reproductions upon canvas of this marvellous engineering feat. Susa and Turin are next visited, the traveller making a slight detour to see Rome, after which Brindisi is reached. Here is depicted a splendid sunrise effect, by Telbin, with the departure of the Mirzapore for Alexandria, painted from photographs given by the Peninsular and Oriental Company. The opening of the Suez Canal, the Pyramids and the Sphinx, Alexandria and Cairo next come in for a share of the traveller's attention, after which, by a rapid transition, he is landed at Bombay. Calcutta follows, and the incidents of the arrival of Her Majesty's ship Galatea, and visit of his Royal Highness the Duke of Edinburgh are represented. The views here comprehend the commander-in-chief's camp at Bahr, religious festivals, snake charmers, the city of Benares, the Festival of Duwalle, winding up with a scene representing the dance of the Nautch girls. Of the paintings it is impossible to speak too highly. The grand and striking effects of colour and grouping are not more noticeable than the marvellous attention to detail and the minute accuracy of the scene. Mr. Hamilton has a capital knowledge of stage effect.

Spirit of the Home Journals.

THE PRIMATE AMONG THE "HEATHEN."

The Daily Telegraph observes Archbishop Tait has taken a striking, and we cannot say an untimely, mode of demonstrating to the enlightened people of Carlisle the need for missionary enterprise. Travel in remote lands is no longer necessary for the purpose of seeking and finding "specimens" of the heathen; Dr. Tait has just drawn attention to them in our midst, and made known their presence to Sir Wilfrid Lawson's constituents with more zeal, perhaps, than diplomacy. The Ambassadors from Japan are stamped with the ancient appellation, and if they can read English we wonder what the Mikado will think of the Archbishop of Canterbury. Then there are, the Primate erroneously says, sixty Hindoos who study in our Inns of Court, and remain heathens "in the centre of civilisation;" although, considering that these dark gentlemen intend to go home and hope to regain caste privileges, and to live with kindred and friends, it is not so surprising a circumstance, after all, that they retain their character; while the letters in which two of their number have repudiated the name "heathen" are not without justification. "Every specimen of such strangers may also be found," the Archbishop laments, "in the Oriental Home; the streets are beset by them; they glitter at Court; they adorn the banquet of my Lord Mayor." It is natural and becoming that his Grace of Canterbury should be officially impressed by this influx of "Parthians, Medes, Elamites;" nay, he thinks that, "unless we take some steps for converting the heathen, the heathen will be converting us." No doubt it is an awful picture! Imagine a Brahman in Lambeth Palace, and a Buddhist high-priest, perhaps the Mikado himself, head of the Province of York. The Archbishop assures us that the idea is not imaginary; for already in our great seminaries of learning the young men feed on Eastern philosophy, and its echoes are heard in our literature. Men of learning "tolerate," and even venerate Menu-Sakya-Mouni, and Confucius! They read and analyse the Puranas and Shastras, and welcome even a bundle of bamboo laths covered with the teachings of Pali sages. Perhaps the Archbishop's method is the best way of bringing the existence of this fact home to the Cumberland intellect; but we must remark that we hope our Oriental guests of all sorts will not think his Grace really implies anything unkind by calling them "heathen," or that he underrates the noble poetry and philosophy of the East. Meantime, the tale told by Stanley from Livingstone's lips—we mention it because all England rings with the facts therein narrated—affords stronger evidence that large fields of missionary labour exist than the arrival of a foreign Embassy or the presence of Indian law students in the Temple. The truth is that the greater part of the earth's crust sustains the "heathen," and that Queen Victoria rules over a very large proportion of them. Dr. Tait's motives are excellent; but the discretion and broad tolerance which are the well-known characteristics of his Grace, must rouse themselves to shake off phrases and to grapple with far graver facts than this sprinkling of Eastern costumes and countenances in the world of London.

INCORPORATED BY SPECIAL ACT OF PARLIAMENT.

ISSUE OF STATUTORY AND ABSOLUTE FIRST CHARGE MORTGAGES

Under the Authority of Special Acts of Parliament passed, with the express approval of the Secretary of State for India, for the purpose of paying off temporary advances made by Government, amounting to £800,000, and interest thereon. Upon the whole of the Company's completed Main Canal for Irrigation and Navigation, in length 190 miles; with over 300 miles of completed Irrigation Channels therefrom (now in successful operation), also all the land belonging to the Company, with all Stations, Workshops, Bungalows, Offices, Tollhouses, and other Buildings, and also upon all Rates for Irrigation (the same being payable by the Government direct), all charges for water otherwise supplied; also all Navigation Tolls and other revenue of the Company (except the Guaranteed Interest on the present Capital Stock of the Company), over the repayment of which, however, the Interest on the Mortgages will have preference, subject only, as to these Rates and Tolls, to the temporary advance of £800,000 so long as the same or any part thereof shall remain unliquidated, and for the payment off of which the present Loan is issued.

The Price of Issue 82 per Cent. of the nominal amount, repayable at par at the expiration of twelve years from the date of issue, or at the option of the Company at any time after five years and after three months' notice. Interest at 5 per cent. per annum on the nominal amount of issue (making a little over 6 per cent. on the actual payment) will be paid half-yearly on the 1st of January and the 1st of July.

Subscriptions payable in full or by instalments, as stated in the Prospectus. The interest and return will represent 8 per cent. on the price of issue.

Prospectuses and Forms of Application for Mortgages may now be had at the Company's Offices, 8 and 9, Queen-street-place, Southwark-bridge, London, E.C.; or at the Company's Bankers, Messrs. VOLS. I. to IV.,

THE PEOPLE OF INDIA:

A SERIES OF
PHOTOGRAPHIC ILLUSTRATIONS OF
THE RACES AND TRIBES OF HINDUSTAN,
ORIGINALLY PREPARED UNDER THE AUTHORITY OF
THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA,
AND REPRODUCED AT THE INDIA MUSEUM
BY ORDER OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL

EDITED BY

J. FORBES WATSON AND JOHN WILLIAM KAYE.

MEMORANDUM.

In addition to the copies of this work prepared for the use of the Government, the Secretary of State for India in Council has authorised the publication of an edition for sale.

The work will contain about 450 Photographs on mounts, in eight volumes, super-royal 4to., and it will be issued at £2. 5s. per volume. The First and Second Volumes are still on hand.

From the TIMES.

"We gather from the Preface that this work grew to its present handsome dimensions from a very modest commencement. It originated in the wish of Lord and Lady Canning to take home a private collection of photographs which might serve to recall the scenes and incidents of their Indian life, but as it advanced its importance began to be perceived, and Government, with a most judicious expenditure of public money, took it in hand. Very few of the photographs are unaccompanied by descriptions, often copious and graphic, of the subjects they illustrate, and the result is a singularly varied panorama of human life and character exhibited under almost every conceivable aspect. Although these four volumes deal with only a portion of the empire, there is scarcely a type of character, from the loftiest to the most debased, that is not to be found in them, and nowhere else, perhaps, in the world are peculiarities of character so strongly marked and sharply defined as in India. We might exhaust far more space than we can afford without giving the reader at all an adequate idea of the strange varieties of character to which these volumes introduce him."

LONDON: WM. H. ALLEN and Co., 13, Waterloo-place, S.W., Publishers to the India Office.

TEXTILE MANUFACTURES & COSTUMES OF THE PEOPLE OF INDIA,

As Originally Prepared under the Authority of the Secretary of State for India in Council.

By J. FORBES WATSON, M.A., M.D., F.R.A.S.,

Reporter on the Products of India.

Folio, half-morocco, with numerous coloured Photographs. £3. 5s.

This work—by affording a Key to the Fashions of the People, and to the Cotton, Silk, and Wool Textiles in actual use in India—is of special interest to Manufacturers, Merchants, and Agents; as also to the student and lover of ornamental art.

"We congratulate Dr. Forbes Watson on having produced so useful and so practical a work, and on having diffused knowledge upon all material points connected with the clothing of the people of India, which heretofore had been unattainable. His book is written in a clear and thoroughly intelligible style throughout; it is handsomely got up, and embellished by numerous coloured photographs, from which the various styles of costume and portion of clothing, male and female, will be more readily understood than from mere description. The colours, too, of the various fabrics are given from the articles themselves, and we would in particular invite attention to the plates at page 114, all or most being figures of respectable Mohammedans in Upper India, in rich dresses, as conveying excellent impressions of colour and effect in Native Indian costume."—Times.

ROWLANDS' KALYDOR

a most refreshing Preparation for the COMPLEXION and SKIN.

This Royally patronised and Ladies' esteemed Specific exerts the most soothing, cooling, and purifying action on the Skin, eradicates freckles, tan, pimples, spots, discolouration, and other cutaneous visitations, realises a healthy purity of complexion, and a softness and delicacy of the hands and arms. It obviates all the effects of climate on the skin, whether with reference to cold and inclemency, or intense solar heat.—Price 4s. 6d. and

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.

BAD LEGS.—Any unnatural discharge from the skin is at all times disagreeable, but in hot weather it becomes irritating—sometimes offensive. Bad legs, old wounds, scrofula, and scorbutic eruptions are cooled, soothed, and cured by Holloway's Ointment. It at once arrests all diseases of the surface, by purifying and regulating the circulation in their neighbourhood, by giving energy to the nerves of the affected part, and by expelling all poisonous and noxious matters. It ejects the seeds of all virulent eruptions and ulcerations, and thus confers no partial or temporary boon, but a complete and permanent cure. By means of these remedies all sufferers may aim at attaining health, and will invariably succeed.

MICROSCOPICAL investigation has proved that the decaying substances which ac- cumulate between the teeth contain animal and vegetable parasites, and that the tooth powders, pastes, and washes in general use have no effect upon these.

Royal Dentifrice and Odontalgique Elixir (obtainable of every respectable Chemist and Perfumer) completely destroy and remove these animalcules, and also preserve and beautify the

TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great
Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 500 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer,

PROSPECTUS.

This Association has been formed for the purpose of supplying what has been long and painfully felt as a want by all Departments of the Indian Services, as well as the Anglo-Indian public generally. The Business it will undertake will consist of Banking and Agency in all its Branches connected with the East, at adequate Commissions. Success will depend more on the Credit and Character of the Company than upon a large Capital; and, as the business will be at once safe and comprehensive, the profits ought to admit of handsome dividends being realised for the shareholders.

The Banking operations of the Company will be conducted with the view principally of attracting the more profitable Agency business of the Civil and Military Services, and the accounts of professional and other persons who are not engaged in large commercial transactions, coupled with the Insurance Accounts, and other Agencies, which must follow such a line of Business.

The Civil and Military, Covenanted and Uncovenanted, Servants of the Indian Government are now a very large body, and the different Members of the Government Services in that country are in receipt of liberal Incomes. Many of these gentlemen frequently require temporary accommodation, which they have difficulty in obtaining, unless at usurious rates; and to make such advances, when covered by adequate collateral security, will be one of the principal objects of this Company; in the different Presidencies there are a large number of gentlemen, European and native, in receipt of moderate allowances, which are paid with the greatest punctuality, and who might be advantageously assisted under the careful system of management which will characterise the Business to be conducted by this Company.

A moderate Commission on the collection of Furlough Pay, and Pensions of the Indian Government Constituents will, in itself, afford a good income.

The following classes of Business will also be undertaken by this Agency:—

- 1.—To receive and remit Pay, Salaries, Pensions, Dividends, Fund Allowances, and every other description of Income.
- 2.—To undertake the Agency of H.M.'s Service (Army and Navy), and others, both in India and England.
- 3.—To make remittances to and from India at the Exchange of the day.
- 4.—To keep Current Accounts on the principle adopted by London Bankers, with or without Commission, and with or without an allowance of Interest, according to Agreement, and to receive Fixed Deposits at agreed Rates.
- 5.—To secure Passages by the Steamers of the Peninsular and Oriental Company, the Austrian Lloyd's, the Messageries Maritimes, and the Societa d'Adriatico Italiano, and by all other Vessels running to and from India.

6.—To execute orders of every kind, both at home and in the East, including the Transport and Warehousing of Furniture and Baggage, taking houses and apartments and similar services.

The completion and opening up of the Railways throughout India, and the large increase of through traffic between the two countries since the opening of the Suez Canal, show clearly the wide field for this part of the Company's operations.

Co-operative Store Departments, under the direction of this Agency, will be established in India. As this is a field, up to the present time undeveloped and much required, it is only reasonable to anticipate that a success equal to that achieved by such establishments in England will result, and a large connection will in consequence be secured for the Company. Many Indian families in this country reside in the West-end of London; it is therefore proposed to open a Branch there also, and to secure accommodation for the especial reception and warehousing of Baggage, &c., &c.

A portion of the Shares will be reserved for Subscribers in India.

No promotion money is payable, but 1,500 fully paid up Shares have been appropriated for the benefit of the Founders of the Company, as provided in the Articles of Association.

Copies of the Memorandum and Articles of Association to be seen on application to the Solicitors or at the Company's Offices.

Applications for Shares addressed to the Directors in the enclosed Form will be received by Messrs. BARCLAY, BEVAN, TRITTON, TWELLS, and Co., 54, Lombard-street, London, Bankers to the Company; by JOHN DAVIES, Esq., Secretary to the Company; and by I. H. DUDGEON, Esq., at 6½, Austin Friars, Old Broad-street, E.C., where the offices of the Company are (pro tem.), of whom Prospectuses may be obtained.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR SHARES.

To the Directors of THE EAST INDIAN CIVIL, MILITARY, AND COMMERCIAL AGENCY (Limited).

Gentlemen,—Having paid to your Bankers the sum of £ being a Deposit of £1 per Share, I hereby request you will allot me

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail, are—from Bombay, August 9; Agra and Madras, August 7; Calcutta, August 6.

AT the last meeting of the Legislative Council, held at Simla on the 1st of August, Mr. Hobhouse was allowed to introduce a Bill postponing the legal date of the Criminal Procedure Act from September 1872 to next January. It appears that Lord Northbrook has heard of the complaints expressed on all sides at some provisions of the Act, and still more at the hurry with which it was passed. Whether the changes effected by the Act in the Criminal Procedure Code were all for the better or no, his Lordship has done wisely to insist upon further delay before the Act is made law. On another point however he seems to have let himself be overruled by Sir R. Temple, who pleaded hard against delay in the matter of the Burmah Spirit Duty Bill, mentioned in our last issue. His Lordship finally agreed to suspend the standing order requiring the previous publication of the Bill in the British Burmah Gazette; but he added that in future he should cause a record to be made of the progress of every Bill, so that none of the rules affecting its successive stages should be broken through. Two or three other Bills were advanced a stage.

THE Agricultural Department has issued an encouraging report on the weather and the crops down to the end of July. Rain had at length fallen everywhere, and almost everywhere the crops promised well. Sind has suffered somewhat from floods, which had also impaired the otherwise cheering prospects in Orissa and Ganjam. In Bengal the Bardwan and Presidency Divisions have suffered from the opposite cause, a want of water; and at one time there was reason for anxiety in the North-West Provinces, owing to a prolonged break in the rains. Since the 26th July however a general downpour has relieved all fears. We regret to learn that fever is increasing in Bardwan, Balasor, and two or three other places. Dengue also was still prevalent in most parts of Bengal, and cholera, which was disappearing from Jalpiguri, still prevailed in Darjeeling and Cuttack. The Englishman fears for the rice-crops of Bengal, unless the deficiency of rain be soon made up.

WE are glad to hear that Lord Northbrook's coming tour through the Punjab and Sindh will probably settle the long-pending question as to the union of those two provinces under one Governor. It has long been evident to any one with eyes to see, that such a union of countries watered by the same rivers, and having a common interest in the same harbours and the same railway system, ought to be carried out with the least possible delay. Another point which the Viceroy is likely to consider by the way, is the expediency of attaching the whole or some part of the Central Provinces to their natural partner, Bombay. His Lordship also intends to arrange a meeting with the Khan of Khelat, who seems to be always at issue with his feudal chiefs. On his way back to Calcutta he will invest the Begam of Bhopal with the Order of the Star of India.

AT the last meeting of the Bengal Council, Mr. G. Campbell referred with some pride to the Municipal Bill of this year, and the Road Cess Bill of 1871, as forming between them a complete code of local self-government for Bengal. That province, he said, would now have a system of local self-rule which will help to cover it with roads, canals, and other means of communication; and by degrees it would also enjoy a good system of municipal self-government. Under the new Bill a municipal system "of an advanced and complete character in cities, of a less complete and expensive character in towns, and of a very simple character in rural villages" would be set at work. The Lieutenant-Governor then pointed out the two-fold principle underlying recent legislation in Bengal. For purely material improvements, adding to the value of fixed property, immovable property alone would be taxed; but "for all other matters, for education, for conservancy which affected health, and for other benefits which were the result of intelligent self-government, taxation should extend, not only to immovable property, but to all kinds of property." The Bill dealing with education empowered the Government to insist on the establishment of primary schools in those places which were rich enough to pay for them, while with regard to rural villages the time for compulsory education had not yet come.

MR. CAMPBELL has probably given new offence to some classes of his subjects by maintaining, what is no doubt true, that of all the provinces in India Bengal is still the most lightly taxed. Its Government, as he truly remarked, had long ago "surrendered an enormous land revenue in favour of a private proprietary, which had been created and sprung up under British rule—that enormous proprietary class who derived a great income from the land and paid hardly any tax at all." In spite of this, however, no new provincial taxes had yet been laid on Bengal, and the Municipal Bill would furnish only a very small modicum of local taxation. In fact, said Mr. Campbell, with a side hit at some Indian Governors, it would have served the grumblers right if he had brought in several very heavy Bills to frighten them, and then earned their gratitude by withdrawing those Bills. He concluded an able speech by expressing a hope that no more local taxation would be required for a long time to come.

THE Indian Government has just sanctioned the scheme proposed at Bombay for establishing a kind of Court of Conciliation in Katiwar, for the settlement of all disputes regarding land between the Chiefs of that country and their Girassias or feudal landholders. The Rao of Cutch has started a Council of his own for the speedier settlement of all important questions of State.

THE controversy in India regarding Mr. Cowan seems to have roused in the hearts of some of his admirers the worst passions that could disgrace our modern civilisation. Mr. Cowan himself is much to be pitied, no doubt. He has paid a hard penalty for an act of cruelty committed with the best intentions under a mistaken view of the exigencies of his position. We have no reason to suppose that his summary execution of so many Kuka prisoners was regarded by him as anything but a painful necessity. Some of his supporters however seem to have felt a savage pleasure in contemplating the actual results of his rash severity. Among the subscribers to the Cowan Testimonial was one gentleman who put down his name for Rs. 49, with these words added in explanation—"A rupee for every Kuka killed." The Friend of India, not without reason, calls him "a cowardly brute" for so doing. It may be that the giver of the present wrote the offensive words, rather out of mere bravado, than from a brutal delight in bloodshed. But the kind of feeling which inspires such language prevails, we fear, to a lamentable extent in India. Too many of our countrymen seem to care for the life and honour of a native as little as they would for the life of a fly. One of the most scandalous outrages we ever heard of forms the subject of a poem written by the author of the "Chutney Lyrics." A collector, a colonel, a major, and several other English gentlemen, are described as going to a hall given by a rich Parsee, enjoying his splendid hospitalities, and then ducking him in a tank because he was a Parsee and a "nigger." The author, who tells the tale with much relish, expressly declares that his poem is founded on fact, and that the Parsee was turned out of his own hall for being a "nigger." If it is shocking to think that English officers and civilians could have thus disgraced themselves, what shall we say of the bard who smacks his lips as it were over their brutal fun? From the Punjab to Madras the same kind of feeling towards the "nigger" would seem, from these two incidents, to prevail. In view of such things, can we wonder at the ill-will or the coldness felt by many natives towards their English masters?

A RECENT telegram informs us of the arrival of an ambassador from Khiva at Calcutta. His coming had been expected for some weeks past, as the Bombay papers had already announced the completion of his mission to the Amír of Kabul, and his intention to "make certain representations" by word of mouth to the Indian Government. The probable object of his visit to Calcutta is to sound the intentions of our Government with regard to Russia's renewed advance on Khiva, and to enlist if possible our active sympathies in behalf of one of those border Khanates which Russia has long been threatening to absorb. According to the telegram already quoted, the Russians are said to have appeared in force before the capital itself. It is not likely that the Indian Government will depart from its former policy of non-intervention in the affairs of the Khanates; but there are ways of indirect interference which may possibly be tried with some effect, if, at least, it be deemed expedient to interfere at all at this late stage of the dispute between the Khans and their old assailant.

WE regret to learn from latest telegrams that the cholera, which last week was raging in Cashmere, has now broken out again with fatal violence in the Punjab. At Meeanmeer seventy men of the 37th Foot are stated to have perished, and of two hundred attacked in Lahore more than half have succumbed to the dreadful scourge. We would fain hope that the figures have not been correctly given; but the Times correspondent who sends the message speaks of the attacks as being "sudden and alarming." The disease, as one of our correspondents lately pointed out, appears to have been propagated by the pilgrims returning from Hurdwar. Its present virulence may be owing to the heavy rains of July. Kassowlie and other stations have also been attacked.

A CALCUTTA telegram of September 1 states that down to the 24th August 161 English soldiers, twenty-one women, and forty-five children, have died of cholera this season. Eighty deaths occurred in Lahore alone. Of the native troops at Kohat twenty-five have died in a few days out of thirty-five attacked. A great many other natives have also died.

THE troops for the Camp of Exercise are to assemble on the 1st December.

THE telegraph brings news of the abatement of dengue in Calcutta. Elsewhere however it is still very severe, especially in Madras, where prayers for its abatement have been offered in many of the churches.

THE sentence on Liakat Ali, according to a recent telegram, has been confirmed.

THE failure of a great Indian trading firm for something over a million in the flush of general prosperity at home seems at first sight as strange and startling as a thunderbolt in a clear sky, or the sudden death of somebody who had looked like living to any age. In the midst of life we are in death; and in the midst of an expanding trade and of boundless money making, an old house goes down which to casual observers had appeared safe to stand for ever. In the case of Messrs. Gledstones however the mystery of their sudden failure is in part explained by the extent of their losses in the crash of 1866, and of their recent speculations in certain staples, such as cotton and indigo, liable to frequent fluctuations of value. The state of the cotton market has never been quite sound since the American War; and a new element of uncertainty has lately been added by the growing number of cotton mills started in Western India. It is needless to speculate however on the causes of Messrs. Gledstones' failure at this stage of the affair. We shall learn all about it by-and-by. For the present, too, we must remain in the dark as to the probable effect of such a collapse on other houses in the Indian trade. The Times in its City Article holds out a strong hope that the failure in question will not lead to the stoppage of any other house either in London or in the country, and that even in Calcutta no great embarrassments need be feared. A great many of the firm's acceptances have already been taken up, and many more are likely to be met ere long in the same way.

IN a letter to the Pall Mall Gazette Sir G. Jenkinson combats the objections raised by that journal to the proposed guarantee from England on behalf of the Euphrates Valley Railway. England's direct share in the execution of that scheme would, he reminds us, be almost nominal, for Turkey is ready to raise the loan, pay the interest, build the railway, and offer certain securities for the payment alike of interest and capital. England's risk in short would be confined to "backing the bill;" and past experience shows how steadily Turkey has hitherto fulfilled her financial pledges. As for the argument used by the Pall Mall Gazette, that no one would care to travel eight or nine days in summer across so hot a country as Mesopotamia, we need only ask how it is that so many Englishmen go by rail from Calcutta to Umballa, Lahore, or Bombay, all of them much longer distances by railway than from Scanderoon to Koweit. If the journey to Umballa takes only a day and a half and that to Bombay less than two days, what reason is there for setting down eight or even four days as the time required between Scanderoon and the Persian Gulf? Mr. Farley proposes to run trains on a narrow-gauge line longer than that recommended by the Select Committee at thirty-five miles an hour, a rate which for the 920 miles to Koweit would give a total of about twenty-six hours. Take the lower average of thirty miles an hour, and still the journey would be finished in thirty-one hours. It may be a moot point whether a train on the metre gauge could be run with safety at thirty-five miles an hour; but it is pretty certain that one on the Indian gauge could keep up an average of forty miles, and thirty-five would be easy going on the ordinary English gauge. Mr. Farley by the way is ready to construct his line to Basrah for five millions sterling, or about three and a-half millions less than the cost of a broad gauge line of 5ft. 6in., as estimated by Mr. Maxwell, C.E. But it is worth noting that a new branch of the Bombay and Baroda Railway has been made on the Indian gauge for only £7,000 a mile, while Mr. Fowler, C.E., has reckoned the cost of making a line from Kotree to Mooltan at only £6,367 a mile. Mr. Fowler's estimates have been carefully considered, and the Euphrates Valley line, a few miles only excepted, would be one of the easiest in the world to make. There is no good reason therefore, if cheap labour can only be secured, why a light line on the broad gauge from Scanderoon to Koweit on the Persian Gulf need cost more than seven millions at the most. It is a question well worth considering whether a long railway on the Indian or the English standard gauge would not better serve all needful requirements of speed, comfort, and public convenience, than a line on the metre gauge, even though the latter might save a first outlay of one or two millions. Room and speed are of prime importance for a line intended to carry troops, mails, and goods, through countries where the heat in summer is very fierce.

In recounting the calamities that have befallen Orissa, Dr. Hunter seems to have somehow overlooked the dreadful hurricane of October 1831, in which 22,500 people are said to have been drowned in half an hour. From a letter addressed to the Spectator by Mr. H. Ricketts, formerly magistrate and collector of Balasor, we learn that on this occasion the sea swept inland for nine miles, and breached a road which there passes through the province. All living things were drowned and left in heaps, eight and ten feet high, against the road. South of Balasor Mr. Ricketts once stood under a tree with the only survivor in a village containing 700 or 800 inhabitants. This old man was up in that tree when the storm-wave swept around him, and twice the sea came over his head. When he got down again, "all was dry, but, as he expressed it, not a cat left." Some of the villagers had proposed to go further inland, but the younger ones, who had not witnessed the storm of 1823, could not believe in the likelihood of any danger, and so all were drowned. In 1853 Mr. Ricketts found many places densely peopled, where not a soul had been left in 1831. He sought in vain at Balasor for the map he had once made of the country flooded from the Subenreeka River to the Dumrah. Had the wind in 1832 blown on shore as in the former year, "the sea would have gone to the hills of Neilghur, and some day to the hills it will go." He thinks that the storm-wave was "very near" last month, when the pretty station of Balasor was again demolished, and thousands left houseless without food. Some day, he writes, "a spring tide and a hurricane from the east will again come together, and then one in a thousand . . . will ride on his choppah (roof thatch) into Neilghur, and all the rest will be victims of one more calamity in Orissa." A like prediction has been made, we know, regarding St. Petersburg, whenever a strong wind shall blow the waters of the Gulf of Finland up the Neva; but no precautions, we believe, have yet been taken to avert so dire a contingency. If the danger in the present case be really as great as Mr. Ricketts seems to think it, by what means can it be averted? The risks of river-floods may be greatly lessened by some of the plans which have been laid before the Government; but how is the combined action of sea and rivers to be counteracted at a reasonable cost?

In his reply to an address from the Liverpool Chamber of Commerce, touching the advantages of trade between England and Burmah, and the need of carrying out Captain Sprye's scheme for a railway from Maulmain to Western China, the Chief of the Embassy declared that his Royal master was going to appoint consular agents in various parts of his kingdom, who would report to their Government all matters of importance bearing on the commercial well-being of Burmah. What he added regarding that country, of which we still know so little, may as well be given in his own words:—

"Burmah is very rich and fertile. It possesses the finest teak forests of the world, its mines of rubies and other precious gems are unequalled, its wells of petroleum are the wonder of foreigners, while coal and iron are to be found in great abundance. Gold and silver are also among its mineral productions. The soil is very productive. Cotton, tobacco, tea, indigo, cutch, and seeds of all sorts grow luxuriantly, whilst in the forests are found the india-rubber plant, sticklac, and vast quantities of gum-bearing trees."

Few things in these days are more remarkable than the tendency of trade to hark back to old routes. The long-sea voyage to India is fast becoming obsolete. The Suez Canal has revived the old traditions of trade through Egypt. It will not be long before the trade of Asia will once more pass by the Euphrates Valley towards Europe; and Italy has already resumed her old functions as the main channel of European traffic with the East. It has even become possible for Venice to dream of superseding Brindisi as the true point of departure from Europe to the Levant and Egypt. The Queen of the Adriatic has already witnessed the novel sight of a large P. and O. Company's steamer entering her lagoons in quest of passengers and merchandise for the East. A few days ago one of these vessels, drawing about twenty feet of water, lay off the Palace of the Doges, a point of attraction for admiring crowds who had never before seen a vessel of the Tonah's size enter the canals of Venice. Such a phenomenon has only been made possible by extensive dredging; but it is to be hoped that Venice may in due time offer a commodious harbour for vessels of the same class. The attractions of a route through the most renowned of Italian cities will no doubt tempt many old Indians, with spare time on their hands, to take Venice on their homeward way, with the choice of continuing their journey by one of several inviting roads to England.

CASUALTIES BY DEATH IN THE INDIAN SERVICES, &c., REPORTED SINCE LAST PUBLICATION.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

MONDAY, September 2, 1872.

INDIAN SURVEYS IN 1870-71.—I.

IN his abstract of the Survey Reports and other Geographical Proceedings in India for 1870-71, Mr. Clements Markham carries on the good work begun in his "Memoir" and continued systematically in his Abstract for 1869-70, the first of a series of yearly statements which we hope will not soon be let drop. No regular system of marine surveys has yet been finally adopted by the Government; but the importance of the question is everywhere "strongly felt," and meanwhile something has been done for the survey of the Persian Gulf by Mr. Girdlestone, who started in March 1871 in "an old sailing-schooner of 180 tons, with no good boats, no steam launch, and an insufficient staff of officers." He was more than three months in doing what with a steamer he could have done far more cheaply in five weeks. In spite of all hindrances however he completed a careful chart of the large inlet of Khour Raps, between Jask and Charbar, on the Mekran Coast, besides other useful work. Driven home by ill health, he returned in the autumn to Bombay; but soon returned to his regular duties under Colonel Thuillier, in disgust at the rejection of his demands for a better equipment. Mr. Chapman however took command of the schooner, and has since been doing his best to survey the Bahrein reefs. During Mr. Girdlestone's absence he had already taken a set of soundings in the Gulf of Oman, with the bearings of well-known points on shore.

The completion of the survey of the Persian Gulf and the publication of large-scale charts are urgently needed, and so is some improvement in the spelling of Arabic names. Mr. Badger's system of spelling is generally deemed the best, and two good authorities, Sir Arnold Kemball and Captain Felix Jones, strongly urge the need of printing one set of charts in the Arabic character for the use of native sailors in those seas. The latter also recommends the printing of one set of charts both in English and Arabic. Judiciously placed, the double set of names would never lead to indistinctness or confusion. Mr. Parkes, Consulting Engineer for Kurrachee Harbour, examined the ports at the head of the Persian Gulf last autumn, with a view to test the possibility of finding a harbour fit to accommodate large steamers in connection with the Euphrates Valley Railway. The choice lay between Basrah, Core Abdalla, and Koweit; but the absence of a systematic survey prevented him from speaking confidently with regard to Core Abdalla. The need for extending such a survey to all parts of the Indian Coast appears to be very great.

The coast of Orissa was surveyed in 1868 and the two following years by Mr. Harris, who has had long experience in surveying the rivers of Bengal. Of the nine charts prepared from his survey, only that for False Point was reserved for publication by the Admiralty Hydrographer. In September 1870 Mr. George Robertson, C.E., began his inquiries into the condition of some of the harbours on the Indian coast, and his Report contains descriptions of the anchorages at Aden and various places on the Malabar and Coromandel coasts, with suggestions for improving some of them. Captain A. D. Taylor's Report on the proposed ship-canal between Ceylon and India has also been published. All these surveys have been undertaken by the local governments from time to time, "without any combined plan, with inadequate means, and with a view merely to satisfying local wants." Good reasons have also been urged by the Asiatic Society of Bengal for a system of deep-sea dredging in the interests of science and navigation. The same society has urged the need of systematic observations with regard to the temperature of water in the Indian seas, the various currents, and the physical character of the sea-bottom. Its proposals have been cordially accepted by the Government, and pending the settlement of certain questions therewith connected, a sum of £200 has been granted for the purchase of necessary appliances.

During the year under review six series of the Great Trigonometrical Survey have been carried forward. The Brahmaputra Meridian Series was continued by Mr. Beverley, whose labours issued in a junction with the Assam Longitudinal Series. Mr. W. C. Rossenrode carried on the Assam Eastern Frontier Series under very great difficulties. The plains are covered as far as the eye can reach with grass twelve feet high; dense forests clothe the hills, and the rivers are lined with belts of trees. From January to April the smoke of the burning grass hangs over the valleys like a pall, lit up at night by the flames that feed the smoke. To work in such an atmosphere over ground so difficult was no easy task, and the neighbourhood of countless tigers and wild elephants added heavily to the dangers and discomforts endured by the surveying party. In spite of these drawbacks, and of the fever from which everyone suffered, the progress made was very creditable to all concerned.

On the death of Mr. Shelverton, the Bidar Longitudinal Series was carried on by Mr. H. Beverley over a total distance of 181 miles. The Biláspur Series, under Mr. H. Keelan, was extended 52 miles through one of the wildest parts of India, while Lieutenant Rogers and Major Branfill between them advanced the Bangalor Meridian Series 227 miles. The southern section was taken across the Palni Hills, and the heights were measured of several peaks from 5,000 to 7,550 feet above the sea, which are not even indicated on existing maps.

Under the Superintendent of the Trigonometrical Survey topographical surveys were carried on in Gujrat, Katiwar, and the Kosi Valley. The Gujrat party under Lieutenant M'Culloch, who succeeded the late Lieut.-Colonel Nasmyth, surveyed and mapped an area of 534 square miles. In the course of their labours they came on many signs of recent encroachment by the sea. The Katiwar Survey made good progress under Lieut. Trotter through a country part of which is populous and fertile, while other parts are haunted by lions; Katiwar being one of the few places in India where lions are still found. Lieutenant Hill's survey of the Kosi Valley has helped to decide the question of a railway up the valley. The slope of the valley appears to be well within the mean gradient of a railway, but the valley itself is bounded by high mountains, and the gorges through which the river winds are very narrow. Latitude observations under the meridians of 78 deg. and 75 deg. were carried on respectively by Captain Herschel and Lieutenant Trotter. The Russian and Indian surveys correspond with each other through the employment of common terms aided by an interchange of instruments. Cape Comorin is already connected with two stations north of Changchemmo, and if the Russians bring their surveys to their outposts on the Tian Shan, the two surveys will be parted only by 400 miles of practicable country.

In September 1871 Colonel Walker ascertained the longitude of Teheran by telegraph from England through the line of the Indo-European Company. Signals were sent from London by Colonel Walker and from Teheran by Major St. John. In spite of the great length of the line, 3,870 miles, and of other drawbacks, the entire retardation of the electric current was found to average less than half a second. When the needful instruments arrive in India, it will not be difficult to determine accurately the different longitudes of the Greenwich and Madras Observatories, as well as the stations on the arcs of parallel of the Indian Survey.

A gap in the Staff of the Great Survey was caused by the untimely death of Captain Basevi, who had left Dehra towards the end of March 1871 to complete his pendulum observations in Ladák and Thibet. After spending six days and nights in work on a tableland 15,000 to 20,000 feet above the sea, he got wet through in a snowstorm near the Pangong Lake. Overwork and exposure brought on a bad cough, while he lay under a thin canvas tent on a plain 17,000 feet above the sea. On the 17th July he died in the midst of brave efforts to get up and resume his work. The Indian Government, the India Office, and the Royal Geographical Society all came forward with regretful tributes to his great worth.

Mr. Lane pursued his levelling operations for 308 miles from Gorakhpúr to Barbhanga. Mr. Hennessey completed the "Reduction of the N.W. Quadrilateral," in accordance with Colonel Walker's plans. This process includes the greater part of Upper and Western India, and forms an important step towards the second volume of the "History of the Great Survey," the first volume of which was brought out last year. In a letter of thanks to Colonel Walker, the Duke of Argyll expressed himself as deeply struck with the amount of labour and concentrated thought bestowed on "this first volume of a great work which, as a record of accurate geodetical measurement and of arduous services well performed, will yield to none that has hitherto been published by any European nation, either in interest or in scientific importance."

OUR MILITARY STRENGTH IN INDIA.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

"Before three weeks were over, the Punjab stations had been so denuded of troops that the officer commanding at Meerut could with difficulty supply a guard of twenty-four bayonets for the Lieutenant-Governor."—"Our Indian Mussulmans," by W. W. Hunter, LL.D., page 31.

SIR,—It is now generally admitted that railroads are essential for developing our military strength in India. A retrospect of fifteen years shows what a melancholy figure we cut when we attempt war without the assistance of the rail.

In 1857, when the lives of the wives and children of Englishmen were at stake at Cawnpore, ten miserable carriages, with ten more miserable ponies at each stage, dragged fifty soldiers daily towards the scene of war. In 1863, in the Umbeyla Pass Campaign, we could not muster more than nine thousand regular troops to save us from defeat and disgrace, notwithstanding that we had so denuded the Punjab of soldiers as to leave the inhabitants almost defenceless, and the Lieutenant-Governor with only twenty-four bayonets! We were then fighting, not against a great Power, but against undisciplined mountain tribes, who for weeks kept us at bay, and nearly checkmated us; for the Government actually contemplated a retreat, as can be learnt from the official account, published by Dr. Hunter. When Major James had effected by diplomacy what our arms had failed to enforce, the Boneir chief, after kindly escorting some of our soldiers to burn down Mulka, threatened the surrounding mountaineers with the vengeance of Boneirees if they did not submit. The vengeance of the British Army was not taken into account, as it had been foiled for so many weeks by these intrepid descendants of Osiris.

That humiliating Umbeyla Pass campaign would be invaluable to us if we would only profit by the lesson it teaches.

It teaches us two facts—1st. That to secure our power in India we must have good railroads to convey our soldiers, our war materiel, and commissariat stores; we require two railways from Attock to Mooltan as well as to Lahore, so as to be able to communicate with Peshawur in the event of our Sikh subjects failing to guard effectually the Lahore-Peshawur line.

2ndly. We must have a Militia recruited on the responsibility of the land-owners, to defend our loyal subjects at times when we may find it necessary to denude of troops our rich and disarmed provinces.

Let us take a lesson from the Russians who are displaying their wisdom in constructing railways to all strategical points. A Russian gentleman the other day at the British Association in Brighton seriously proposed the construction of a railway from Saratov on the Volga to Peshawur!!

Our Governors are too fond of their bureaucratic capitals, and over estimate their importance. The Governor of the Punjab doubtless thinks that his chief object should be to connect Lahore with the sea at Calcutta and Kurrachee. Now it can easily be proved that Lahore is a place of but little worth. Umritsar far surpasses it as a manufacturing town; for commercial purposes Mooltan is a much more eligible site; Delhi is of greater political consequence, and Attock in a strategical point of view; but because a direct railway from Mooltan to Attock would not run through the Governor's capital, this inestimable line of communication for soldiers and merchants is pooh-poohed.—Your obedient servant, T.

CANTONMENT RULES.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—From your issue of the 21st inst. I find under the heading "Rather Harsh" that cantonment rules have been enforced at Bolarum, with, as it appears to me, much unnecessary severity. Being myself well acquainted with the subject, and at the same time desirous of putting the Home authorities in full possession of certain facts relating thereto, I trust I may be allowed an opportunity of so doing through the medium of your valuable columns.

It appears, then, that should any person, be he a European or a native, living within the cantonment boundaries, give the least offence to the commandant of the troops there stationed, he is, instantly, compelled to leave his dwelling; his goods and furniture being thrown after him into the street. The pretext usually assigned for so tyrannical an act is that the house was required for a certain officer, who in case of alarm would not be able to join his corps, as he was then residing at a considerable distance from it.

Now, the commanding officer being invested with this arbitrary discretionary power, exercises it in a manner as unjustifiable as it is unfeeling.

I know it as a fact, that a shopkeeper having sued an officer for debt, a plan was at once concocted in the mess-room for ejecting him from his house, a committee being formed to fix the rent to be paid by the next occupant.

Again, a European merchant having declined to accept the price offered for his carriage by a commanding officer, this gallant son of Mars incontinently ordered him to quit his house within a specified time, or otherwise forcible possession would be had recourse to. As the party was aware of the utter inutility of resistance, he obeyed, but immediately laid a complaint before the Commander-in-Chief, and after suffering much anxiety and inconvenience he was reinstated in his house, as soon as its temporary occupant could find a suitable bungalow. Subsequently, however, he was subjected to so many spiteful annoyances as to be compelled to sell his house and move elsewhere.

The natural consequence of such proceedings is that no respectable European civilian or native gentleman now ventures to reside within the cantonment line. It is well known that officers generally reside at several miles distance from their own regiments, nor is it ever heard that any one of them has been ordered to hire a bungalow in its immediate vicinity, or that officers of different regiments who chum with those of the cavalry or artillery, are compelled to remove to the neighbourhood of their corps.

These facts, Sir, fully suffice to expose the shallowness of the pretext by which it is hoped to justify such tyrannical proceedings.

It remains for his Grace the Duke of Argyll to cause a searching inquiry to be made as to the correctness of my statement; and should its truth be, as it will be, established, to deprive commanding officers in India of the power of riding rough shod over those whom it is one of their special duties to protect.—Your obedient servant,

Aug. 29.

COFFEE-PLANTING IN INDIA.

The Madras Times remarks that the wretched fate of numbers of estates in Coorg and Wynaad has been the chief means of deterring enterprise in the coffee line in South India. Fever, borer, drought, lack of labour, wind, lack of proper Government support and co-operation, and many such like drawbacks, have, it is true, exercised a deleterious effect upon coffee cultivation in India. It is also true that in Ceylon there are rare advantages held out to the coffee planting community. But if it be remembered that India is a vast continent, and Ceylon but a small island, and that Coorg and Wynaad are but small portions of India or even of this Presidency, it will be seen that comparative failure in such localities in India, and success in so small an island as Ceylon, leaves the question as yet undecided as to which is on the whole, and in the long run, the finest field for coffee. We are perfectly well aware that as yet Ceylon has proved itself the best, but on the other hand we cannot help noticing that the island is wearing itself out. Old plantations are being constantly abandoned, or sold for trifling sums, or kept on at an expense of manuring which nearly equals the profits. New plantations, on the other hand, are being opened up—but opened up in districts at enormous distances from the sea, and at enormous cost, seeing that land and coolie labour are becoming every year dearer in Ceylon. Now turn to India as a whole. It is true it has been the scene of local failures, but look what land yet remains—even to be explored. The price of land is yet nominal. The coolie supply is inexhaustible. Evidences have not been lacking to show that certain single estates in India can vie with good Ceylon ones. The area influenced by the coffee-planting enterprise is extending in India. It is of virgin forest land that we hear of some being cleared by the Government, or of estates forty years old. And when we read of new Indian coffee-plantations being opened up, we do not hear of tens of thousands of rupees being spent on handy-roads, seeing that most of such plantations are not far from localities already populated by Europeans, or can temporarily dispense with other than mere inexpensive bridled-paths. To those young Europeans who come out to India, have a small capital in hand, and don't know what to do with themselves, we should advise them rather to embark in coffee in India than coffee in Ceylon. Of course there is one difficulty at first sight. Their own ignorance of coffee-planting will be anyhow seriously in the way, and they will have to pay for learning the profession ere they can set up on their own account. But suppose this has been somehow overcome, then we should say planting in India is in many ways much more preferable than planting in Ceylon. It is certainly cheaper. Only men with more than a lakh of rupees have any chance in Ceylon. Beginners will, if comparatively poor, be overborne by the great wealth of the coffee interest in that island. In India it is different. A man with ten thousand rupees, judiciously aiding himself by means of moderate loans from time to time, may double that property easily in seven or eight years, and afterwards get a very handsome per centage for his money, even supposing he employs a superintendent. Of course a great deal depends on the locality he primarily selects. If he goes to districts plagued by borer or wind, or chooses an elevation lower than three thousand feet above sea-level, he must of course take the consequences. But with common precautions a beginner need not, as some who have failed in coffee speculations would have us believe he is certain to do, throw away his money to the four winds recklessly, and without adequate return.

THE UNEMPLOYED OFFICERS.

The Times of India remarks that significantly enough, just as Parliament closes, comes the Secretary of State's telegram regarding unemployed officers. Round by Simla we have the news that confirms our last advices from home on the subject, to wit, that his Grace declines to offer any more inducements to officers to retire; that those who are "of unimpeachable character and sound health"—mark those conditions—shall linger on in India until they attain the "substantive" rank of Lieutenant-Colonel; after this stage is reached they shall have the option of "residing out of India on British pay, such time being allowed to count towards retiring pension and Colonel's allowances." These absentees must hold themselves in readiness to return to India if required. Here then is a denial—a denial rather to the tax-payer than to officers themselves, who can still count on the falling in of Sir C. Wood's ruinous acceptances. There is also the concession of unlimited furlough, which, while it will relieve the finances of a few thousand pounds per annum, will afford immerse satisfaction to a few scores of field officers and their families who may happen to be possessed of some little private income. But now comes the penal portion of the India Office's ill-advised and short-sighted "decision," which decides nothing. We will here quote from our telegram again:—"Unemployed officers ineligible from misconduct, or proved mental or physical inefficiency, must send in application within three months to retire upon such pension as they are entitled to under regulations. Failing this, they will be removed to the pension list." This is the news, and these orders are announced as a "final decision." His Grace or his successor will find this a miscalculation. There can be no finality about orders which on one hand obstinately ignore the financial burden which is hereby attempted to saddle on the country, and, on the other, seek to deprive hundreds of faithful servants of the State of their guaranteed and chartered rights. It now remains for those officers, and the tax payers of India, to marshal their respective forces for battle.

MR. F. STEPHEN'S PLAN OF JUDICIAL REFORM.

The Times of India observes that the details of his suggestion may be thus shortly described:—A certain number of the candidates who succeed in the competitive examination, say two or three in each year, should remain in England till they are called to the bar. On their arrival in India they should be appointed to be Deputy Government Advocates and public prosecutors, and should be bound, in consideration of their pay, to take up all Government cases, both civil and criminal. They might also be allowed to take private practice. Their promotion should not necessarily be confined to the judicial line, but they would have the chance of becoming Advocates-General at the presidencies. In time there would be no need at all to send out barrister judges from England to the high courts. On the other hand, lawyers not being civilians should be enabled and encouraged to receive judicial appointments. The objections to such a plan are manifold. As far as the proposal is concerned that two or three of the successful candidates in the competitive examination should be called to the bar before they come out, there is in reality no novelty. As a fact, there are now in every year's batch one or two men, who come out with the privilege of writing "barristers-at-law" after their names. They are not necessarily candidates for judicial employment. They have probably been told at home that it is a good thing "to eat one's dinners," and they think that if they do enter the judicial branch the title will stand them in good stead. When, however, they land in India, they are not kept at the presidency towns and made "Deputy Government Advocates," but they are sent into the mofussil, in order that they may learn the language, understand the people, and see something of the way in which the country is governed. Mr. Stephen does not propose that the barrister civilian should wait at home till he has had some experience and practice. That would be to defer his arrival in this country to an indefinite period. Of what possible use then to Government would such a young barrister civilian be as a "Deputy Government Advocate" at the presidency town? None: and he would be of still less use as a Government prosecutor in the mofussil. He would be ignorant of the language, the provincial regulations, and the customs of the country. Even supposing he got private practice in the presidency town, that would only fit him in time to become Advocate-General at the same place. What possible fitness could he have either for executive or judicial appointments in the mofussil? Mr. Stephen simply ignores the fact that knowledge of the language and country is a sine qua non to the mofussil officer, whether he be judge, collector, or magistrate; and that this knowledge is not obtainable in the presidency town. It is surely unnecessary to demonstrate this fact, which ought to be self-evident, though the legal member of the Supreme Court manages to get on without such special experience. On this point we may refer as an authority to Colonel Chesney, who, though himself in all his career an office man, shows that an essential condition of qualification for an Indian District Judge must be a knowledge of the language of the suitors. It is equally clear that an acquaintance with the customs and usages of the people and the tenures of land is necessary. These essential conditions will always stand in the way of the second portion of Mr. Stephen's plan being carried out. If there were a mofussil bar worthy of the name, at which an English barrister would find it worth while to practice, then the case would be different. But this will not come to pass for many years, if at all; for it is contended, and with great truth, that the fees in a District Court would never be remunerative enough to tempt an English lawyer to settle down in the districts and learn the language and customs of the country. In advocating the encouragement of civilians to be lawyers, Mr. Stephen points to the fact that the Government has in its hand a vast amount of legal patronage, for which it has to pay a very large rate of expense. He says:—It has a vast amount of legal business of all sorts, both criminal and civil cases, and educational work in the shape of Professorships at the Universities, and it has to retain the services of Advocates-General, Government-Advocates, and private barristers on all sorts of occasions. Mr. Stephen would utilise the civilians for this purpose. We agree with him fully in this suggestion. We have shown that young civilians do sometimes come out as "barristers-at-law," and no doubt a hint at home from the Civil Service Commissioners would provide holders of that title in abundance. But we would not keep them in the presidency towns as Deputy Government Advocates, nor would we send them into the mofussil to be public prosecutors, for which post they would be then incompetent. Let them learn the language and customs of the country as Assistant Collectors; they could have no better training, and then let them, after a certain period, have the chance of entering the judicial line, in which should be included the chances of those legal prizes which Mr. Stephen mentions.

TRIAL OF LIAKAT ALI.

For the defence the prisoner's counsel called "Amy Bennet," 33 years of age, residing with her father, Captain Horne, in Calcutta. Witness said that she was in Cawnpore in May, 1857, having gone there for safety from Lucknow. She was taken from a boat and carried before Liakat Ali, who resembled the prisoner, but he was not then grey. He asked her if she would become a Mahomedan or forfeit her life, and she said that she was willing to die, upon which he ordered her to be taken away and fed. She did not think that the Moulvie intended to take her life. Afterwards, when the news came that the British had recaptured Delhi, witness was taken to Futteh-gurh, and was to have been blown from a gun, but her life was saved by a sowar who took her away at night. She did not think he could have done so without some higher authority. In reply to the Government Advocate, witness stated that when she was captured, and taken away, the boats were being fired on, and that her stepfather, her mother, and five brothers and sisters, the eldest of the children only ten years old, were in the boats at the time. In escaping, witness rode a saddle horse like a gentleman, because if she had ridden like a lady she would have been detected. The sowar took her to Lucknow. The Residency was at that time besieged by the rebels. She lived in the city "by herself" in a native house—"the sowar alone being there." She remained there several months, and afterwards, when the Residency was relieved, went away with the sowar to a village named Goothea, near Allahabad, on the north of the Ganges, where the sowar had a house. There were several native women there, but witness did not know whether they were of the sowar's family or not. At length the man gave her liberty, ten months after the massacre, and sent her to Allahabad, to her uncle, Mr. Flowest. Witness "did not," she said, "bother her head" about the sowar's place of residence. "She had no inclination to reward him, and did not feel inclined to make him any return for the kindness he had shown her."

On the Court resuming, two depositions, taken before the magistrate of the Twenty-four Pergunnahs, were read out, and medical certificates of the inability of witnesses to attend the court were put in. The first deposition was by Mrs. Sabina White, the wife of a commissariat conductor in Calcutta, and daughter of the conductor (Coleman) who had charge of the boats with stores from Calcutta to Delhi at the time of the capture. Mrs. White stated that she remembered well the 8th of June, 1857, when her father, mother, herself, and several sisters were taken from the boats by order of the Moulvie Liakat Ali. They were conveyed by a "very circuitous road," through Allahabad, and afterwards to Khoeldabad Serale, to the presence of Liakat Ali, who spoke kindly to witness's mother, and asked the cause of some blood on Mr. Coleman, who had been wounded seriously on the way, in pure wantonness it would seem. On being informed of the fact the Moulvie ordered the darogah who had inflicted the wounds to have his hands cut off, and afterwards to be hanged, which sentence was inflicted immediately. The Moulvie's conduct, the witness said, was not rough, nor in the least abusive. The prisoners were put in a room nearly filled with linseed, and were regularly fed till the 18th of June (ten days after capture), when the building was deserted by the rebels, and the Colemans and some others, being left to themselves, made their way to the English fort, three or four miles distant. In the meantime, among other prisoners brought in to the Serale, were Ensign Cheek, badly wounded, a native Christian missionary and his wife, and two women—a Miss Crump and a Mrs. de Castro. When the prisoners left the Serale for the fort Mrs. de Castro parted company with them, and Miss Crump went away afterwards before they arrived at the fort. Ensign Cheek had been refused food, and died about four hours after his arrival at the fort. The missionary had been severely beaten, and the woman de Castro had been compelled to do sweeper's work, very disgraceful in India; but no proof was given that anything of this was by order of the Moulvie. Another sister of the witness gave like evidence.

STATION TALK.

SIMLA July 25.—"While we seek mirth and beauty, and pleasures light and gay," our excellent Viceroy would appear to meditate a journey in camp to Yarkhund and other strange regions in the direction of the North Pole. At least a portion of his baggage was sent in advance yesterday. The Kooka intelligence of to-day may cause a change in the proposed arrangements. We learn that serious uneasiness is felt regarding an intended outbreak near Amritsur, or between that holy place and Hushiarapore, and the authorities are "on the alert." We are always "on the alert" at Simla, and take much greater care of his Excellency than his Excellency altogether seems to like. Every suspicious, square shouldered, murderous-looking ruffian is unceremoniously collared and questioned as to his birthplace and ancestry. He is peremptorily bundled off to his birthplace with a caution that in the event of his returning to Simla he will run a remarkably near risk of being consigned to his ancestry. India cannot afford another victim to the epidemic of assassination. Not only is our deputy monarch carefully guarded, but every man of mark is well looked after by a quiet cordon of bobbies, whose business it is to spot any conspicuously unpromising specimens of Arvan brotherhood, especially men with petitions in one hand and the other hand seeking the folds of a grimy kummerbund. These gentlemen might well spare themselves the expense of a visit to Capua.—Pioneer Correspondent.

JOODHPORE, July 21.—His Highness the Maharaja, and Major Impey, our Political Agent, with Dr. Hendley, came here two or three days ago from Aboo. His Highness leaves the city to day and encamps outside its walls, where all the necessary arrangements for the siege of Nagpore will be made. I understand his eldest son and brothers accompany him. How Nagore will act I cannot say, but I am informed that the Maharaj Konwur Zorawur Singjee is ready to withstand the forces of his Highness, and I am afraid without bombshells nothing will be done. Major Impey held a durbar yesterday morning, and reminded the Sirdars and subjects of his Highness of their loyalty, and told them that if they joined the standard of rebellion they would forfeit all their privileges, houses, cattle and lands, and be also under the displeasure of the British Government. I was not present at the durbar, but what I have given you is from a friend who was there. I understand Maharaj Konwur Zorawur Singh's action in this matter has arisen from a desire to be the acknowledged heir of the Marwar guddee. He does not claim it by primogeniture, but according to the customs ruling in Rajpootana; but as this is a matter for the Government to determine upon the advice of its Political officials, I will not enter minutely into the affair.—Pioneer Correspondent.

GWALIOR, July 31.—The event of the week is the formation of a small camp of exercise of Maharaja Scindia's troops at Nyogaw, a convenient plain situated at a distance of about nine miles from the capital on Agra and Bombay roads. All of the adjacent districts' troops have been invited for the occasion by the Maharajah Scindia; however, it has been distributed into three columns, one under the immediate command of Scindia; the second under his Highness's General, Bappoo Awar; and the third under the Dewan, with those of the State Sirdars. But I am told that sham fight, which is corrupted here into the name of birgutte, is not commenced yet; but it appears that the assault of arms will make its first appearance tomorrow, i.e., Bappoo Awar, with the Dewan, will make their attacks on his Highness's Kotee or palace. At Cumpoo, however, his Highness entered the capital very suddenly to make the defence. Scindia seems a tactician, as well as his officers of the troops, who are manoeuvred with a commendable precision, moving the cavalry and infantry in single ranks. The camp of exercise is not on a magnificent scale, as was proposed. Our local gentry will witness the military tamasha on Thursday or Friday. We have heavy showers of rain throughout the capital; in some of the districts the cultivators are deprived of sowing their seeds.—Times of India Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

THE KUKAS IN THE PUNJAB.—The Pioneer says:—"We find that there is no truth in the statement that the Kukas are giving trouble between Umritsur and Hushiarapore. The sect has everywhere been perfectly quiet of late. We fear our 'own' Simla correspondent has had much to do with the propagation of the false report." This is just what we expected.

CHOLERA IN THE HILL-STATIONS.—Up to Tuesday there had been sixteen deaths from cholera at Kussowlie, and three men, one woman, and three children were still under treatment. A portion of the depot has been removed into camp on the Subathoo road. We regret to hear that cholera has appeared at Dugshai also.—Times of India, August 9.

RHEA FIBRE.—A long time has elapsed since anything has been heard about the trial of the machines for separating the Rhea fibre. When Lord Northbrook was on his way to Simla a machine was exhibited to his lordship that did its work in a completely satisfactory manner; and it is surprising that nothing has been done since in a matter which is of great importance to a large number of planters in all parts of India. They would be extremely glad to know when it is likely to be decided which is the machine best adapted to the purpose of separating the fibre, and the successful inventor would doubtless be equally anxious to know when the prize of £5,000 will be awarded.—Times of India.

RETIRING OFFICERS OF ARTILLERY.—The following appears as a special telegram to the Pioneer:—"Artillery officers retiring on the extra annuity will receive the equivalent of their full pay and allowances until their retirements are officially notified."

THE EXTRA ANNUITY OF THE ROYAL ARTILLERY.—A special telegram received by the Times of India from Simla informs us that the Secretary of State has telegraphed that the following officers of Artillery are permitted to retire on extra annuity:—Bengal—Maxwell, Lewis, Bouchier, Voyle, Fooks, Cookeworthy, Debn, Hunter, Rybot, Delane, Simeon, Presant, Gillespie, and Butt; Madras—Barrow, Quinn, Nutball, Molesworth, Grant, Merton, Dangerfield, and Lawson; Bombay—Conybeare, Hexton, Mellersh, Beamish, Stevenson, Hardy, Twiss, and Sheppee.

MARRIED SOLDIERS.—The Commander-in-Chief in India being of opinion that the same qualifications which render soldiers at home and in the colonies eligible to have their names placed on the married roll should be required from those serving in India, his Excellency has directed that in future trumpeters, drummers, and rank and file shall not be permitted to marry until they have completed seven years' service, and are in possession of at least the good conduct badge. No non-commissioned officer or soldier will be placed on the married roll or be entitled to any of its advantages unless he had obtained the consent of the Commanding Officer to his marriage before it took place.

THE BETHUNE SCHOOL.—Recently the Government of India reduced its grant to the Bethune School from 900 to 500 rupees a month. This, however, included a grant to the Bethune Female Normal School, which has been abolished, so that the absolute reduction was only from Rs. 617-8-0 per month to Rs. 500. Still, this reduction would very seriously impair the value of the Bethune School and an appeal has been made, by Kali Krishna, Rajah Bahadur, for native help to maintain this excellent school in its present efficiency. The Lieutenant Governor of Bengal has promised Rs. 200 a month provided other 200 can be raised from Native gentlemen in Calcutta. This we think is perfectly fair and right, and there ought to be no difficulty whatever in raising the money. The following contributions have already been received, and we hope they will be the seed of many more:—His Highness the Maharajah of Pudukota, Rs. 500, Maharajah Surnomoyee of Berhampore, Rs. 1,000 (by Mr. H. Woodrow). Rai Mahima Ranjan Chowdhry of Kakania in Rungpore, Rs. 1,000, and Baboo Poolinbehari Sein of Berhampore, Rs. 25.—Friend of India.

THE REBELLION OF JOODHPORE'S SON.—His Highness the Maharaja, and Major Impey, our Political Agent, with Dr. Hendley, came here two or three days ago from Aboo. His Highness leaves the city to-day and encamps outside its walls, where all the necessary arrangements for the siege of Nagpore will be made. I understand his eldest son and brothers accompany him. How Nagore will act I cannot say, but I am informed that the Maharaj Konwur Zorawur Singjee is ready to withstand the forces of his Highness, and I am afraid without bombshells nothing will be done. Major Impey held a durbar yesterday morning, and reminded the Sirdars and subjects of his Highness of their loyalty, and told them that if they joined the standard of rebellion they would forfeit all their privileges, houses, cattle, and lands, and be also under the displeasure of the British Government. I was not present at the durbar, but what I have given you is from a friend who was there. I understand Maharaj Konwur Zorawur Singh's action in this matter has arisen from a desire to be the acknowledged heir of the Marwar guddee. He does not claim it by primogeniture, but according to the customs ruling in Rajpootana; but as this is a matter for the Government to determine upon the advice of its political officials, I will not enter minutely into the affair.—Jodhpore Correspondent of Pioneer, July 28.

AFGHANISTAN.—The official budget of Cabul news, from June 28 to July 4, does not contain many items of interest. Nowraz Khan has succeeded his father as chief of Lallpura, and received a khilut from the Ameer. Sirdar Mahomed Ibrahim Khan, eldest son of his Highness and Governor of the province of Cabul, was down with fever, and the Ameer had paid him a visit to inquire after his health. Of the three prisoners sent from Turkistan on criminal charges—General Baba Meer Khan, Colonel Nijrab Khan, and Colonel Madad Khan—General Baba Meer Khan has been admitted to bail and fined Rs. 5,000; and to obtain the release of Colonel Nijrab Khan his brother has gone to Warlak to bring Rs. 3,000 imposed on him as fine. The Turkistan tribes interceded with the Ameer on behalf of General Baba Meer Khan, and for Colonel Nijrab Khan his brother became his security. Nothing has yet been decided about Colonel Madad Khan. The new Chief of Budukshan had expressed a wish to chastise the Chief of Chitral for refusing to pay tribute; but Sultan Moorad Khan, Governor of Khoondez, has been prohibited by his superior, Naib Mahomed Alum Khan, the Governor of Turkistan, from waging war. But the trusty Naib appears to have had an object in doing this. He lately sent an agent to the Meer of Budukshan to receive "presents" on his own account of the value of Rs. 15,000, and he probably feared that in case of war the Meer's treasury might be soon drained. The two Candaharee regiments which sided with Yakoub Khan during the late rebellion have been absorbed in different regiments, and their pay is held in abeyance. They are said by the news-writer to be much disliked by the other infantry regiments. The only remaining item is that owing to the illness of Mustowfee Audeebullah Khan, the Accountant General, cheques for the grant of allowances have not been issued this year. Consequently, "the beneficiaries and other allowance-holders are much annoyed," as, indeed, they have every right to be.

EXPORTS.—CALCUTTA, Aug. 6.—Jute has taken an advance of three annas. Saltetre: The market has again declined, and there has been but little business done. Rice: Fallun has declined about two annas; some second quality Setta has been shipped for England, at from 3-2 to 3-5. Linseed: The market has a downward tendency, though a fair business has been done. Raw Silk: The produce of the rainy bund is beginning to arrive. 115 bales of native Commercally, March bund, have changed hands, at from 14-0 to 16-12.

Madras.

SOMETHING LIKE A DIVIDEND.—The Madras Brunton Press Company (Limited) have declared a dividend at the rate of 28 per cent. per annum for the past half year, making, with the ad interim dividend paid in January last (of 12 per cent. per annum), a total of 20 per cent. for the year ending June 30, 1872.

AN ANNUAL PRIZE.—Certain members of the native community of Madras are taking steps to establish a prize in the Presidency College, in honour of Mr. A. J. Arbuthnot, who proceeds to Europe next October on the expiry of his period of service. The prize will be awarded annually for the best composition in English on a given subject, the essay to be written in the examination room by students in the higher departments of the Presidency College.

MURDER BY A SEROY.—Bellary has been the scene of a terrible tragedy. A havildar of the 16th N.I. deliberately fired at the Subadar Major of the regiment, but missing fire, he clubbed his musket and felled the Subadar to the ground with it. Before he could be seized he fired again at the Havildar of the Quarter Guard, but the latter jumping aside the ball struck the sentry, who died a little time after.

THE FORGED BANK NOTES.—Captain Weldon, the Royapettah Police Magistrate, has been deputed by Government to enquire into the forgery of the bank notes. He is to visit any part of India for the purpose, except the Bombay Presidency. During his absence Captain Lys will preside at the Royapetta Police Court.

SANITARY.—The weather has not improved much during the past week. We have had several showers, but not enough to cool the atmosphere, which is very close at times. What we want is a good downpour, and till we have that we need not expect any great change in the weather. The dengue is still on the increase. It has visited every part of the place, and has laid up a great number of people. In some offices nearly every man has had it. It is spreading in every part of the Presidency. Some cases have terminated in typhoid fever and proved fatal. In Burmah not only has it attacked man but it has also attacked the lower animals, and especially the dogs. There is a good deal of cholera in some parts of India, especially in Lahore.—Madras Times, Aug. 7.

THE MADRAS BREAKWATER.—There is a probability, we learn, of early measures being taken towards the construction of a breakwater in our roadstead. The disasters which took place during the cyclone of the 1st of May have forced the matter on the attention of the local Government, by whom the Government of India has lately been addressed on the subject. The sum of £140,000 sterling is required to be placed at once at the disposal of the local Government for the purpose of providing steam-tugs, barges, and other necessary appliances for commencing the work, and sanction for the allotment of that sum has been asked for. The total cost of the breakwater is estimated at about £1,300,000 sterling, and its construction, it is thought, will take about six years.—Madras Athenaeum.

THE CIRCUMLOCUTION DEPARTMENT AGAIN.—The following (says the Madras Times) will give a slight idea of the rule of red tape in this Presidency. A short time ago the colonel of a regiment that was on the point of marching from one station to another, wrote to the Quartermaster-General, Madras, to send a chest of arms to the new station. But cholera having broken out in the regiment, it did not march, and the colonel sent a telegram to say that the chest of arms was not required. This telegram was received just half an hour before the train was to start, so that the Quartermaster-General sent a serjeant to the station to bring back the chest, and as the time was short the man was ordered to go in a carriage, the charge for which was one rupee. The serjeant went to the station and brought back the chest safe and sound, but then a great difficulty arose as to how the carriage hire was to be paid. The Quartermaster-General could not pay it, so he sent the bill to the pay office. This office said that, according to the prescribed regulations, it could not pay, as the carriage did not go five miles from the fort. The bill was sent back to the Quartermaster-General with a long explanation, and he, with one still longer, sent it on to Government, requesting at the same time that he might have a small sum left at his disposal in order to meet such trifling expenses as they arose. The Governor in Council, after considering the matter and calling for a long explanation, came to the conclusion that the rupee might be paid, but that the whole case was to be considered a very exceptional one, and they could not think of allowing the Quartermaster-General a small sum to meet such cases. Thus a man who may have it in his power to spend at one time lakhs of rupees is not allowed at another to spend sixteen annas. We should like to know the value of the paper that was used, besides the printing and other expenses.

THE BANK OF MADRAS.—The Bank of Madras held a meeting on the 5th instant, when the Hon. Mr. Mackenzie took the chair. The chairman said the profits were more this year than the last. With regard to mercantile bills, there had, he said, been a great falling off. The chairman then referred to the large amount taken from the reserved fund, which the Bank was obliged to take on account of the losses that it had sustained, especially at Alleppy, where the people would neither pay nor the Courts give any satisfaction to the Bank. Having alluded to the discontinuance of the Government with the affairs of the Bank, the chairman then moved that the report and affairs of the Bank be considered as satisfactory, and that the report be adopted. Mr. Job Solomon, as usual on such occasions, got up to make a speech. He held that the Board was illegally constituted, and had no right to issue a report. To this the chairman replied that the Advocate General had decided the question; but Mr. Solomon would not give up his point. After this speaker had finished, Mr. J. D. Mayne rose. He said that he could not consider the report to be satisfactory, as the capital had come down to a premium of five per cent., and the dividend had to be paid out of the reserve fund. He then expressed his opinion very freely upon the affairs of the bank, and finished up by complaining that the report was wanting in candour. The Hon. Mr. Rameingar said that he considered the report was not satisfactory, and that he wondered that the bank should ever have thought of establishing some of the branches, as there was no trade in some of the places, and one of them, Alleppy, was in a foreign state, and he proposed that the word "satisfactory" should be omitted from the resolution put by Mr. Mackenzie. This was seconded by Mr. Mayne. After a little discussion, Mr. Mackenzie proposed "that the report and statement of affairs submitted be adopted." This was carried. Mr. A. F. Browne having been elected a director, the meeting broke up.—Madras Times, Aug. 7.

STATION TALK.

SHAHABAD, Aug. 1.—That dire scourge cholera morbus is amongst us, and out of the five or six Europeans resident here, one has been taken away. The wife of Mr. Witts, the locomotive foreman, was seized with it on Sunday morning last. She weathered out the attack, which was not a very violent one, but died on Tuesday afternoon from the subsequent exhaustion and inward inflammation combined. She leaves two young children to the care of her disconsolate husband. The cholera first broke out in this locality twelve or fifteen days ago at Chittapoor, the first station on the Nizam's State Railway. Since that time upwards of 400 people have died—taking railway work-people and village residents together. It has steadily spread to the surrounding villages, and in the case of Shahabad has travelled direct in the teeth of a cool west wind. Within the past six days about twenty villagers and twelve of the railway employes have died. It is not of a very bad type, as fully one-half recover, and it takes some twelve hours from the seizure to the end of fatal cases. An abundant supply of medicine is left in care of the station master for all who like to apply, and yesterday the agent sent a European apothecary, to stay until it makes its disappearance. It has not made its appearance at Kistna or Raichore yet, but in the other direction there have been some few cases at Goolburgah.

BHOSAWUL, Aug. 6.—The new viaduct over the Taptee was tested and formally opened this morning amidst rejoicing customary on occasions of this kind. As to the viaduct itself, it has been described before, but for the benefit of such of your readers as may either not have seen the account or forgotten it, it may be useful if I give you a condensed account of this excellent piece of engineering work. The bridge consists of thirty-three spans of Warren's girders carried by cylinders of boiler plate riveted together in tiers of about six feet in height, each tier formed of eight segments, strengthened by inner and other joint plates, and internal vertical joint strips of strong T section, running from top to bottom: the cylinders so formed being filled with cement concrete to within five feet of their tops, where that depth of ashlar is set, upon which the bed girders are fixed by "holding down" bolts. There are in all 68 of these cylinders disposed in two rows, some of them 80 feet high and of varying diameters, diminishing by offsets from 10 feet at the bottom to 8 feet at the top, one row carrying the up road, and the other intended for the down. This is the first instance, on this side of India, of this method of construction having been adopted, and the extraordinary rapidity with which the bridge has been erected speaks greatly in its favour, where rapidity of execution is essential. The work has been only twelve months in hand, from the time of founding the first cylinder to the lifting of the last girder. This celerity—provided the work issued, of which we entertain no doubt—reflects great credit upon Mr. Gutersloh, the engineer, and on the contractors agent, Mr. T. P. Clarke, who has had charge of these works. Such is the new viaduct over the Taptee, erected by Messrs. Glover and Co., the well known Bombay contractors. This morning at twenty minutes to seven six powerful engines, the front one driven by Mr. J. Fox Bell, Locomotive Superintendent, left the Bhosawul station with several first-class carriages attached, containing officials of the different departments. Amongst those present were Captain Oldham, R.E., Government Inspector of Railways; Mr. Conder, General Traffic Manager; Messrs. Dangerfield, Ward, West, Edwards, Davies, Howden, McGlasham, Collister, and Gutersloh, of the G. I. P. Railway, Engineers' Staff; Mr. Sandford, Civil Engineer; Messrs. Swan, Middleton, Maurice, Dewey, Shaw, and others belonging to the traffic department. Messrs. Geddis and Clarke represented Messrs. Glover and Company, the contractors. Mr. Reid, our new railway magistrate, was also present. A few minutes after seven one engine and tender proceeded over the viaduct at a slow pace, greeted all the way across by a feu de joie of fog signals, and afterwards the whole six engines and two tenders—weighing in all over two hundred tons—proceeded slowly across the viaduct, stopping over the centre of each girder sufficiently long to enable the several engineers stationed on the old viaduct with their levels to test the amount of deflection on each girder and pier. The result was everything that could be wished, and must give great satisfaction to Mr. Clarke, who has had the entire management and supervision of the works, and to Mr. Gutersloh, the Company's Engineer in charge of the viaduct. The greatest deflection on any of the girders was on the large openings or spans—decimal 10 or about an inch and a quarter. On the smaller opening the deflection was 06, or about ¼ of an inch. In every case, on the removal of the weight, the girders resumed their former level, or nearly so. After this all the six engines were run backwards and forwards at the rate of fifteen or sixteen miles an hour, without making any perceptible difference. This concluded the ceremony, and the viaduct was declared open. The company then returned to Bhosawul, where a splendid breakfast was prepared at the station refreshment rooms, to which about forty people sat down and did ample justice.—Times of India Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

JAMSETJEE MEMORIAL FUND.—The subscription to the Rustomjee Jamsetjee Memorial Fund now amounts to nearly Rs. 20,000.

BOMBAY COUNCIL.—We understand that Rao Bahadoor Bechardass Ambaidass, the opulent merchant of Ahmedabad, will be appointed one of the members of Council at the approaching nomination.—Bombay Argus.

THE MAHARAJAH OF NEPAL.—The Samachar learns that the Maharajah of Nepal is to come this year to Nassick with one thousand gossais (monks) and three thousand sowars, for the purpose of rendering homage to the god there.

NASSICK.—The celebrated Godaveri fair will commence on the 13th of September next, and will last thirteen months. This fair is held every twelve years in honour of the god Trimbuck. It is expected that the gathering will be very large this time, owing to the extension of railway.

GRAND HORSE SHOW AT POONA.—Poona is for the first time to be favoured, this season, with the interesting spectacle of a Horse Show, which is to be held on Monday, the 23rd September, and will be kept open for six days. Intending exhibitors are requested to give notice to J. E. Oliphant, Esq., the Honorary Secretary, on or before the 1st proximo. As the Exhibition will take place during the Deccan Monsoon Race Meeting the event will be sure to prove a highly interesting one, and we trust that it may attract many exhibitors of the finest specimens of this noble and useful animal. —Deccan Herald, Aug. 5.

THE LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.—A meeting of the Bombay Legislative Council was held at Poona on July 27, at which the principal business had reference to the Bombay Municipal Bill. Government have conceded greater electoral privileges. The municipal corporation is to consist of sixty-four members, half elected by the ratepayers, sixteen by the bench of justices, and sixteen by the Government. The Town Council will consist of twelve members, of whom eight will be elected by the corporation, and the remaining four, including the chairman, by the Government.

ACCIDENT TO COLONEL PATEY.—Colonel Patey, commanding H.M.'s 56th Regiment, met with a severe accident on July 30, whilst going his rounds as field officer of the day. It appears that the horse shied, and on being pulled up by the rider, stumbled, and in doing so threw the unfortunate gentleman over his head on to the road and fell upon him. The Poona Observer of August 1 says, "There are, we believe, no marks of external violence visible, but up to yesterday evening he has remained almost entirely insensible, showing evidently that some injury is done to the brain or spinal column. He has, we hear, partially recovered his reason, but has on doing so immediately fainted off again. Everything that medical aid can do is being done for him, and no pains are being spared to effect his recovery; but we hear that at present little hopes are entertained of doing so."

NEW THEATRE FOR BOMBAY.—Though not yet fully matured, a scheme is on foot for erecting in Bombay new buildings which will serve for a theatre, masonic hall, concert and lecture rooms, ball rooms, and accommodation, when they may wish it, for the Asiatic and Geographical Societies. In bygone days it was almost impossible to get good theatrical representations in Bombay, there being no demand for them, but of late the theatrical taste has greatly developed. The Bombay Theatre Company, which is being formed, proposes to erect spacious buildings in a centre locality, on improved principles, and after the style of modern European theatres. Among the principal subscribers to it are some of the leading members of the native community, and it is to be hoped that Government will agree to give a site on the Esplanade, as this is the condition upon which about a lac of the funds have been subscribed. There is also a lac of rupees given by the Kattywar chiefs which Government is at liberty to devote to this purpose. It is more than a year since this scheme was first proposed, but lately it has taken more definite shape, and is now being developed with good prospects of success.

THE S.S. "ATALANTA" DISABLED AT SEA.—On the 5th August Messrs. Ewart, Latham and Co. received the following telegram from the P. and O. Company's agent at Galle:—"Captain White, of the S.S. Peslaeur, reports having spoken the S.S. Atalanta on the 31st July in north lat. 8 deg. 38 min., west long. 69 deg. 40 min. The Atalanta was completely disabled. Her screw was revolving on the shaft; the cutter having fallen out on the 24th July, while in north lat. 11 deg. 58 min., long. 68 deg. 10 min. She was unable to steer, and was drifting towards Galle in the track of outward steamers." The Atalanta, Matthews, master, left Bombay for Liverpool, on the 20th July, with a cargo of 7,127 bales cotton, and 1,696 bales wool. She also carried as passengers Messrs. Beynon, Rogers, Sinclair, and Duly. Her cargo comprised the following shipments:—Knoop and Co., 142 bales; N. M. Petty and Co., 1,000 bales; Lyon and Co., 1,350 bales; H. B. Touche and Co., 190 bales; Leggatt and Co., 1,000 bales; D. Sassoon, 46 bales; Campbell and Co., 104 bales; King and Co., 597 bales; R. J. L. King and Co., 295 bales; Finlay Scott and Co., 350 bales; Merwanjee Nusserwanjee, 950 bales; Killick Nixon and Co., 104 bales; and native shippers 2,695 bales.

SIND.—(Official report for the week ending 25th July).—The dengue fever, which prevailed extensively at Gwadur, has entirely disappeared. The disease has not spread elsewhere beyond the coast. Heavy rain has fallen at Kej and in the Dashi, and the Dashi river has overflowed. There will be a very abundant harvest of dates this season; they are not yet ripe. Rain has fallen in Upper and Lower Sind. The quantity registered at Kurrachee up to date is 6 inches 3 cents. The houses in the town and suburbs of Kotri have sustained some injury both from the heavy rain and the floods which came down from the adjacent hills. The Kashmir floods have reached Jacobabad, and breaching one of the canals, entered the family lines of the Rifle Regiment. Great exertions are being made to cause a diversion in the current and to protect property from being further damaged. Nothing worthy of record had been heard from Kholat since last report, excepting that it is stated his Highness the Khan had become very anxious in regard to the way his late proceeding would be viewed by the British Government. Rain has fallen generally in the southern part of Beloochistan, to the great advantage of the people, whose cattle had suffered much from the prolonged drought.—W. L. MEREWETHER, Colonel, Commissioner in Sind.

SOUTHERN INDIA RIFLE ASSOCIATION.—We understand that a friendly contest has been arranged between representatives of the Bengal Presidency and those of Bombay, to be shot at Poonah during the annual rifle meeting in August. The match has arisen from a challenge sent through the secretary of the Northern India Rifle Association, which was at once accepted in a most courteous spirit by the Bombay riflemen. The numbers we understand are to be three (if practicable four) on either side, and the conditions of the match as follows: Seven shots at 200, 400, and 500 yards with Snider or Enfield rifles and Government ammunition; pull of trigger 5½ lbs.; any position. The second stage will be shot with any (match) rifles—7 shots at 600, 800, and 1,000 yards; pull of trigger 3 lbs.; any sights except telescopic and those debarred at Wimbledon. We understand the N.I.R.A. representatives will be H. S. Nicholletts, Esq., the present champion; Dr. Hamilton, R.A., ex-champion; and Captain Hill, of the 2nd Goorkhas, who shot second for the championship in 1869, so that the honour of this presidency is in good hands. A match with the Southern India Rifle Association is also on the tapis, to take place in September, the same conditions being observed, except that the Southern Indians prefer to use Martini-Henri at the longer ranges, claiming points (either seven or nine) for the difference in weapons. Matches such as these tend much to spread the taste for rifle shooting, about the most useful accomplishment the European in India can possess, and while wishing success to our own men, we can only hope the match may be a good one, and the best team may win. The terms of this proposed match are, we observe, much more trying than those for the Elcho Shield, as at Wimbledon there are only three distances, and thirty shots, all with one rifle, while here two rifles are to be used, six distances shot at, and forty-two shots fired in the match, making the test a more severe one in every way.

MILITARY.—102nd Fusiliers.—The advance party left Aldershot on Monday for Parkhurst, where the regiment is to be stationed after the Manœuvres.—104th Fusiliers, under command of Lieut.-Col. W. D. Harris, was inspected on Tuesday on Southsea Common, by Lieut.-Gen. Lord Templetown, commanding at Portsmouth. The men, who have done wonders under a smart young adjutant since their arrival from the East, acquitted themselves admirably.—106th Light Infantry: The depot companies left Dublin on Monday for Newry, where the 1st battalion 20th Regiment, to which they are attached, is to be stationed until further orders.—108th Regiment: The depot companies moved on Tuesday from the Curragh Camp to Dublin, to join the 97th Regiment, which proceeded there last week. Lieut. G. Allen, recently transferred from the Royal Dragoons, has been placed under orders of readiness to embark for India in October, doing duty with a draft of the 2nd battalion 12th Regiment during the voyage. Major Bradford has an extension of leave from India, to remain in England until March 4, 1873.

ARTILLERY OFFICERS' PAY.—It is notified that officers of the British service in India exchanging into or transferred to batteries or regiments proceeding to or under orders for India, and allowed to remain in India until their corps arrive, have no claim to receive any pay or allowances from Indian revenues till such battery or corps is brought on the strength of the Indian establishment. Officers so circumstanced are not to be placed on duty of any kind.

REPRIMAND OF NATIVE MEDICAL STUDENTS.—Frequent complaints having been received of the idleness and inattention of many of the native medical students who, under the provisions of para. 41 of G.G.O. No. 550 of 1868, are attached to the medical schools and colleges for the prescribed course of study, the Right Hon. the Governor General in Council is pleased to authorise the principals of schools and colleges to withhold or to withdraw the increase of pay given after the first year's residence from those medical pupils who, from idleness or other misconduct within their own control, have failed to make due progress in their studies. Each case in which this authority is exercised is to be reported through the Local Government for confirmation by the Government of India in the Military Department.

MEDAL FOR GOOD SHOOTING.—The Right Hon. the C. in C. has directed the publication of the following extract from Horse Guards' letter No. C 4,289, 38 General No. 432 of June 17, transmitting the medal awarded to Private G. Bryant, of the 62nd foot, as the best shot of the Army for the year 1870-71, under clause 62, Army Circulars, 1869:—"H.R.H. sincerely trusts that this mark of the Queen's appreciation of the skill in shooting displayed by Private Bryant, will stimulate other soldiers in their endeavours to attain proficiency in shooting, and although but few can hope to gain the distinguished position occupied by the abovenamed soldier, yet all who earnestly try to do so will have the satisfaction of feeling that they have done their best to render themselves efficient in the use of the rifled musket."

ALLOTMENT OF FURLONGS.

July 15.—The following statement regarding the allotment of furloughs to officers of the Covenanted Civil Service is published for general information :—

Total number of civilians under the orders of the Government of Bengal	241
20 per cent. of this number is	48
Total number of officers absent on furlough or special leave	50

 The undermentioned officers are expected to return from furlough by Nov. 1, 1872, viz.:—Mr. P. D. Dickens, on July 7; Mr. A. Smith, on Aug. 2; Mr. J. J. Livesay, on Aug. 4; Mr. J. Anderson, on Aug. 30; Mr. G. E. Makgill, on Oct. 11; Mr. J. F. Stevens, on Oct. 31; Mr. T. H. H. Shortt, on Nov. 1; Mr. P. Hurley, whose leave expired in May last.

Leaving out the first two to meet the number of absentees in excess of the sanctioned percentage, there will remain only two furloughs available by the end of August next.

The applicants for furlough for the second half of the current year are as follows:—Mr. H. Bell, Mr. D. W. M. Testro, Mr. H. Beverley, Mr. F. W. V. Peterson, and Mr. A. Manson.

The Lieut. gov. is pleased to grant to Mr. Bell six months' leave of absence, on urgent private affairs, under Section 12 of the Civil Leave Code, as a special case.

The return of officers who are immediately due will make room for Mr. Bell in the furlough list; and as it is understood that another officer, Mr. Testro, is about to apply for furlough on medical certificate, having obtained subsidiary leave to appear before the Standing Medical Committee at the Presidency, all the furloughs likely to be vacant till the end of September next will in this manner be absorbed.

Unless, therefore, officers return unexpectedly in excess of those obliged to leave on medical certificate, no more furloughs can be allotted till October next. The furloughs allowed to the following officers cannot be taken at earlier dates than those mentioned against their names, viz.:—

Mr. F. W. V. Peterson, for two years, from Oct. 11 last.
 Mr. H. Beverley, for two years, from Oct. 31.
 Mr. A. Manson, for two years, from Nov. 11.
